Hawthorne Middle School Students Tour Pepperdine

By Dylan Little

Assistant Superintendent of Educational Services Brian Markarian shared the details of Hawthorne Middle School's eighth grade AVID program's trip to Pepperdine University during the June 26 School Board meeting. A core focus of the AVID program is to prepare students for college--and a big part of that mission is to visit college campuses so students can get a preview of university life. While any college tour would be enriching, Markarian said Pepperdine went to great lengths in order to engage and reach out to Hawthorne Middle School students.

"We are happy to get any type of college campus tour we can get," said Markarian. "This campus tour evolved into a lifetime event for these kids--something they will never forget. It started with a tour of the campus. Then one activity was added... then another activity. As a result of Gary Hanson and his staff...we had a day that will be a memory for students for a lifetime."

On the trip, students were immersed in college life. They visited dorms, lecture halls and gyms and took part in science demonstrations and broadcast television production training.

"They were given an opportunity to see multiple classroom settings, athletic facilities... They were given a full lunch--that I think they are still talking about. They had a chance to tour all aspects of the campus," said Markarian. "[They saw] many things that will stick with them when it comes time to make a decision about not if they will apply to college, but where they will apply to college."

After the visit, Markarian gave the students a Google survey to see how the trip affected them. He found that all of them were more likely to apply and attend college after visiting Pepperdine. "We had 100 percent of the students indicate that their visit to Pepperdine's campus increased the likelihood of applying to college," said Markarian. "Obviously it was a great experience for the kids. It was a life-changing experience they participated in."

Board President Eugene Krank was also present on the field trip and compared it to the happiest place on Earth. "It was to me magical," said Krank. "It was like Disneyland."

The students thought the trip was just as magical. A group of them shared a few of their favorite moments from the trip, with the most common highlight being a science demonstration that included explosive reactions.

As pleased as Hawthorne Middle School students were about the trip, Pepperdine Representative Lisa Gin said the university's staff (including the school's administrators who ran some of the demonstrations) were equally happy to help these students get a taste of college life. "It was absolutely our pleasure," said Gin. "We had to come up with these great ideas that would interest middle schoolers. It forced us to look outside the box. We were equally, if not more, inspired by your students. They not only participated, but asked really good questions. I hope this is just the start of a very, very good relationship."

In planning to capture the interest of middle school students, Gin said Pepperdine staff focused on what makes college such a life-changing experience, getting hands-on experience with real world methods. "In college, that's what you do--you get a taste of the real world," said Gin. "We really emphasized that."

The college trip came about after a chance meeting between Board member Luciano Aguilar and Pepperdine Vice President Gary Hanson. Aguilar is a professional dog trainer and met Hanson while dog training, although he said it didn't take long before both of them were talking about education. "We talked about dog training for about 15 minutes--then it turned into talking about the schools," said Aguilar. "Gary said, 'How about we bring some of your students up here, we show them around and we give them a really good time that they will never forget?' We hit the nail on the head. This is something these kids will never ever forget. We don't get the opportunity to do things like this."

Aguilar said he was happy to be able to bring Hawthorne Middle School and Pepperdine University together and help create an experience he believes enriched and impacted the future for these eighth graders. "I was just so happy that I was able to be at the right place at the right time," said Aguilar. "To be able to express how I feel about our students and our school and to give this opportunity to [our students]."

Aguilar was thankful for Pepperdine's generosity and hopes the District and the university can find many ways to work together. "Hopefully...we continue this partnership and continue growing and see what this thing can actually turn into," said Aguilar. "There is no way I could possibly express in words what I feel towards the Pepperdine family allowing us to share this with our students." •

Preventing Heat Illnesses Among Seniors

Courtesy of Ryan Iwamoto, owner and co-founder of 24Hr HomeCare

Last summer was the third hottest summer on record, with temperatures in Los Angeles reaching into the triple digits. This summer won't be much cooler. As temperatures rise in Southern California, seniors are at an increased risk of heat illnesses. Even more troubling, as reported by the Center for Disease Control (CDC), this population has the highest incidence of deaths due to preventable heat illnesses.

and happens when the body loses too much water and salt. Symptoms can include heavy sweating, dizziness, nausea and vomiting. Heat cramps are muscle pains and spasms, usually involving the stomach and legs. These are the result of salt and water loss from heavy sweating.

In addition to knowing the symptoms of heat illnesses, follow these top five tips to help safeguard your loved ones:

• If you know a senior, visit them at least twice a day, and look for signs of

"We all have loved ones who are over the age of 65. If you want to help them prevent heat illnesses, familiarize yourself with the symptoms in order to spot and properly treat the illness."

According to a recent study at UCLA, the warming trend we experienced last summer will continue. Within the next 30 years, temperatures in L.A. will rise by about four to five degrees, and the number of days with temperatures above 95 degrees will triple. This puts more seniors at risk for suffering from heat stroke or heat exhaustion. Seniors and persons with chronic diseases are the most susceptible to these illnesses because their bodies do not adjust as well to sudden changes in temperature.

We all have loved ones who are over the age of 65. If you want to help them prevent heat illnesses, familiarize yourself with the symptoms in order to spot and properly treat the illness.

The most severe, heat stroke occurs when the body cannot control its temperature. The body temperature skyrockets, the pulse rate heat exhaustion or heat stroke. If you see signs of heat stroke, seek medical attention immediately.

• Find out if they're on medications affected by heat. These include high blood pressure medication, Parkinson's drugs, antidepressants and diuretics.

• Encourage them to drink cool water and clear juices. Make sure to ask if their doctor has prescribed water pills or limited the amount of fluid they can drink.

• While it's best to stay indoors with the air-conditioning on, some seniors might not have air-conditioning, or might have trouble getting to a cool place. If so, offer to take them to the movies, or plan a low-impact activity at a "cooling location." These are public spaces set up throughout L.A. where people without air conditioning can escape the heat. You can find a list of these locations soars and normal cooling mechanisms break down. Symptoms and signs include red dry skin, extremely high body temperatures, nausea and unconsciousness. If someone you know is showing signs of heat stroke, seek medical attention immediately.

Heat exhaustion is milder than heat stroke, by dialing 2-1-1.

• If they do go outside, make sure they wear lightweight clothing and apply plenty of sunscreen.

Learning about heat illness prevention can help you and your loved ones beat the heat and stay safe this summer. •

Common Core Draws Near

By Dylan Little

During the Wiseburn School Board's June 22 meeting, Director of Curriculum Chris Jones discussed progress in preparing for the changeover to Common Core educational standards instead of the current California State standards. This coming school year will mark the beginning of the end for the long-established methods of measuring student achievement, which makes it an ideal time to put the Wiseburn School District's theories on the adjustment to a trial run. "This is a really key year when we talk about Common Core implementation," said Jones.

While the testing standards created in the No Child Left Behind act have proven unpopular with some parents and educators alike, Wiseburn proved to be successful in them. Jones said the District showed "incredible growth." In 2007, the district average Academic Performance Index rating was 792 and by 2013, it had grown to 882. Wiseburn is also one of eight out of 81 districts to have no schools and no district-wide Program Improvement sanctions.

"If this were a game...Wiseburn won. We won this game," said Jones. "We were able to have continued API growth. Neither the District nor any Wiseburn school entered PI. We stayed out of Title III federal sanctions. This success is rooted first and foremost in our excellent teaching, our supportive learning environments and best instructional time. We put programs in place that we think have been effective. These things don't happen by accident."

Now the District faces new educational standards and assessments. Jones said specifics on the new testing system aren't finalized yet, but warned that it would require major re-thinking. "We're on to a new system," said Jones. "We don't know exactly what it's going to look like, but it's not going to be the same system that we've been playing by. The rules have changed and we're off to an entirely new system. We essentially--after doing really well for a decade--have to start over."

Luckily, the District started this process years ago by pursuing opportunities to remain at the leading edge of education trends. One partnership that Jones spoke especially highly of is one with the Talking Teaching Network. "We have been very fortunate to have been involved and connected with the Talking Teaching Network. It's been a very fruitful involvement," said Jones. "We are quite literally the envy of many districts because we were able to get in at the ground level."

In addition to partnerships, the District has been working to get its teachers advanced professional training. While smaller districts typically find it difficult to secure high-quality professional resources, Jones said Wiseburn has a better-than-average track record in finding high-quality training. "As a small district, we have benefited from scholarly professional development, which typically isn't available to districts our size," said Jones. "We usually can't tap into that."

Another major factor in Jones' readiness plan has been getting groups of teachers and administrators to study what exactly Common Core is. "We have already formed Common Core transition committees," said Jones. "We got our hands dirty digging into the actual documents. We weren't just simply accepting what were the simplified generalizations about Common Core standards and instead said, 'Let's look at it ourselves and actually figure it out.'"

The research and examination of the future standards convinced Jones that it wouldn't be wise to stay the course and keep teaching like nothing has changed. He said that while the District currently does a great deal right that can be applied to the new guidelines, it will need to make changes to keep up. "We need to catch our breath and we need to adjust our direction," said Jones. "We're not going to make an about face. We've made some good progress particularly in our foundational levels, kindergarten through third grade, teaching kids to read. This will give us an opportunity to glide forward while testing the waters for a more precise heading for our new destination."

In order to find this new direction, Jones and other school staff have combed through the new standards to find what the District already teaches, what will have to change about how subjects are taught and what new subjects have to be added. While adding new content, the District (and most districts in California) will reduce the amount of testing time. The Common Core standards will be paired with a new assessment that intends to remedy both testing burnout and instances of teaching to the test by using an automatically adjusting computerized test that focuses more on critical thinking rather than multiple choice selection. "We were testing our kids too much," said Jones. "We must be mindful to create a new system to maximize [useful results] and minimize time spent testing. The days of students simply bubbling in C have past."

Jones ended his presentation by telling the Board that is the year to move beyond planning and into actual implementation. "2013-14 will be a year to explore, examine, pilot and take risks in Common Core implementation," he said. "We can't just examine anymore." •

News for the City of Good Neighbors

The Miracle of Freedom

We celebrate America's 237th Birthday this week. We are known as "home of the brave, home of the free". What is this "freedom" we talk about? In the history of mankind, freedom has been the exception. Governed by kings and queens, human beings were told that power starts at the top and flows down. Our constitution reversed this idea with two radical premises.

The first is that our rights come not from kings or presidents, but from God. "All men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights". Second, America's founders inverted the understanding of sovereignty. Power comes not from the top down, but up, from "We the People" and governing authority is limited to elected officials for a set period of time subject to elections. Even with all of our regulations and perceived invasion of personal privacy by our government, we still are "free" today. Free to worship, work, play, and live the way we want. If we study our nation's history, we realize that our freedom is a miracle. A miracle that we take for granted. Celebrate safely and be happy to live in a country that still is the beacon of freedom for the world.

Holly Park Blasts Tri Park; Advances in Winner's Bracket

By Joe Snyder

The Holly Park Minor (ages 9-10) Little League All-Star baseball team from Hawthorne has been dominating in the past two games of the District 37 Tournament. After blasting North Inglewood 30-0 on June 23, Holly Park went to work and scored another four-inning mercy rule 16-0 shutout of Tri Park of El Camino Village (includes players from there, plus sections of Hawthorne, Lawndale and Gardena) on June 26 at Holly Park. Holly Park scored two or more runs in each of its four innings, including its last 11 in the third and fourth combined.

Anthony Perly of Tri Park-Wiseburn slides to second base ahead of the tag by North Inglewood shortstop Anthony Perly in last Friday's Senior Little League Baseball District 37 All-Star Tournament game. Tri Park-Wiseburn edged North Inglewood 7-6.

Virtually everyone got in the act for Holly Park as all players were on base at least twice. Francisco Orozco had a double and single for three runs batted in and one run scored. Justin Rouston went two for three with three RBIs and two runs scored. Keith Moore had one hit, but scored four and drove in two. Winning pitcher Johnathan Ramos hurled a four-inning no-hitter and had two hits with three runs scored. Thomas Thompson also had two hits and scored once.

Holly Park could have a challenge as it meets Westchester at Westchester Little League's Carl Nielsen Youth Sports Park on Saturday at 2 p.m. The finals will be on Monday at 6 p.m. and, if necessary, next Wednesday at the same time at Nielsen Park.

LENNOX SENIORS PROVE TOO MUCH FOR TRI PARK-WISEBURN

The Tri Park-Wiseburn Senior Little League all-star baseball team moved on to the District 37 final with a 7-0 shutout of North Inglewood Sunday at Jim Thorpe Park in Hawthorne. Javier Martinez and Jesse Garcia combined for a no-hitter in the victory that sends Tri Park-Wiseburn to the final next Thursday at 5 p.m. against Lennox--a team that routed TPW 13-2 on Saturday. If Tri Park-Wiseburn can top powerful Lennox in the first game, a second game will be played approximately 30 minutes after the end of the first one.

Martinez threw six innings and Garcia closed the game out in the seventh. Tri Park-Wiseburn also used its power, as Michael Henderson hit two home runs and Garcia added one. Henderson had a two-run homer plus a solo shot for three runs batted in. Garcia added a solo home run. TPW also had a fine catch by right fielder Adrian Burgo. Centerfielder Miguel Mendez also had a pair of good catches for North Inglewood.

After opening the District 37 All-Star Tournament with a 7-6 win over North Inglewood last Friday, the Tri Park-Wiseburn Senior Little League squad found a balanced Lennox team too much to handle in a 13-2 loss on Saturday at Jim Thorpe Park. Lennox scored in every inning in a game that ended in five innings due to a 10-run-plus mercy rule. Armando Hernandez had two hits and drove in a run for Tri Park-Wiseburn.

On Friday, Tri Park raced to a 7-1 lead and then had to hang on as North Inglewood rallied for single runs in the top of the fourth and fifth and then scored three runs without a hit in the seventh. In the top of the first, Tyler Bucky and Miguel Isorio began with base hits. One out later, Jose Garcia singled to drive home Bucky. Javier Hernandez then followed with a three-run home run over the right-centerfield fence to give Tri Park-Wiseburn a 4-1 lead.

Tri Park-Wiseburn then added two runs in the second behind a base hit from Jose Garcia.

It tacked on another run for a 7-1 advantage. From there, North Inglewood pitching held Tri Park-Wiseburn scoreless. In the fourth, Anthony Perez walked, stole second and third bases, and then scored on a wild pitch. North Inglewood added an unearned run in the fifth as Jose Franco scored on an error.

After a fine six-inning pitching performance by Jimmy Gregory, Tri Park-Wiseburn manager Jose Campos went to relievers Anthony Campos and Jose Garcia. Campos started by walking two and hitting one batter. He then walked home Franco. Alex Espinoza and Fabian Martinez then scored as Tri Park-Wiseburn catcher Isorio dropped the ball twice on force play attempts. Garcia managed to get Sergio Franco to strike out to end the game.

HOLLY PARK, TRI PARK MAJORS REMAIN ALIVE

Holly Park and Tri Park remained in contention in the District 37 Major Little League Baseball Tournament. After losing to Tri Park on June 23, Holly Park rolled over Wiseburn 15-3 and defeated Aviation (score unavailable) last Thursday. Tri Park topped Lennox on Thursday.

The two teams square off at Carl Nielsen Youths Sports Park in Westchester Saturday at 3 p.m.

JUNIORS BEGIN FRIDAY

The District 37 Junior (ages 13-14) will start on Friday with Lawndale taking on Lennox at 5 p.m. and North Inglewood facing Wiseburn at 7:30 p.m. at Jim Thorpe Park. The winner of the Lawndale-Lennox game will play Tri Park on Saturday at 4 p.m., and Holly Park takes on either North Inglewood or Wiseburn at 6:30 p.m. at the same spot. •

Politically Speaking

One Man's Opinion

By Gerry Chong

And lo it came to pass that in the Year of the Idiot, the Motley Fool took his show on the road. First, he declared his "oneness" with the rebels in Syria at the same time as the rebels declared their "oneness" with Al-Qaeda. Then in keeping with the War on Terrorism strategy known as the "Tsarnaev Plan," the Motley Fool explored

"Next month he is planning a visit to Africa at a taxpayer cost of $60-$100 million!"

the possibility of bringing the rebels/Al-Qaeda allies to the United States as war refugees. That worked so well in Boston that we should expand the strategy across the country.

From there, the Fool's itinerary took him to Palm Springs where he had intended to berate the Chinese President for launching cyber-warfare, but Edward Snowden changed the agenda, allowing the Motley Fool to brag about how much more skilled free men are than Commies in accomplishing that most difficult task.

Not to be deterred, the Motley Fool continued on to meet with the steely-eyed President of Russia. There he had a divine inspiration: "You know, Vladie," he might have said, "we can't seem to get Iran and North Korea to abandon their nuclear ambitions, so let's try something else. Let's you and I plan on disarming to their level so we can all be equals! Kinda the way my idea of "spreadin' the wealth" has worked in the U.S. economy. I mean, if we all have the same number of nukes, we can bring back détente, and the world will be a safer place--and I can win another Nobel Peace prize! Wadda ya think, bro?"

That had to be the content of their June 17 press conference which ended when the stoney-faced judo expert Putin extended his hand, but the Motley Fool tried to do a hand slap instead. Unsmiling, Putin ignored the cool hand gesture. Guess the Ruskie ain't a "bro."

Yet, the Motley Fool still isn't ready to get off the world stage. Next month he is planning a visit to Africa at a taxpayer cost of $60-$100 million! And that will not include the safari he and Mrs. Fool had to cancel because of the appearance of financial excess. Why is the trip so expensive? He requires fighter jets overhead at all times, and snipers in place to repel attacking lions, and tigers, and, oh my...

He would not want to give the impression of having neglected his duties during his foray to the outside world, however. Because of the Fool's recent faux pas with its president, China ignored his request to extradite Edward Snowden. Of course it did not help that the State Department had screwed up (again), neglecting to revoke Snowden's travel passport until he had left China for Russia.

When Snowden arrived, Putin must have hand-slapped with his Ministers in his best "bro" imitation, laughing at poking his finger in the Motley Fool's eye by claiming Snowden is not in Russia--he's at the airport.

So the Motley Fool stomps his feet and shakes his tambourine as the world mocks its greatest clown. •

First Steps to Fixing a System that has Been Failing

By Cristian Vasquez

Among the contentious political issues one can ever bring up, immigration seems to always be a concern for Americans. The presence of immigrants in America has always caused a political rift between those in power--and chances are it always will. A few weeks ago, the Senate approved a "border surge" bill with the intention of increasing border security. The bill, which also includes a pathway to citizenship filled with requirements established by the Department of Homeland Security, also approves the presence of an additional federal agents and local resources to needed to accomplish such a task would be monumental. Furthermore, the reason there are 12 million undocumented workers in America is because there are enough businesses willing to break the law themselves to save a few dollars on labor and make a bigger profit.

This is an unfair situation for the American citizen, the legal resident and the undocumented workers because the American citizen and legal resident have one less job. Meanwhile, the undocumented worker will get deported and separated from their family while the business

"A path to citizenship and enforced border security is the right balance in dealing with our immigration issue."

20,000 border agents, stricter worker eligibility verification and 700 miles of fence along the United States-Mexico border.

Like most things in life not everybody is happy with this proposal, but it is the first time in a long time that the issue of immigration is addressed based on substance and not rhetoric. For supporters of immigrants' rights, the fact is that our border needs to be better protected. This is not just to keep people from coming into the country via illegal means, but because there are drug cartels using this unguarded land as entry points to smuggle drugs--and people--into our country. People can call this militarizing the border all they want, but having an unprotected border is an open invitation for anyone or anything to enter the country. This isn't an accusation of failure against border patrol or any of the agents responsible for protecting the border. However, there are not nearly enough agents to properly guard the border that stretches from California to Texas.

On the other hand, there are those who oppose a path to citizenship. Such people consider the pathway to citizenship a reward to people who broke the law in the first place. While that it a very valid argument, it is also not practical to remove the estimated 12 million undocumented workers living in America. The amount of stays in business. In many cases, these same businesses will go out and recruit more undocumented workers. Unfortunately, the issue has been ignored for so long that we now have 12 million people and their American-born children and grandchildren trying to figure out how not to lose a loved one to a different country that many of these American-born people have never visited. The pathway to citizenship should be filled with strict requirements and come with fines or penalties. In the end, these people, right or wrong, have been allowed to become a part of the workforce and to simply remove them can cause a huge detrimental effect.

A path to citizenship and enforced border security is the right balance in dealing with our immigration issue. It is pointless to deport inmates when the border is so vulnerable that they can easily make their way back into the country. Also, it is pointless to deport a person who has become a productive member of society by holding a job and purchasing a home because someone was willing to hire them despite the wording of the law. Employment verification will hopefully help prevent that. When President Ronald Reagan granted amnesty in the 1980s, lawmakers "forgot" to include border security as part of the agreement. This time it seems the lawmakers are doing it much better. •
