Hawthorne School Board Tackles Common Core Standard

By Dylan Little

A new set of English Language Arts and Math standards are due to hit school in California and 45 other states in 2015, but the Hawthorne School District is already looking at ways to ensure its students can master the new set of standards. During the Hawthorne School Board's June 27 meeting Brian Markarian, Director of Educational Services, provided a brief overview of exactly what the new Common Core State Standards are. He also outlined what the District has done already and what the timeline for implementation over the next two years will look like.

The Common Core State Standards are a new set of learning guidelines that seek to unify the learning experience across the states that have chosen to adopt them. The standards have to be developed by examining state standards throughout the United States and by looking at educational strategies abroad. The goal is to create an internationally competitive educational framework that will produce both ideal college applicants and a knowledgeable and adept workforce. One of the reasons behind the push for Common Core State Standards is that under the current rules, states set their own standards--which leads to some states enacting tougher standards, resulting in lower test scores, while other states enact more relaxed standards that result in higher test scores that make them look better in comparison. According to data Markarian put together using scores from the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP), states that report a high percentage of their students as proficient tend to have lower scores on the NAEP. According to Markarian, California has some of the strictest assessment standards in the nation and the low state educational proficiency scores and high NAEP scores to go along with it. "States that have made their assessments more difficult have been doing better on the NAEP," said Markarian.

California's history of tough tests has already helped prepare students and teachers for the kinds of standards they will be working with under the Common Core system. While other states might find themselves suddenly burdened with teaching concepts that haven't been part of their curriculum in years, if at all, Californian school districts will have relatively little new ground to cover and will mostly just be adjusting to teaching concepts at different grade levels. "We're not going to see this major change," said Markarian. "If we were in a state that is not as rigorous as California [in testing], we would see a bigger change."

In English and Language Arts, the new curriculum has standards that incorporate history, social studies, science and technical subjects. The new standards also place greater important on "digital literacy" by requiring children to learn how to both comprehend and produce digital text and text-based multimedia projects. Another change is an

Wiseburn Embraces High Tech Education Plan

By Dylan Little

The Wiseburn School District heard an update on its technology plan, including concepts like virtual servers and desktops, more reliable backup and restoring systems and upgraded content filtering software, during the body's most recent meeting. Chris Jones, Director of Technology for Wiseburn, and Mark Metzmer from Intelligent Computer Concepts, Wiseburn's IT group, addressed the Board, saying the District was at a turning point for the direction of technology. While the District has put considerable resources into having advanced infrastructure, there is still a lot of testing and planning to determine how well the technology works and how to best use it to provide a better education to students. The preparation has already given Wiseburn a technological advantage compared to other districts in the state. "Out of all the districts I work with, I think Wiseburn has made the best decisions concerning technology," said Metzmer. The most ambitious of the District's technology projects is creating a virtual server, or internal cloud. Using this virtual server, the District would eventually like to have all the computers in Wiseburn running a virtual desktop. This would create a centralized system to storing data and even executing applications, with the user display being rendered on the servers and transmitted to a student or teacher's computer (like watching a ballgame on TV instead of playing a ballgame at home). This new technology should cut costs by delivering energy savings estimated at about $16,622 per year along with savings to hardware costs in the long term. It will also making setting up new infrastructure (whether it's iPads, PCs or laptops) simple by moving the heavy lifting associated with set-up to the virtual server. "Now when we are rolling out a system we don't need to create a new plan concerning setting up hardware and test what systems it will work on," said Metzmer. "It's just a couple of clicks...and within five to 10 minutes it's ready to go."

News for the City of Good Neighbors

From City Clerk Norb Huber Independence Day

All of the fireworks going off on the Fourth is a pain to a lot of people, and a ton of fun for others. The Independence Day holiday brings with it many feelings. For some reason, I like being patriotic. I love what our American flag stands for. I love to hang my big stars and stripes out in front of my house. I love to tell everyone that I am proud to be a red, white and true blue, full-fledged American. I like to support our troops. I love to sing the national anthem at every sporting event. I may be a little old fashioned, but I need to believe that our nation founded on spiritual principles will continue to be the land of the free and the country where the motto, "in God we Trust" still is true. Happy Birthday America! God Bless!

Oldest Business in Hawthorne?

Well, I got quite a response last week from my question. The Hawthorne Press Tribune newspaper chimed in with proof of incorporation as the Hawthorne/ Lennox Advertiser in 1926. However, the oldest, family owned, business that has remained in the same location since 1927 is the Hawthorne Nursery on El Segundo Boulevard. It has been in the Nakai family for the past three generations.

Society's Addiction to Busy and Ignorance of Rest

By Glen Abalayan, Torrance High School Student

Society has bred a generation of workaholics. It has changed people's attitudes about work and rest. Today, people are working too hard and resting too little. For 200 years, society and personal lifestyles have changed man's definition of the word rest and skewered it from a refuge from daily life into an activity that is looked down upon. With society's rapid pace, changing attitudes and transition into an interconnected global system, can people still get the rest they need?

Unfortunately in a number of developed countries, the answer is most likely to be no. Society has an addiction to staying busy--busy doing work, busy worrying about work, or even busy when there isn't any work. With the introduction of the computer, Starbucks and the disposable coffee cup, people are further disregarding a proper night's rest and replacing it with more activities to keep them away from the bed and into the workplace.

The key cause of society's ignorance for rest is because people tend to not get enough sleep. Unfortunately, today's generation thinks sleeping causes them to miss out on opportunity. But developing a habit of sleep deprivation is a risk to one's health and the safety of those around them.

Not giving your body the rest it deserves can greatly put you at a higher risk of heart conditions. According to the studies conducted by the University of Warwick, an individual who sleeps less than six hours a night has a 15 percent higher risk of developing or dying from a stroke and a terrifying 48 percent greater chance of developing or dying from a heart attack. Sleep deprivation also affects one's appearance and behavior as a lack of sleep can translate into an increase in weight, a short temper and a decrease in attention span and life expectancy.

Sleep deprivation can also endanger the safety of those around you. A study conducted by the British Medical Journal during 2000 announced that individuals who stayed awake for more than 17 hours possessed the behaviors and blood type of a drunkard. Their research involved sleepdeprived drivers taking various tests and compared it to results from an individual with a blood alcohol level of 0.5 percent. After the experiment, they concluded that the sleep-deprived driver actually performed worse than the intoxicated driver. The test's result is an accurate reproduction of real life as the National Sleep Foundation reported in a 2012 survey that 14 percent of truck drivers said they encountered a near miss because of their lack of sleep. The number of truck drivers experiencing near misses is small compared to train operators, with 18 percent, and airline pilots, who are at most risk with a stunning 20 percent.

Along with people not getting enough sleep, another reason for society's lack of sleep is how people spend their time away from work. Ever since the introductions of the television, individuals have spent their time away from work staying up later and giving up sleep to watch television. As the main source of entertainment changes from television to computers, individuals are more likely to stay up late because of the unlimited source of information and entertainment the Internet provides. Although activities such as watching television or using the computer may be considered as a way to unwind, they do not provide the body with any way of recovering from the rigors of everyday life and only gives the user headaches after prolonged use. By failing to take advantage of the time given to rest and instead using it to interfere with one's sleep cycle, the individual is putting their life at risk for the health problems listed earlier.

While society's rapid rate continues to increase, more companies are exploiting tired workers and creating an entire industry dedicated to keeping people awake. Instead of listening to their bodies and giving it a rest, people look for high caffeine beverages to temporarily mask their bodies' yearns. This is where coffee chains like Starbucks and Coffee Bean succeed. Companies such as the world famous Starbucks have mastered the science of marketing and transformed the coffeehouse from a simple beverage store to the social watering hole.

As society continues to grow, humanity should be more responsible in listening to their bodies. Contrary to what others may say, rest should be as, if not more, important than what happens during the daily grind. In the issue about society's sacrifice of rest for opportunity, the dangers outweigh the benefits. Although people claim that giving up sleep is the key to success, it is also a path to a shorter life. When given the opportunity to get enough rest, people should take advantage of such an opening instead of wasting it doing senseless activities. The Dalai Lama famously said that man "lives as if he is never going to die, and then dies having never truly lived." In the world's rush toward an everlasting workday, people should take responsibility of their bodies and not ignore its needs in exchange for the mirage of opportunity. •

This column serves as a community forum where local leaders volunteer to respond to faith and religious questions submitted by readers.

What is salvation?

The concept of salvation is central to the Christian faith. We believe that we are saved from the power of sin and death and given new life. This means that we are forgiven our sins, restored to a right relationship with God and our fellow human beings, and given a new life here and now and eternal life after death.

We also believe that salvation comes to us as a gift from a loving God. We can't earn salvation by doing good things; it is a gift that comes to us through faith in the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ—and even that faith is a gift! In other words, salvation is given to us when we put our trust in God's love in Christ. It is also a life-long process in which God continues to help us grow in faith and love through the work of the Holy Spirit.

We are saved from a life of struggle with guilt and fear. We are also saved for a life of love, joy, peace, and hope: love that results in joyful service, peace within ourselves and with others, the hope of God's guidance and life eternal. To be saved does not mean we will not suffer. Rather, it gives us assurance that God will help us when suffering comes to us.

God's salvation is not just for individuals. God is also working to save the whole world from hatred, pain, and death, and we are partners in that work.

—Rev. Lee Carlile, El Segundo United Methodist Church

Growing up in Pennsylvania Dutch country, when my grandmother was exasperated with something, she would say: "Give me strength and salvation"!

Asking ourselves questions such as "What is salvation?" is a good thing for we many times use terms and think we know exactly what they are but have really never questioned them as adults.

Whatever salvation meant to my grandmother, I will never know for I never knew a a child but I did know it had something to do with religion!

Many people would most likely define salvation as a saving from wrong doing/"sin" or a deliverance from wrong doing/"evil". Sin, evil, hell then creep into our definitions and light on their meaning must be given as well. Sin is an archery term meaning you have missed the target or bull's eye and hell is Sheol in the Bible which meant you burn in hell when you miss the mark. It was an idiom which meant a state of consciousness not a geographical place. Unfortunately, mistranslations, misunderstandings of idioms, customs and mannerisms of speech have obscured the simple and clear words of the great masters and orators of the Bible. I might add, in particularly Jesus.

Salvation is found when we regain (assumed lost) our conscious possession of God-given attributes. It comes as a result of going FROM God TO God. The story of the prodigal son is an example. Salvation is a not a thing, not an end but a Way for our salvation is through our unity with God. Salvation comes to all of us as a free gift from God. It is a gift which is total Love and frees ourselves from all limitation. A belief that Jesus in some outer was atoned for our sins is not salvation. Salvation is an inner understanding and overcoming which comes individually as a change in consciousness. We use the Christ consciousness (separate from the man, Jesus) to cleanse the mind and free us from wrong doing. This consciousness gives us that "strength and salvation". Now, whether my grandmother would agree or disagree, I will probably never know!

> —Rev. Bonnie S. Wulff, Living the Inner Light Church and Science Of Mind Center, El Segundo

The most basic question that we need to answer in addressing this topic is simply this: Do we even need to be saved at all? The clear testimony of Scripture is an unflinching "Yes". We – as humans – need to be delivered and emancipated from the just penalty due for all our offenses against God's righteous laws. And because the penalty for breaking such laws is unending banishment from God's presence (in a terrible place called Hell) the stakes simply could not be higher.

And here's the Great News: God Himself has undertaken to suffer that punishment and pay that penalty for all who will commit their lives to Him as Savior and Lord.

He did His work (taking sin's penalty) when, in the person of Jesus, the dreadful debt for human sin was fully paid by Him upon the cross. We make our response (committing our lives to Him) when we: (1) Admit that we have broken God's commands; (2) Believe that Jesus has paid sin's debt; and (3) Come to Him as our only Savior and rightful Lord.

It is when we make that simple three-fold (A.B.C.) response that God will cancel our debt, wipe clean our slate, adopt us into His family, walk with us through life, and take us, one-day, to live with Him forever.

Who would want to pass up such an offer of free and full salvation? Make Jesus Christ your personal Savior and Lord today – and that salvation will be yours!

Tri Park Eliminates Holly Park

By Joe Snyder

The Tri Park Major Little League All-Star baseball team was able to hold off Holly Park for a 5-3 win to remain alive in the loser's bracket of the District 37 Tournament last Thursday at Carl Nielsen Park, home of the Westchester Little League. Tri Park, which includes players from Hawthorne, Lawndale and Gardena, was led by leadoff batter and shortstop Chris Lopez who went three-for-three with a home run and two singles for three runs batted in. Lopez also scored two runs. Lopez led Tri Park with a solo home run over the left field fence in the bottom of the first inning. Centerfielder Lorenzo Dumas had a double and scored for Tri Park.

Tri Park took a 2-0 lead through two innings, but Holly Park, located in northeast Hawthorne, rallied to tie the game at two on a two-run homer from Peyton Barnes in the top of the fourth. Tri Park bounced back with two runs for a 4-2 lead in the bottom of the fourth, behind a runscoring single from Lopez. Tri Park Holly Park pitcher Peyton Barnes throws to a Tri Park batter during last the fifth when Andrew Castellanos walked and scored on a base hit by Aaron Gomez.

Holly Park cut Tri Park's lead to two runs as Anthony Hernandez singled, Kalani Ford walked and Drew Hawkins hit into a fielder's choice scoring Hernandez. Josh Nelson ended the threat as he struck out against Tri Park relief pitcher Cernar Durnay who came in for starter Stone Kronberger. "It's hard to play so many games," Tri Park coach Louis Campos, Jr. said after Tri Park lost earlier to Del Rey 7-0. "We're trying to reach the finals. We have two games to go."

Tri Park resumes today against either Lennox or Aviation. The tournament runs through Sunday at Nielsen Park.

Other Little League Results

Lennox's Senior Little League baseball team advanced to the District 37 All-Star Tournament finals with a 4-3 win over Lawndale on June 26 at Jim Thorpe Park in Hawthorne. Lennox takes on the winner of today's loser's bracket final between Holly Park and Tri Park, which starts at 5 p.m. Saturday's championship series begins at 2 p.m. If Lennox falls, a second game will begin at 4:45 p.m.

Four Hawthorne and Lennox boys' and girls' soccer teams traveled to Hawaii for the Rainbow Classic last week. Hawthorne's under 12-year-old boys Big Dogs team advanced to the final, but lost to North Hawaii on Sunday. Also making the championship was the 16-19-year-old boys' squad, which took on Aiea from Hawaii on Sunday but results were unavailable.

For the Under 14 girls, Hawthorne won three of four games, defeating Hawaii teams Milinni 2-0, Diamond Head 1-0 and Kailua 1-0, but losing to Leeward from Northern California 2-0. In the girls' 16-19 Division, Lennox won two and tied one. Lennox blanked Leeward 3-0 and Honolulu 1-0 and tied West Oahu 2-2. •

Fall From Grace

By Adam Serrao

It wasn't long ago that the Los Angeles Dodgers had the best record in the National League West and even beyond that, the best record in all of Major League Baseball. Anyone who watches the game of baseball, however, knows that the same boys in blue that previously had climbed to the top of the league are now looking like bums in blue, sliding all the way to the bottom even faster than they ascended. Certainly, the baseball season is a long campaign. With 162 games to be played to complete the sports year, it is regular to see good teams at times fall into slumps along the way. The Dodgers, however, aren't only in a slump They are on a meteoric descent that when over with may be the worst in team history, begging the question are these in fact the same Dodgers of last year that finished in third place in their division just slightly above the .500 mark?

The Los Angeles Dodgers led the NL West by as many as 7 1/2 games on May 27. At the time that this is presently being written, the Dodgers are now a game back in the standings of the San Francisco Giants and have been shut out five times in six games and six times in 12 games--including all three at San Francisco and at least two out of the four games against the New York Mets. Presently, those same Dodgers have produced only two runs in their last 57 innings played, seeing them lose seven games in a row and 11 out of their last 12. The slide has dropped the Dodgers from five games ahead in the NL West and in first place to where they are now--one game behind the Giants and in second place. These Dodgers don't seem to be the same team they were last year. Now, they seem to be even worse.

To give the team credit, the Dodgers are depleted by injuries that may explain some of their insufficiencies lately. Obviously, Matt Kemp has been out of the lineup for the majority of the year with his hamstring injury. Andre Ethier has been sidelined a few games with an oblique injury. The team's number two hitter and one of the best defensive second basemen in the game, Mark Ellis, almost lost his leg due to complications resulting from the injury that he suffered on May 19 that has seen him sidelined for almost a month and a half now. When you take the number two, three and four hitters out of any lineup in the league all at the same time and for an extended amount of time, you can expect the team's run production to drop off drastically. Not only are the big hitters for the Dodgers sidelined, but the other hitters on the team are being asked to take their spots and step into roles that they are not used to filling, thus having to work harder and thereby producing less.

Even so, help is on its way very soon. While Ethier was only sidelined for a few games, both Kemp and Ellis should be back directly after the All-Star game that takes place on July 10. Once those three get back into the lineup, the Dodgers will once again have their core back and the offense should finally do its part to end its worst slide in years and eventually start scoring runs again. Even through their horrific play of late, however, one thing separates this team from last year's. Stan Kasten and the ownership group that includes Magic Johnson, unlike Frank Mc-Court, are willing to do whatever it takes to win. Already looking overseas to enhance the team, Kasten and the Dodgers' front office recently signed 21-year-old Yasiel Puig to a seven-year deal in order to hopefully be the Dodgers left fielder of the future. Beyond that, the hot stove is burning white hot with trade rumors that have the Dodgers looking in various areas to improve their team and their brand. "I promise you we'll explore everything," Kasten said of his team's position on the trade market this year. "Look, as candid as we can be, we'te the Dodgers. We're supposed to be big. We intend to be big. Will we look at big things? You bet."

While there is nothing big about the way the Dodgers have been playing on the field recently, fans can rest assure that although it feels like it, it may not be the end of the world just yet. With names like Carlos Lee being rumored to join the Dodgers' clubhouse soon, it is clear that management is doing everything it can to better the team for a run at the playoffs this year. Once the lineup gets healthy and the trade deadline passes, the runs being put up on the scoreboard for the Dodgers should make this, the time of a completely anemic offense, almost completely forgettable.

Though many fans would love see that 7 1/2 game lead reappear in the standings, when put into perspective, the Dodgers aren't really putting themselves out of misery just yet. Only one game back of the National League West-leading Giants, the Dodgers still have the opportunity to retake the lead in the division standings even before the entire team gets healthy. Even so, if the Dodgers can make it to the All-Star break without slipping much more, then they certainly won't have to worry about the ghosts of last year with the visage of Frank McCourt revisiting their clubhouse anytime soon.

What is the difference between a frog and a cat? A frog croaks all the time, a cat only nine times.

A chicken crossing the road is poultry in motion.

increased focus on comprehending informational texts, as opposed to the current standard's almost exclusive focus on literary texts. The push for more informative texts is part of Common Core's emphasis on a more skilled workforce, as the workforce is dominated by informational, not literary reading. "On your first day on the job, they aren't going to hand you Catcher in the Rye. They are going to hand you an informative text," said Markarian.

The State's math standards are also receiving an overhaul, with the Common Core seeking to eliminate rote learning and replace it with understanding key concepts. The new standards also allow students to experiment with multiple problem-solving strategies while asking them to justify their problem-solving choices instead of having teachers select the strategies for them. The new standards are also designed to work with all grade levels by having "Mathematical Practice" standards that are taught in some form at all grade levels and "Mathematical Content" that would be new grade-level math concepts. This would allow a student's past teachers to leave comments for new teachers about what areas need more work or where exceptional skill has been shown-all with a greater degree of specificity than is cur-

The virtual desktop system is set to roll out at Anza initially, as that campus has the best connection to District servers and has the oldest classroom computers. Jones noted that testing on older computers will provide a good test for the rest of the schools, which run more advanced hardware. Hopefully the system will live up

Creating a high-tech school district is an expensive proposition. However, it's becoming more important than ever, as State assessments are being moved away from bubble sheets and number two pencils to iPads and computers. Companies and colleges are looking for more tech-savvy students to work more technical jobs. Also children are becoming more accustomed to finding data from computers instead of encyclopedias.

More Green Space Being Provided to Residents

By Cristian Vasquez

It has been four years since From Lots to Spots were unable to secure a park space for residents in the City of Hawthorne. That recently changed when it was decided that 118th Street and Doty Avenue's park will be the site of a new green space for residents.

"This project was actually a lot easier. We were happy to be contacted by the City. Our first project with the original 118th Street and Doty was very contentious and it was an uphill battle to try and educate the City and garner their support," Viviana Franco, Executive Director for From Lots to Spots (FLTS), said. "Unfortunately it did not work out, but now we have a new leadership with the City. Mayor Danny Juarez contacted us regarding this opportunity on the other side of the freeway which turned out to be the same exact address on 118th and Doty but on the south side [of the 105 freeway]."

FLTS is a nonprofit dedicated to stimulating and contributing to community economic development in blighted areas by facilitating the creation of accessible green and open spaces. Through beautification projects, FLTS seeks to promote social and economic revitalization while addressing the need and inequity of park space in traditionally underserved neighborhoods throughout the Greater Los Angeles area. In addition to eliminating blight, these beautification projects help teach residents about the benefits of native vegetation and eco-friendly lifestyles.

"From Lots to Spots engages in sustainable design--we have to build a space that is not only sustainable from an environmental perspective but for longevity in terms of maintenance," Franco said. "It works out well because the spaces that are built sustainably also act as an environmental education opportunity because neighbors and community members will realize that they can use lowwater plants--they realize that they can utilize solar lighting in homes. So hopefully they will take this information and implement it in their homes."

The new green space will save the City watering costs due to its make-up of native vegetation. In addition, the park will have solar lights that will add to the savings in maintenance. The cost of the space itself was $3,500 for the 5,000-square foot property, which was sold to the City by Caltrans. "That's when the City contacted us and asked if we wanted to be involved with the community engagements and design, so we jumped at the opportunity," Franco said. "We hosted some community meetings in the spring asking the local residents and stakeholders what they would want to see at the park. It's a fairly small space, but it's still a necessary space and community members definitely expressed their need for active space and for some play space in the area. Some of the features the park will have are a small walking trail around the park, a few benches and lots of trees. The community expressed that they would like a lot of shading and they recognize the importance of trees considering the presence of the 105 Freeway. They [trees] help sequester not only the carbon emissions, but they also help reduce the noise pollution."

Franco believes that these green spaces are important to all aspects of community life and make up for more than just a lack of space for physical activity. "We have a saying that an active space is a safe space—the more you engage in the community in creating these spaces, the more they help in maintaining the spaces," she said. "The more you can have people be empowered by these parks and community gardens then the community really takes ownership of it. That causes them to be more aware and vigilant of what is going on in the neighborhood. If some petty crimes are occurring, community members can acknowledge this and then anonymously call and report these issues, which as a result you will have less crime happening around the spaces."

FLTS has been active in the South Bay seeking locations that can be converted to green space to the benefit of the local community. Despite the difficulty of this mission at times, FTLS continues to strive to reach the underserved sections of the community. "There is definitely a disparity in park space throughout the city. In particular the area around El Segundo, between Crenshaw and Prairie, is where you have a lot of low-income, multi-family housing and very, very little park space," Franco said. "We did identify one opportunity that we are working on with the City, which is Bicentennial Park. Don't let the name fool you--it's not a park as much as it is essentially a pair of tennis courts that have been locked up for years because the demographic of the community has changed and folks in the community don't play tennis."

Franco continued, "Instead of working with a nonprofit group to come and teach tennis lessons and work with the community members, they [City] decided to lock the gates to the tennis courts because they were being used for illicit activities. "So we have been actually working with the community in redesigning the space to meet their current needs. This is definitely a part of the city where we need to invest more park resources."

The new green space on 118th Street and Doty Avenue's park is in the final stages of completion, but is scheduled to have its grand opening in late July. to the hype, providing flexibility and longevity to the existing infrastructure.

"There are two important advantages of visualization," said Jones. "One, it works with the computers we have now, which vary from ones we just bought to ones that we have had for years and you can run this on all of them. The other is flexibility in planning for the future--not only in what devices to use, but what kind of infrastructure we want to use to keep track of all this."

Another evolution in Wiseburn's digital technology plan is an upgrade to the District's content filtering system. The goal for the upgrade is for it to be installable on any device, including smart phones and Wiseburn laptops and for it to work even when they aren't being used at school. It's also important that the new filter allows students to access certain media while blocking other media, even if none of it is stored on Wiseburn servers. Metzmer thinks that the new filtering system is up to the task. "It's intelligent," said Metzmer. "It can learn to Jones believes that the proposed technology plan will be cost-effective, but still cater to the needs of students. "We want to [upgrade our technology] in a very cost-effective way, but a way that, most importantly, will work for our students," said Jones. "We have to look at how kids access information, which is different than when we were growing up and even different than kids five years ago." As testing these solutions is only just beginning, it's unclear what the eventual final version of the technology plan will be, whether it's a student "bring your own device" solution, the District issuing each child a device of some kind, or another of a multitude of options. However in Jones' opinion, deciding on an answer and implementing it needs to happen sooner rather than later. "We don't know the answer yet, but we have to figure it out," said Jones. "There are as many questions as answers. We are at a turning point. We need to focus on answers. The good news is we have a very good set-up as far as infrastructure is concerned." •
