Wiseburn School Board Listens to Parent Concerns About Childcare

By Duane Plank

As the long-anticipated move-in to the new building on Douglas Street nears, the Wiseburn School Board last Thursday held what will apparently be its second-to-last meeting at the facilities located on Aviation Boulevard. The move-in timeline, according to Wiseburn Unified School District (WUSD) Superintendent Tom Johnstone, was for administration staff to start moving filing cabinets and paperwork into the new building last Friday.

Da Vinci personnel started to migrate to the new building earlier this week, with the teachers set to settle in on November 3 and the students stashing their backpacks on Douglas Street and continuing their studies on November 8. The official dedication ceremonies at the new building will take place at 10 a.m. on December 9.

Right out of the starting blocks, the Board members and Johnstone were faced by three Wiseburn constituents--members of the public, who spoke about their issues with District policies and programs regarding before and after school childcare.

Times are tough now, with many parents working and childcare issues at the fore. Working parents related their challenges with Wiseburn's before and after school programs. One of the speakers said she had researched school districts and moved here because of the sterling reputation of WUSD. "We moved here for a reason," she said, but lamented the childcare dilemma. Communication issues were mentioned by the three people who addressed the Board on Thursday evening. Johnstone, acknowledging the challenges faced by working parents, noted that care programs are "an area of tremendous need" in the District. The Superintendent reported that he is trying to ramp up staffing to provide necessary childcare services, and that the District is doing everything necessary to take care of this issue. "It is a huge issue of need--we know that we need to increase capacity," Johnstone said. "What we have done is, even before school started, we contacted El Camino College" to hopefully fill the seven District personnel vacancies. He noted that the District is "in the process" of filling the positions, with fingerprinting and other necessities before hiring being addressed. Johnstone estimated that the District's goal was to have the new hires in place, and the childcare situation resolved, no later than January. He added that he feels the pain of working parents who need childcare. "I don't like it when our families have to go somewhere else for kindergarten," he said.

The residents who spoke brought up myriad issues for working parents, and Board President Israel Mora said, "We are now going to put a lot of energy into seeing how we can grow, hiring the right staff--which we are actively trying to do."

Issues brought up by the three residents who spoke included the wait lists in place now in the District. Johnstone commented that the current enrollment at Anza for the preschool children is "30 kids, but there is a wait list of 183." He pointed out that at Cabrillo, there are 60 kids in the program with no wait list. Johnstone explained that the reason there is no wait list currently at Cabrillo is because that campus does not provide an after-school program. District facilities and land space, which are limited, provide a challenge to expand the program.

Johnstone was aware of the residents' issues and emailed, "We are discussing options to expand the programs at all three elementary schools. The short-term challenge is staffing and the longer-term challenge is facilities. We hate to lose a single student/family because of childcare needs, so this is definitely something that we want to deal with and very soon!"

On the continuing construction at the Douglas Street property, Vince Madsen, the District's Director of Facilities Planning, emailed that "basically we will be moving administrators into the building this coming week with the major school moves starting Friday, November 3 running through the weekend and the students' first day of school will be November

8. We walked with the fire marshal and our commissioning agents and state inspectors and have reached a substantial completion milestone with ongoing punch-list items that we will be scheduled off hours around the students' school schedule."

Continued Madsen, "Phase 2 is moving along, which is the gym and the aquatic center which is a joint-use venture with the City of El Segundo. It will be nice to have the high school building behind us as we focus on just finishing up Phase 2, which should be complete by the end of June."

Madsen mentioned that he would have no problem relinquishing the challenges that he has shouldered at the Douglas Street facility as the construction winds down for Phase 1 of the mega-project. "I am just excited to give up the keys to the building," he said Johnstone, who will retire at the end of June, issued a somewhat tongue-in-cheek ultimatum to all involved in the construction project--that Phase 2 of the project better be completed by the end of his tenure, "or else."

The Board was slated to hold a special meeting last Saturday to figure out facility needs in the future. Johnstone said one of his wishes was for a construction bridge over Aviation Boulevard. "So, our kids don't have to walk. That is an accident waiting to happen," he commented.

With no special presentations on the agenda, the Board then moved on to informational comments. Kudos were given to Board President Israel Mora, who has, shall we say, prodded all the people involved with the Douglas Street construction to get the job done and get the administrators, teachers and students moved in at the gleaming new facility. "Thank you for everyone putting up with me," Mora said. "It has huge push to get the high school finished. The school looks beautiful, and it's very exciting. The opening is around the corner."

The only Wiseburn Board meeting slated for November is on the docket for Thursday evening, the 16th. •

Turning 65? Choose the Right Medicare Part D Plan

(BPT) - If you're turning 65 in 2017 or 2018, you're one of 10,000 people who become Medicare-eligible each day. Choosing Medicare prescription drug coverage can be confusing, especially for the first time. You may have questions about which plan fits your healthcare needs and budget or how to enroll. The good news is, it doesn't have to be overwhelming if you know these four rules.

Rule #1: Lower premium plans may mean higher costs. Plans with a lower premium may end up costing more in the long run if they have higher drug copays, which can really add up.

Rule #2: Not every plan covers every drug. Drug lists (formularies) can change every year and so can the drugs you take. Be sure to check your plan's formulary each year to make sure any medications you take are covered.

Rule #3: Check that there are pharmacies close to you. That way, it's easier to fill your prescriptions. Select a plan with a wide range of "preferred" pharmacies, which typically offer lower co-pays than standard pharmacies in the network. Also, see if using a home delivery pharmacy or a 90-day supply could lower your costs even more.

Rule #4: Look for 24/7 access to pharmacists and Medicare experts. Those who can answer questions about your medicines and offer drug safety tips, money-saving alternatives and expertise in drugs to treat specific conditions.

Also, remember to check the Medicare Part D plan's Star Rating. This is the overall quality and performance rating (out of 5 stars) based on member satisfaction surveys and other measures by The Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS).

Oscar-Worthy The Square Is a Satirical Look at Affluence Through Modern Art

Elisabeth Moss and Claes Bang in The Square. Courtesy of Magnolia Pictures

By H. Nelson Tracey
for www.cinemacy.com

About once a year, if we're lucky, a movie comes along that transcends the labels of comedy, drama and other classified genres. It will also prove that with top-tier filmmaking, you can utilize a full emotional range to tell a story. It is safe to say we have an entry for this year in Ruben Östlund's The Square.

A modern art museum in Sweden, vying to be cutting edge while also needing to sustain its overhead and encourage people to actually visit, is getting ready for its newest, boldest exhibit: The Square. At the helm of the museum is Christian (Claes Bang) who lives in a swanky apartment, drives a Tesla and has no trouble scoring beautiful women. Because this new exhibit is almost entirely focused on helping people and trusting strangers, Christian presents himself with the challenge of upholding the artistic vision of altruism throughout the rest of his life.

In reaction to his generally self-serving behavior, the new exhibit pushes Christian out of his comfort zone. Yet in every earnest (or disingenuous) attempt to help other people--his co-workers, the homeless, family members--there is a bitter, comical pushback. The results are absolutely hilarious, perhaps because of how cringe-worthy and honest the situations are as people react while trying to fall into societal norms.

By using the world of modern art and affluence as its backdrop, The Square allows for bizarre features to be fair game while also utilizing cinematic artistry when necessary. Most importantly, this film is a satire of the wealthy do-gooders who reek of hypocrisy without even realizing it. In most American films when we see characters who are wealthy, it is typically either glamorized or normalized.

Here, as was true of his last film, Östlund takes a critical examination of wealth in a way in which we all can take a lesson.

To English-speaking audiences, a trio of recognizable faces each play a supporting role: Elisabeth Moss as a naive reporter, Dominic West as a self-serving artist and lastly, Terry Notary--whose name doesn't carry star power, but whose resume includes doing motion capture for the Kong and Planet of the Apes movies. Here, Notary plays a controversial performance artist and I'll only say his animal motion capture work gets to play off extraordinarily. The star of the film remains Claes Bang, whose deadpan delivery as Christian, no matter what scenario he finds himself in, is both endlessly relatable and at times hysterical.

It is not required that you see Östlund's last feature, Force Majeure, before you see this film. However, it does prime you for what to expect from his particular style. His preceding film also deals with painfully comedic scenarios of an affluent family set in a ski resort. That being said, the ideas and aspirations that Östlund introduced in Force Majeure are delivered in greater extremes in The Square.

It's too early to see what the competition will be for the Best Foreign Language film Oscar. History has proven that this specific category has some of the most misguided of the already fallible awards, but my reaction would be that this film is a shoe-in. Square represents the first truly amazing movie of the fall awards season. The Square is rated R for language, some strong sexual content, and brief violence. 142 minutes. Now playing at The Landmark and ArcLight Hollywood.

News for the City of Good Neighbors from an Old Guy named Norb Huber

VOTE YES ON HH ON TUESDAY

What a difference a year makes. Last year everyone was voting for president, everyone was talking politics. Now, it's just the Dodgers and the World Series. Baseball is much more interesting and enjoyable to talk about than who we want or don't want to mess up our country. Yes, this year we do have an election. It will be held next Tuesday, November 7th. If you have not sent in your absentee ballot, then the polling places will be open. We will be voting on Measure HH in Hawthorne. If passed, this measure will increase sales tax by only 3/4ths of one penny per dollar spent. That's a very small price to pay to help improve our fine city. There is no question that the added income will help our city. Use your brain, vote YES. Help Hawthorne move forward.

HAWTHORNE TRIVIA ANSWERS

No winner, no cold one. None of my several readers got all of the answers correct, so I guess I will have to drink on my own as usual. Here are the answers: Maryln Monroe lived on New Hampshire Street at the time which later became 134th Street. Jim Thorpe live on Birch Street. The Wilson family lived on 119th Street. Holly Park was built first followed by Holly Glen. Jack Northrop start his Northrop Aircraft Company in the old Hawthorne Hotel located on Hawthorne Blvd. The first graduating class from Hawthorne High School was 1958.

The city was founded in 1905 as the "Hawthorne Improvement Company" by B.L. Harding and H.D. Lombard. Harding's daughter shared her birthday—July 4, American Independence Day—with New England author Nathaniel Hawthorne, and a decision was made to name the city after him. The organization that had a contest to come up with the current city motto, City of Good Neighbors was the Hawthorne Chamber of Commerce.

LUTHER'S OTHER REFORMATION: BEER

As most of you know, I am the son of a Lutheran pastor, so Reformation Day was a big event in our church this past Sunday. I ran across a neat article on Martin Luther's other reformation: Beer. Looks like we owe Luther a thank you for our cold ones also. Here is the article:

On October 31st, 1517, 500 years ago, an obscure Saxon monk launched a protest movement against the Catholic Church that would transform Europe. Martin Luther's Protestant Reformation changed not just the way Europeans lived, fought, worshipped, worked and created art but also how they ate and drank. For among the things it impacted was a drink beloved throughout the world and especially in Luther's native Germany: beer. The change in beer production was wrought by the pale green conical flower of a wildly prolific plant — hops. Every hip craft brewery today peddling expensive hoppy beers owes a debt of gratitude to Luther and his followers for promoting the use of hops as an act of rebellion against the Catholic Church. But why did Protestants decide to embrace this pretty flower, and what did it have to do with religious rebellion? Therein foams a bitter pint of histoAry. In the 16th century, the Catholic Church had a stranglehold on beer production, since it held the monopoly on gruit — the mixture of herbs and botanicals (sweet gale, mug wort, yarrow, ground ivy, heather, rosemary, juniper berries, ginger, cinnamon.) used to flavor and preserve beer. Hops, however, were not taxed. Considered undesirable weeds, they grew plentifully and vigorously — their invasive nature captured by their melodic Latin name, Humulus lupulus (which the music-loving Luther would have loved), which means «climbing wolf.» The church didn't like hops,» says William Bostwick, the beer critic for The Wall Street Journal and author of The Brewer's Tale: A History of the World According to Beer. «One reason was that the 12th century German mystic and abbess Hildegard had pronounced that hops were not very good for you, because they «make the soul of a man sad and weigh down his inner organs.» So, if you were a Protestant brewer and wanted to thumb your nose at Catholicism, you used hops instead of herbs.» My take on all of this, Catholic or Protestant, hoppy or not hoppy, health drink or a weight on your organs, Dodger fan or Giant fan, just forget all that divides, united we enjoy a cold one. Go Dodgers! •

Surprising Rams Catching NFL by Storm

By Adam Serrao

Maybe it took a trip to London to finally get the world to realize that the team is for real. Maybe it's just a new head coach and an explosive offense led by second-year quarterback Jared Goff that has the Los Angeles Rams sitting tied for first place in the NFC West standings. Either way you spin it, the Rams have won four of their last five games and are now 5-2 heading into Week 9 of the NFL season. After 10 long years of a tumultuous, losing brand of football, who would have thought that the Rams would have had what it takes to be a competitive team in the NFL in what is now just their second season in Los Angeles?

The outlook for the Rams is currently as sunny and bright as the typical seven-day forecast in Los Angeles. The last time the Rams finished the regular season with a winning record was in 2003, when they also won five of their first seven contests of the year. New head coach Sean McVay certainly hopes that this season ends in the same successful way that the 2003 season did, when the Rams took home the NFC West title and lost in the divisional round of the playoffs.

"He has a standard and it's pretty high in terms of precise football execution," Rams general manager Les Snead said of McVay, who is currently the youngest head coach in the NFL. "We needed a culture change," star defensive tackle Aaron Donald added. "You just want to bust your butt for him."

McVay's youth and exuberance can certainly be said to be one reason for Los Angeles' stark turnaround from a 4-12 finish just one season ago. Another reason can be what he and the rest of the coaching staff has done for an offense that is one of only two in the league to score over 200 total points in the season dating back to last week. Jared Goff, the quarterback who looks like a new man now that Jeff Fisher is gone, has the Rams offense leading the league through their bye week in scoring, averaging 30.3 points per game. Goff's nine touchdown passes to just four interceptions gives the Rams a distinct weekly advantage on the offensive side of the ball that the team has not experienced since the glory days in St. Louis when they were nicknamed "The Greatest Show on Turf."

Instead of Marshall Faulk, who occupied the backfield in those days some 18 years ago, now resides Todd Gurley. Gurley, like the Rams as a whole, is also enjoying a resurgent season in which he has averaged 4.3 yards per carry and gained 627 yards on the ground. Gurley has also been getting it done as a receiver, compiling a total of 293 yards and three touchdown catches thus far, giving the team a potent, dual-threat offensive weapon to line up behind Goff.

No team is complete without an elite defense and although the Rams began the year slowly on that side of the ball, new defensive coordinator Wade Phillips has now seemingly turned things around. While the Rams may have given up a total of 96 points in weeks two through four of the regular season, they have only allowed a total of 33 points in the three games since then. Currently L.A. is allowing 19.7 points per game, which ranks the team as the league's 10th best scoring defense. Coming off of a 33-0 shutout over the Arizona Cardinals at Twickenham Stadium in London with Donald now back from his holdout and fully integrated into Phillips' system, that shutout may be a sign of things to come. It also certainly bodes well for a Rams team that is headed into a mixture of tough matchups against the likes of the Houston Texans, New Orleans Saints, Philadelphia Eagles and Seattle Seahawks, among others.

It may be an understatement to say that the Rams are the biggest surprise of the 2017 NFL season so far. What's even more surprising, though, is that the young team is finding ways to get the job done on the road too. Four of the team's five wins entering the break have been away from the Coliseum in Los Angeles (counting the game in London), as a variety of players continue to get the job done in the face of adversity. "We've got a lot of good contributors who understand their importance and their role, and you just try to make a habit of pointing them out" McVay explained. "That lets them feel appreciated because it is recognized and that credit is well deserved."

It's not just the Donalds, Goffs and the Gurleys who are getting the job done, but also the Matt Longacres (who leads the team in sacks), Malcolm Browns (backup running back) and Marqui Christians (special teams ace) who are flying under the radar, giving the Rams a fully balanced attack. That fully balanced attack is precisely what Los Angeles will need as it gets into the part of the schedule that will see the team take on many of the NFC's elite line-ups. Through the first half of the season, Los Angeles already has more wins than it had all of last year. While only time will tell if they can hold onto the first place spot in their division, it has become overwhelmingly clear that this young Rams team is certainly headed in the right direction. •

3 Steps to Help Freelancers and Gig Economy Workers Avoid a Tax Blunder

(BPT) - More and more people are earning extra cash by freelancing in the sharing economy. That may mean writing on the side, playing music on the weekends, driving for ride-sharing services like Uber or Lyft or selling handmade jewelry on Etsy.

"While it's easier now than ever to earn extra cash, it's important for freelancers and independent contractors to get smart about their tax responsibilities," said Mark Jaeger, director of Tax Development for TaxAct, a leading provider of affordable do-it-yourself tax software. "Gig economy earners must remember they are responsible for paying federal and state income tax on any income earned. And, they're also subject to self-employment tax, to cover Social Security and Medicare taxes."

If you're one of the 55 million Americans who chooses to freelance, it can be difficult to correctly calculate and report to the IRS how much tax you owe. In fact, a recent survey conducted by the National Association of Enrolled Agents found that, "independent contractors participating in the gig economy were cited as among those most at risk of failing to accurately report all of their income."

Taxpayers who miscalculate taxes owed are likely to get a form called a CP2000 from the IRS. Whether you work full time and earn a little extra cash from a side hustle or you're a full-time contractor, meticulous record-keeping is a must. Once a quarter, as you determine what you'll owe for quarterly tax payments, make note of which of those receipts are deductible.

When you're freelancing, you're your own accounting department. Not only are you responsible for generating invoices and collecting payment, you must also keep track of all income earned and accurately report it to the IRS.

For example, gig economy workers who make money freelancing for multiple clients while also moonlighting as an Uber or Lyft driver should track all income and expenses separately. That means keeping accurate records of any money paid directly by clients and keeping track of income reported on documents such as Forms 1099-MISC and 1099-K. These forms are issued when self-employment income exceeds $600 (1099-MISC) and when a contractor is paid through credit- and debit-card payment processors (1099-K). Come tax time, fill out a Schedule C for every company or client who has paid you to report all of the income you earned.

The IRS requires independent contractors to file and pay taxes on a quarterly basis, even if you anticipate getting a refund at the end of the tax year. Use a tax calculator to help determine whether you should make estimated tax payments. You can also use Worksheet 2.1 in IRS Form 1040-ES, Estimated Tax for Individuals, to figure out whether you must pay estimated tax. Whatever method you choose, make sure you calculate adjusted gross income, taxable income, taxes, deductions and credits.

As a rule of thumb, if you will owe at least $1,000 in taxes, you should plan to pay estimated taxes during the current tax year. Jaeger added, "If you owe estimated quarterly payments but don't pay them in full, you could face an underpayment penalty by the IRS." •

Corn and Cherry Tomato Salsa

Recipe by Brandpoint/ARA

A simple recipe sure to become a hit with the whole family this summer is Corn and Cherry Tomato Salsa. Once you stock your pantry with it, you can even get inspired with other fun recipes to add it to, like these 3 Step Skillet Tacos, found on FreshPreserving.com.

Ingredients

- 5 pounds cherry tomatoes, roughly chopped
- 2 cups corn kernels
- 1 cup red onion, finely chopped
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/2 cup lime juice (about 3 large limes)
- 2 jalapeno peppers, seeded and minced
- 1 tablespoon chipotle chili powder (optional)
- 1/2 cup chopped fresh cilantro six pint-size canning jars with lids and bands

Preparation

1. Prepare boiling water canner. Heat jars in simmering water until ready for use. Do not boil. Wash lids in warm soapy water and set aside with bands.
2. Bring all the ingredients to a boil in a large stainless steel or enameled saucepan. Reduce heat and simmer five to 10 minutes, stirring occasionally.
3. Ladle the hot salsa into a hot jar, leaving 1/2-inch headspace. Remove air bubbles. Wipe the jar rim. Center the lid on the jar. Apply the band and adjust to fingertight. Place the jar in the boiling water canner. Repeat until all the jars are filled.
4. Process the jars for 15 minutes, adjusting for altitude. Turn off heat, remove the lid, and let the jars stand 5 minutes. Remove the jars and cool. •

Mt. Wilson Celebrates 100th Anniversary of Historic 100-inch Telescope on Nov. 4

By Bob Eklund

On Saturday, November 4, you are invited to come up to Mount Wilson and celebrate 100 years of space exploration with the 100-inch telescope. From 2 p.m. to 10 p.m. the observatory's historic telescopes, including the 100-inch, will be open to the public, with docents on hand to talk about how they ushered in the modern era of astrophysics and revolutionized our understanding of the universe.

Please dress warmly, as it can get very cold up on the mountain this time of year. We are over a mile high. Handicapped visitors should be aware that the telescopes have several flights of stairs inside.

From 2 to 4 p.m., there will be talks in the museum auditorium on the history of the observatory by longtime docent Nik Arkimovich, and a talk by Sam Hale, observatory trustee and grandson of Mount Wilson Observatory founder George Ellery Hale.

At 4 p.m., UC Berkeley astronomer Alex Filippenko will give a talk in the museum auditorium on the 100-inch telescope. Tickets for this limited-seating event are available at the observatory website, www.mtwilson.edu. Also check the observatory website for directions for driving to Mount Wilson.

From dark to 10 p.m., assuming the weather permits, the 100-inch telescope will be open to the public for free viewing. The telescope will be pointed at different objects during this time, so visitors can file in and take a peek through the famous telescope that Edwin Hubble used to discover our expanding universe.

The 100-inch was first tested on the night of November 2, 1917—in the middle of the First World War. The small crowd gathered in the new dome at sunset included, along with observatory staff, the visiting English poet Alfred Noyes, who later chronicled the unfolding drama in his epic poem “Watchers of the Sky”:

“... The explorers of the sky, the pioneers
Of science, now made ready to attack
That darkness once again,
And win new worlds.”

Observatory founder George Ellery Hale

felt that the 100-inch's great light-gathering power would be especially useful in solving the mystery of the spiral nebulae. A debate was raging as to whether these graceful objects were “island universes” or lesser systems tributary to our Milky Way Galaxy. Into the fray stepped Edwin Hubble, who joined the Mount Wilson staff in 1919.

Once at Mount Wilson, Hubble used the 100-inch to attack the spiral nebulae problem. Believing them to be “island universes” (now called galaxies), Hubble looked for variable stars (which vary in brightness) in the Andromeda nebula. One proved to be very important. It was a Cepheid variable, a type that had been shown to be useful as an indicator of distance. The search for Cepheids was expanded to other spiral nebulae, and dozens were found, all of which indicated that the distances to the nebulae were far too great for them to be a part of our galaxy. Hubble's discovery with the 100-inch had proved beyond question that nebulae were external galaxies comparable to our own. It opened the last frontier of astronomy, and gave, for the first time, the correct conceptual value of the universe.

Hubble used the 100-inch for decades to push back the limits of the universe. He measured galactic distances and speeds to prove that the universe is expanding, changing our perception of the nature of the universe and leading to the “Big Bang” theory of its origin. In recognition of his achievements, the 94-inch Hubble Space Telescope was named after him. •

PETSPETS Pets PETSPETS

Precious Pooches

Ozzie

We are looking for volunteers to help with our pet adoption fairs which are held every Saturday at the Petco located at 537 N. Pacific Coast Highway Redondo Beach 90277, from noon-3: 30 p. m. If you are interested in volunteering and can commit to at least one Saturday a month, please contact us at info@msfr.org. You can also visit all of our Miniature Schnauzers & Friends rescues at the adoption fair or check out our website, www.msfr.org. If you have any questions about a particular dog's availability you can email us at info@msfr.org. Schnauzers! Bet you can't adopt just one!

"My name is Ozzie and for a three-year old, male, purebred Miniature Schnauzer, I've had a pretty rough life. Early in 2016 while out on my own, I had the misfortune of being hit by a car. The injury to my right front leg was pretty extensive and even after heroic attempts to save my leg, it had to be amputated. A couple of days after surgery, the great folks at MSFR rescued me from an LA County shelter where I recuperated. They took marvelous care of me through my healing and adjusting to the challenges of managing on three legs. Well, it wasn't as difficult as I expected and I'm proud to say I did splendidly. My sweet disposition, adorable face and determination help to get me adopted and I thought I had found my forever home. Once again, life threw me a curve. My mom fell upon financially hard times and can no longer keep me in her current living situation. It broke my heart to say goodbye, but she returned me to the MSFR folks who are going to help me find my real forever home. If you have a dog and are looking for a pal for him, I'm your guy. I get along really great with other dogs and would do best in a home with another doggie pal. If you don't have a dog and are home most of the time, I'm your guy. I'm the best 20-pound companion you could ever ask for and I'm even a good looker."

If you're interested in Ozzie, please email info@msfr.org for more information.

"Hi there! I'm Beanie – a four-year old, male Shih Tzu mix. One day, I decided that

Beanie

Alma

I was old enough to venture out on my own. Big mistake. Huge mistake. While romping through the fields, meeting new friends and discovering all kinds of interesting smells was fun, I also got very hungry, dirty and picked up some not-so-nice things called foxtails. Then animal control found me and took me to an LA County shelter where they called me a stray. Once at the shelter, my coat was totally shaved down--talk about humiliating--so they could remove the foxtails. Unfortunately they couldn't get them all...so while I was anesthetized for neutering, they surgically removed more foxtails. Well, I was truly a pathetic sight – emaciated, bald, holes from foxtails, sutures and a prominent under-bite. I looked like a cross between Dracula and Frankenstein. The MSFR people, who were at the shelter to rescue some Schnauzers, were so moved by my pitiful appearance that they rescued me as well. A quick trip to their veterinarian revealed that there were eight more foxtails to be removed. Half of them were easily removed, but the remaining four required another surgery--so those were removed when they did my dental. All in all it took four surgeries over the course of two months to totally rid me of those dreadful critters. Now that I'm healed and foxtail-free, I've put on a few pounds and am currently at my appropriate weight of 10 pounds. My coat has grown back in and is a silky caramel and cream color--and with my sweet and gentle temperament, what more could you ask for? I even get along great with other dogs. In fact,

I really would be happiest in a home with another dog because I don't like being alone. I'm a real love and like nothing more than to just melt in your arms while sitting with you, but I'm awfully smart too. I've learned that if you want to venture out on your own, you should wait until you're at least six and avoid foxtails at all costs."

If you're interested in Beanie, please email info@msfr.org for more information.

"They call me Alma and I think it's because of the meaning of my name. In Latin, it means kind and loving and that's definitely who I am. Well, actually I'm also a 4.5-year old, female Miniature Schnauzer mix who was rescued from an LA County shelter after my previous owners surrendered me. Can you believe that they adopted me from the shelter when I was only two months old and now, over four years later, they relinquished me because they are moving to a place that doesn't allow dogs? I guess in hindsight I wasn't all that important to them because they never had me spayed, and let's just say that the environment left me a bit nervous. I think I would like my forever family to be an adult-only home that's low key and peaceful. I may be 18 pounds, but I'm a sleek, longer-bodied girl who could possibly have some "doxie" in my pedigree. I get along really well with other dogs...so if you have one and are looking for a gal-pal for your pooch, or just someone to share your life, I'm the girl for you."

If you're interested in Alma, please email info@msfr.org for more information. •

Congrats to Nana and her new family!

Congratulations to Nana, our exceptionally sweet and loving eight-year old Poodle mix, and her new family. Her adopters, who are no strangers to us, have been taking in rescues for about 15 years. They have adopted two dogs from an organization we worked with in the pre-MSFR days and they have also adopted a MSFR rescue. In fact, Nana's mom was even a volunteer

Santa Claus back in the day when we did Christmas photos! Nana, now named Trixie, is living in Palos Verdes Estates with an eight-year-old Shepherd mix brother named Kasey

Apparently, Trixie's favorite new toy is Lampchop. How ironic that was her original name from the shelter! Wishing all of them happy times and many adventures. •

If you see a dog with a YELLOW RIBBON or something yellow on the leash, this is a dog who needs some space. Please do not approach this dog with your dog. Please maintain distance or give this dog and his/her person time to move out of your way.

There are many reasons why a dog may need space:
HEALTH ISSUES
IN TRAINING
BEING REHABILITATED
SCARED OR REACTIVE AROUND OTHER DOGS
