Vida Holguin: “Doomed to be a Lawyer.”

By Duane Plank

Lawyer Vida Holguin, who has an office east of Pacific Coast Highway on Maple Street in El Segundo, is happily retired...Sort of.

Holguin, who once had aspirations of becoming an astronaut or a jet pilot and has practiced law since she began a short stint working for the Federal Communications Commission [FCC] in Washington, D.C. back in 1974, is on the semi-retired list and is no longer taking on new clients. But she did not want to leave any clients in the lurch when she fully retires, so she is still representing three clients, she said and hopes to have their cases wrapped up in May.

“You can’t just tell clients that you are retiring; go find somebody else,” Holguin said.

In retirement, Holguin helps to sate her interest in writing. One might assume that she may have a few interesting stories to share dating back to her experiences as a college student in San Francisco during the 1967 “Summer of Love.”

On the way to her retirement, Holguin, who grew up in Santa Monica and was raised in the house that her contractor Dad built, graduated from the University of San Francisco [USF] with honors and a Bachelor’s degree. She continued schooling at the University of California at Berkeley, studying law until she was admitted to the California Bar Association.

Holguin said she was interested in attending college in NoCal, wanting to “get out of Dodge” and experience some of the diverse offerings available in the late 60s. Her father was adamant that she attends a Catholic university. After Holguin, the future lawyer, continually lobbied [she termed it nagged] her father about her college destination, he finally broke down, telling her, “I don’t care where you go, just get the hell out of my house!” so the University of San Francisco was selected. But, Holguin said, her parents were unaware that her new campus was located a scant few blocks from the Haight-Ashbury district, which was a focal point for the famous, infamous? “Summer of Love” shenanigans.

Holguin said she and some friends traipsed down to Haight-Ashbury, and, she said, “it was everything I thought it would be [taking in] the sights, the smells...” She told a tale of seeing two young men heading towards her with “flowers in their hair.” It did not take her long, Holguin said, to notice that “the only thing that they had on [were] the flowers in their hair.”

All these years later, Holguin remembers thinking, “Damn, I am going to like it here.” Her welcome to San Francisco moment had arrived!

Because Holguin’s Mom passed away during Vida’s sophomore year, she returned to SoCal to help the family, attending UCLA for a few quarters. But she was unhappy with her situation and returned to USF to complete her studies.

She was a sociology major and had friends

Vida Holguin. Photo provided by Vida Holguin. who were attending or planning to attend law school, and they counseled that she should also go to law school. An established lawyer also gave Holguin advice, and she applied to a couple of law schools, including UC Berkeley.

Many Topics Covered by City Council

By Liz Spear

Use of force by police, a financial move that provides Topgolf with capital to grow its “development business,” a discussion on its current Sister City in Mexico, and recognition of members of the El Segundo Fire Department for lifesaving resuscitation efforts were all part of the El Segundo City Council meeting. Public comment brought in mention of the El Segundo Police Department and a request for a non-city aligned outside agency to review the uses of force by police in 2023 and a look into how the El Segundo Public Library selects its books with mention of what can be done to keep material some might find unsuitable for younger children out of their reach and away from their eyes and ears should they not be accompanied by an adult, namely a parent.

John Pickhaver, a civic leader who ran for one of two available seats on the City Council last November, addressed the council on behalf of Sweat Equity Alliance, which seeks “peace and justice, equality and equity, along with liberty and safety for all who live, work, study in, or visit El Segundo,” focusing on data related to council at its earlier regularly scheduled meeting in March. He noted that the statistic that out of 34,000 incidents the city’s police responded to in 2022, only 23 involved the use of force as too broad of a representation since police “incidents” can include responding to a cat stuck in a tree and other situations that wouldn’t involve a use of force. The Problem with Diversity of Thought

This is in response to a Letter to the Editor from Robert Marsaglia regarding the School Board Meeting on 2/28 when Member Michael Wagner expressed opposition toward a professional development workshop for faculty related to Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion training. The letter accused Wagner's colleagues of being rude and dismissive of his point of view. When in reality, the Board (Wagner included) respectfully discussed the issue for 30 minutes. In the end, Wagner himself didn't even vote against the DEI workshop he had questioned. Though he did abstain. What I found more concerning, however, was the suggestion that the School Board must embrace "diversity of thought" in its efforts to be inclusive. On its face, that seems harmless, and sounds like a good thing. But think about why these DEI initiatives are here in the first place. Because for too long certain groups have been left out of the conversation and have had their perspectives ignored. DEI initiatives like the workshop in question seek to remedy that. The "Diversity" in "DEI" does not mean including opinions opposed to DEI. Doing so would undermine efforts to protect marginalized groups, and in some cases could even provide a platform to advocate for bigoted positions - all in the name of diversity of thought. I think the majority of the School Board has the right approach with these workshops and are making a good faith effort to make sure all students feel valued.

But the path to achieving a law degree was becoming tedious slogging for Holguin, who was having second thoughts about her career. But she persevered and received her lawyer paperwork in 1974.

"I was," she said, laughing, "doomed to be a lawyer."

After her short stint with the FCC, a stint in Washington when President Richard Nixon was finally done dealing with his Watergate peccadillos and announced his resignation, Holguin filled her resume with many lawyering stops along the way that led to her establishing her practice in 1990: she worked for a short spell as an in-house counsel to Bruce Church, Inc. in Salinas, California; toiled as an associate attorney for Lappen, Abelson & Harris in Beverly Hills; in February of 1977, landed a position working in the Century City law firm of Tyre & Kamins, which lasted until 1982, when she took maternity leave.

When her maternity leave ended, she took a position with the State Bar of California as Senior Trial Counsel. Her duties included supervising the ethics prosecution team and training junior trial lawyers. She held that position until September 1986. But the daily commute through the slog that is the Southern California freeway system had Holguin looking for opportunities closer to her Manhattan Beach home.

An opportunity arose at the nearby Hughes Aircraft Company, with a wage increase and enticing benefits. She took a post as counsel that included duties such as "defending Hughes in all employment matters, with an emphasis on wrongful termination."

At this point, Holguin was working and litigating and defending the interests of a powerful corporation that General Motors had purchased in 1985. Still, with a new owner, layoffs typically take place.

Holguin said she had men who would enter her office, pleading with her, some crying, who were afraid to lose their jobs. "It was so painful," she said. "It was heartbreaking. When I returned home, I felt sick."

Holguin realized that if long-term employees at Hughes were on the chopping block, she could face a similar fate. She explored other opportunities and landed in an office in Manhattan Beach.

But in the not-too-distant future, Holguin decided to pivot and started her own private practice in July of 1990. She started defending "the little guy [my wording, not hers]."

Her practice "specializes in employment law, including wrongful termination, discrimination, civil rights, union matters, [and] wage/hour matters."

So, Holguin had gone to work for the other side in the litigation game.

Fellow lawyer Debra Lauzon has "known Vida since 2015 or so. I knew her first through another lawyer I worked with who knew her. Then we became suitemates until she [semi]-retired [in]12/2022. We became friends and shared our lives together. She has mentored me in all ways, lawyer, Mom, wife, human!

"Vida has the quickest wit, great sense of humor, and the best stories of events through the years. She has a unique perspective on situations and great ideas about being a mom. (Like telling your kids that you have eyes everywhere, and so if they go through Polliwog Park rather than home after school/or instead of school, you will know!), emailed Lauzon. "She's a woman of faith, and if she loves you, it is complete and wholehearted. She is loyal to her friends and dedicated to her family. She is an example of staying committed and married for decades! She is giving, even giving her husband one of her kidneys. As an attorney, she is well respected, and her colleagues seek her advice. She is strong-willed and a strong person. She inspires me with the stories of being one of the few women in her Law School class at Berkeley, and there are some stories about those days that I cannot repeat!

"The world would be a much better place with more Vida's in it," concluded Lauzon. "I hope and strive to be like her in every facet of my life. I miss hearing her deep laugh around the office and some of her favorite four-letter words!"

Jennie Gadwa has known Holguin for more than four decades; they were once neighbors in Manhattan Beach. "We met when we were walking around the neighborhood with pregnant bellies," laughed Gadwa. "We always had pool parties," and the Holguin family members were on the invite list. "Vida is a great friend, very compassionate, great with advice. I have been there whenever she needed help with the kids or [shared] great dinners with friends. I cannot say enough good things about her personality," Gadwa added, noting that Holguin has always been a staunch supporter of the neighborhood kids as they matured.

And, concluded Gadwa about her long-time friend, "she has a wicked sense of humor and a great understanding of people in all walks of life. Vida keeps her friends for a long while."

It seems that when Vida Holguin, who was "doomed to be a lawyer," becomes your friend, you have a friend for life! •

Girls Lacrosse Team Making a Difference

Story and Photos by Gregg McMullin

Most people believe that wins define the success of a team. But there is so much more behind wins or losses that characterize a winning program. The El Segundo high school's girls' lacrosse program has committed itself to making a difference both on and off the field. What they are doing as a team will transcend each of them into making a difference immediately and for years to come.

Coaches Mac, Fish, and Nikki are in their first year with the Eagles and are making strides to make sure the team will make it memorable. One way the coaches do this is by instilling leadership within the team fabric.

Tala McGill can always make something happen just when you think the opportunity is lost. Sof Wright is a stealth attacker who routinely makes herself open down low. Jess Roundy is beginning to show the depth of her play and mental toughness. Jade Sanders shows it's never too late to start a new sport with her natural talent. Holly Wilbanks is a returning junior but could be the team's most relentless player, and she raises the team's intensity through her game.

The coaches host film nights to filter the coaching philosophy down to the players. Coach Mac said, "We usually watch as a group; however, we recently had the players

Members of the El Segundo high school's girl's lacrosse team decorate bags in connection with their community service.

In their view, the team's leadership extends beyond their "one-of-a-kind amazing" captains, Maya Jaegggar, Teagan Meyer, and Sophia Newton, and to the entire senior class. Seniors such as Katy Durand hustle to every ball, give 100% in drills and outruns her opponent. Haley Kinkaid consistently grinds and has a natural nose for the goal.

watch game films at their homes and fill out a questionnaire." Coach Mac added, "We probably prefer our Richmond Bar & Grill film nights because of team bonding." She said that the survey is great for the coaches to get a deeper understanding of each player's mindset and overall pulse on the season

Get Good with Money: Ten Simple Steps to Becoming Financially Whole by Tiffany Aliche

By Kristen Morell, Librarian

While there are plenty of excellent books on personal finance available, few explain the concept of financial wholeness that personal finance expert Tiffany Aliche offers in Get Good with Money: Ten Steps to Becoming Financially Whole. In this New York Times'

Get Good with Money: Ten Simple Steps to Becoming Financially Whole by Tiffany Aliche

Best Seller, the concept of financial wholeness, as Aliche outlines in her book is explained as a practical and easy to follow ten-step process that makes getting your finances in order as painless as it can be. Aliche begins this book discussing her own background, she was originally a preschool teacher who was doing well financially and suffered job loss during the Great Recession. She thought she would take the advice of a friend who was supposed to be a savvy financial advisor, but it turned out that their advice set her back even further. As she began to get her financial life back in order, she took note of her journey and developed the steps she outlines in her book. The way Aliche ties in her personal story with each step of the ten steps makes this book easy to digest and relatable. Each chapter covers one of the ten steps, the first five include: build a budget, get good at saving, dig out of debt, build your credit score, and learn to earn. Steps six through ten builds upon the first five steps. I highly recommend this book for anyone interested in personal finance as it is an enjoyable and highly informative yet not overwhelming as many books on this topic can be. Willem Dafoe Explores the Dark Side of Luxury in Psychological Thriller, Inside

By Morgan Rojas for Cinemacy

Willem Dafoe puts on a one-man show in the tragically dismal psychological thriller, Inside. Greek filmmaker Vasilis Katsoupis makes a bold directorial debut here, poking holes in the perception of affluence within the art world and its superficial meaning when compared to life itself. Starring Willem Dafoe in the role of a lifetime – who acts alone for nearly the entire film – Inside, now playing in theaters, offers high-concept commentary on the meaning of art and what happens when we devoid it of context.

Cats die. Music fades. But art is for keeps. This is the mantra that justifies the actions of Nemo (Dafoe), a member of an art thief ring who has successfully broken into the temporarily vacant NYC penthouse of an ultra-wealthy art collector. Remembering a prompt he was given as a schoolboy about what he would save from a house fire, Nemo recalls putting the priority on his sketchbook, not on his parents. Fast forward to today, Nemo is hurriedly pulling paintings and memorabilia off of the apartment's towering walls as his partner, only heard from through a walkie-talkie, gives him a minute-by-minute countdown. Nemo has millions of dollars worth of artwork in his bag. Everything has gone according to plan. That is until the high-tech security system is accidentally triggered and locks Nemo inside the palatial apartment.

After a frantic effort to disable the alarm's blinding lights and screeching alerts, the reality of the situation sets in. His partner – scared off by the misstep – abandons him. The museum quality doors won't open. There is no exit in sight. Also, the apartment's temperature system has been wrecked, and uncontrollably raises the interior up degree by degree. With food scarce and the water supply cut, Nemo is sweating out more of his sanity with every hour that passes. It's funny; on the one hand, literally, he is worth millions of dollars. But what good is it to be a millionaire when you're dead?

For a film about extravagance, it's fairly minimal in its execution. Willem Dafoe gives a tour de force performance and holds nothing back, his malnourished frame getting more obvious as the days pass with little to no food or water. By watching Inside, we're witnessing a man unravel from the inside; going from sensible to insane in a matter of days (or weeks, it's purposefully ambiguous). Dafoe's execution of a psychological mental is extraordinary, never once feeling forced or untrue. Paired with the airy, unnerving score by Frederik Van de Moortel, the increasingly frenetic energy gets absorbed by the audience. I caught myself taking shallow breaths during heightened moments of tension multiple times.

Despite this being a film about the disillusionment of art, its gorgeousness is still something to swoon over. The architecture, spacial awareness, interior design, and gallery walls would no doubt be featured among Architectural Digest's most-watched home tours. There's also an abstract beauty to the film in the way director Vasilis Katsoupis plays with sound and space. Reverberations and sporadic moments of deafness in the music edit combined with the rich and dramatic lighting foreshadow the space's stronghold over Nemo, and its ability to destroy him.

Inside is isolation insanity at its peak while simultaneously shining a light on the dark side of luxury. Despite its gritty and suffocating nature, this is one of the most beautifully meditative films on materialism that I've seen in a long time. •

Ways to Save Money on Auto and Home

(BPT) - Home and auto owners are aware of the financial responsibilities associated with each, but those looking to save money understand it goes beyond only reducing mortgage or auto payments. Regular preventative maintenance will keep your property in good condition while helping you save money in the long run.

"People often think about maintenance when something needs to be repaired, but the truth is that taking care of your property before it breaks might save you even more money," said Kevin Quinn, vice president of claims at Mercury Insurance. "Policyholders who take care of necessary tasks in order to maintain their personal property may help prevent major problems from happening later on."

There are routine measures you can take now that might help keep certain costs down when it comes to owning a home or vehicle.

Auto

One of the easiest ways to save money on auto expenses is to keep driving your vehicle for as long as possible. Most cars are built to last and the average age of a vehicle on the road today is at an all-time high of 12.3 years old. Keeping up with recommended maintenance such as regular tune-ups and repairs can save you from needing costly ones in the future, ultimately saving you more money.

Proper tire inflation. According to the Department of Energy, drivers can improve their fuel mileage up to 3% just by keeping their tires inflated to the proper pressure. The right amount of air contributes to increased gas mileage, a safer ride, and reduced tire wear. The appropriate tire pressure for your vehicle is usually found on a sticker inside the driver side door or within your car owner's manual.

Check your wheel alignment. Do not ignore the signs of a potential wheel alignment problem such as a vibrating steering wheel or a slight pull to one side when driving. Bad alignment can cost you by lowering your gas mileage or putting wear and tear on your tires which may necessitate replacing them sooner than normal.

Keep a maintenance log. Maintaining records of your vehicle's service history can protect its value. If you decide to sell or trade in your car, you can demonstrate its reliability and dependability with documentation. A well-maintained vehicle with proof of service may be worth even more money.

Home

Check your home's insulation. Opening up that first energy bill is often a surprise for new homeowners. Beyond trying to install energy-efficient appliances or lighting, new homeowners should check the adequacy of their insulation. Single-family homes, especially those built before 1960, may need an insulation refresh.

"Insulation is what helps keep your home warm in winter and cool in summer," said Bonnie Lee, Vice President of Property Claims at Mercury Insurance. "Well-insulated homes provide year-round comfort while reducing heating and air-conditioning bills."

Upgrade to smart home technology. A home equipped with a smart home system that monitors fire, water, and theft may qualify for a homeowners insurance discount.

"Many insurance companies offer discounts to homeowners who install smart-home devices because the technology is able to catch common problems early and can help prevent expensive claims," said Lee. "By using devices that monitor your home's safety and help with preventative maintenance, you may be able to save money on your insurance premiums over time."

Increase your deductible. A deductible is the amount you would have to pay out-of-pocket for damages before your insurance would kick in if you make a claim. If your budget allows you to pay a higher deductible in the event of loss or damage, your insurance premium will most likely go down.

Bundle your insurance. Bundling your auto coverage with homeowners insurance will qualify you for a multi-policy discount and save you money on your premium. It will also help streamline the process should you need to make a claim on both your home and auto at the same time. Contact your insurance agent to review bundling policies and rates. •

What Everyone Should Know About Lung Cancer Screening

(BPT) Lung cancer is the leading cause of cancer deaths in the U.S. In fact, according to the American Cancer Society, more people will die of lung cancer this year than of breast, prostate and colon cancer combined. The good news is that many of these deaths can be prevented with increased screenings to check for cancer. Unfortunately, only about 5%-15% of eligible patients are routinely screened for lung cancer, resulting in thousands of preventable deaths each year.

1. Screening works - and is more accessible than ever.

Decades ago, a diagnosis of lung cancer frequently meant a death sentence. Thankfully, we are lightyears ahead of where we used to be, with sophisticated screening tools and better treatment options for lung cancer patients. Recent data released by the American Lung Association shows that the overall survival rate from lung cancer, though still low and not equitable across communities, has increased considerably in recent years - demonstrating good progress over the past decade. Importantly, studies have proven that low-dose computed tomography (LDCT) scans can effectively screen for early-stage lung cancer. Other emerging research is looking at the use of sensitive blood tests, sputum samples (mucus from the lungs), and nasal swabs to detect lung cancer. With improved screening options, lung cancer can now be found at an early stage when it is most treatable. Many patients can live for several years with the disease, and some can be cured - the key is to catch it early.

2. Speak to your physician about screening options if you are 50 or older and smoke, or have smoked for 15 years.

Just as you make an appointment for a routine screening mammogram or colonoscopy, get screened for lung cancer if you are considered high-risk. If you are 50 or older and have smoked for 15 years - even if you have quit - speak to your primary care physician about screening options with LDCT. LDCT may sound scary, but the test takes only a few minutes to complete and is usually covered by most insurance plans for eligible patients. Your primary care physician can guide you through screening options and determine when you should start screening.

3. Talk openly with a physician who understands you.

People who have never smoked can be diagnosed with lung cancer, but currently, one of the best ways to reduce your risk of getting lung cancer is to quit smoking - it really is never too late to kick the nicotine habit. Bringing up such habits with your doctor can be uncomfortable, but he or she can guide you through practical ways to stop smoking, and also discuss ways to reduce your exposure to known environmental pollutants that can cause lung cancer. Never be afraid to advocate for your health, and if possible, try to find a primary care physician with whom you can have open conversations without judgment.

We have in our hands the tools to catch lung cancer early and provide better outcomes to patients newly diagnosed with the disease - it is now up to us to share this knowledge with our loved ones. Learn more about lung cancer at: www.facs.org/lung. • said that the number of incidents "really isn't the relevant barometer" and that the real figure is "thirty-five hundred (3500) times more than the figure presented to you at the last meeting." He also noted that the city's Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Committee had reported a disproportionate number of uses of force "against people of color" and said the city should use an outside agency to examine its data, much like it would do to have financial data reviewed.

In Topgolf news, the city council approved "the proposed assignment of Topgolf USA El Segundo, LLC's sublease to 42 Real Estate, LLC and corresponding leaseback of the interest from 42 Real Estate, LLC to Topgolf USA El Segundo, LLC subject to, and contingent upon the execution of the attached Acknowledgment of Lease Terms and Guarantor Acknowledgment of Guaranty." A representative from Topgolf, which will celebrate its first anniversary of opening its El Segundo location at The Lakes on April 15, said the move will allow the company to "recycle capital and reinvest it in our development business." Matt Smith and Sanjay Arora, senior directors of real estate at Topgolf, attended the council meeting, reporting that the El Segundo opening was second in success only to the Las Vegas Topgolf facility. They noted that the facility's 10-hole The Lakes golf course is set to hit 70,000 rounds of golf being played on it in its first year.

In a special presentation near the beginning of the Tuesday night meeting, the city council heard about ten city Fire Department members (paramedics, firefighters, engineers, and captains) who were vital in two responses to CPR events. Using a mechanical CPR device that provided continuous, consistent compressions and assisted in the resuscitation of a 70-year-old male and a 26-year-old male in two separate incidents. Both men were later released from the hospital "neurologically intact."

Also, during the "public comment" portion of the meeting, Monica Davis suggested that the "back quarter" of the property where the Hyperion Water Reclamation Plant sits could be stripped of its non-native ice plant and replanted with native plants that would benefit the El Segundo Blue Butterfly. Davis also suggested that the city look "long term" at its existing swimming facility, the Urho Saari Swim Stadium (built in the 1940s under President Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal Work Projects Administration-WPA-which came under the authority of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935 and was created to help alleviate the mass unemployment of the Great Depression) which is not in use and is being looked at by city officials as they move through a process of decisions on selecting a remodeling design and funding, to make it more than just a "splash pool," because due to its current depth, it is not suitable for water polo and due to its current length is not suitable for swim meets, noting that the city owns "The Plunge," as it is affectionately called, but does not own the new El Segundo Aquatics Center (complete with a new Olympic-sized pool and extra facilities) in east El Segundo, which it shares with the Wiseburn School District. She noted that she is fond of The Plunge and that she and her children have used it but advocated for a pool that would serve the community for another 80+ years. "I just think that long term we would get more bang for our buck in coming up with a plan that would allow for swim meets and water polo, even if it was just practice, it would be a more useful use of city funds than just a splash pool, purely recreational. That's just my opinion, but I thought that there are some creative ways we can look at this."

Other topics covered were comments from a resident who objected to content she found in books in the children's section of the city's public library and how to move forward with El Segundo's current Sister City of Guaymas, Mexico. Council member Ryan Baldino also praised and thanked city staff for completing the General Plan Implementation and Housing Element annual progress reports on time and mentioned how CEQA regulations have been redesigned and perhaps weakened. In response to the public comments about the library books, he also said, "I would like to say I am not in favor of any type of censorship at our library. I trust the experience of our librarians, I trust the members of our library board, and personally, what I like about this town is that we do have a community, we are a neighborhood, and I would like to think we are accepting of everyone. And every child needs to be protected, regardless of that child's sexual orientation, religious beliefs, or color, I want to make it known that El Segundo is a community that cares for one another. We support one another, and we can have a conversation about books and age-appropriateness in, I think, a more civilized and appropriate manner. And while I'm welcome to have a conversation with anyone, I just hope that those conversations don't attempt to cast any negative light on any one group because I really do feel like this is a community that supports and is able to give patience and grace to others to allow them to be who they are and support their needs." • while ensuring that they pay equal attention to each player.

The coaching staff's philosophy is focused on the players' mental, social, and physical health, both on and off the field. The staff seeks open and honest communication. To this end, they had the players and parents sign contracts specifying that the players first advocate for themselves before parents step in. The contracts also focus on team commitments and player expectations. The three coaches believe if the team follows their viewpoint, they should gain not only lacrosse skills, but also more self-understanding, confidence, leadership skills, mental toughness, and a sense of community over the season. Coach Mac summed it up with, "If we do our job right, the team should feel like a family."

The bonding experience, when the team meets for game films, demonstrates the team's closeness and ability to have fun while productive. The team laughs a lot, takes pictures, orders food, and plays team games. An example team game was getting in small groups and competing to come up staff's vision and philosophy. Sophia Newton said, "Our team is a lot more than just a group of players who get together to play a sport. With all of our outside activities, such as movie nights, volunteering, and group workouts, we have become a family."

Teagan Meyer summed it up by saying, "This year, there is a huge level of commitment from the coaches and all the girls on the team. We're all working really hard to improve and push each other to get better. There's a huge feeling of support and community on and off the field. We spend a lot of time together outside of practice, and we've become more than just a team but also good friends."

These Eagles are making a difference that will be memorable to those they have helped, and the biggest winners are themselves.

Boys Volleyball Off to Strong Start

El Segundo won their eighth consecutive match when they defeated Torrance 25-22, 25-15, and 25-16 in Pioneer League play. The Eagles were led by Princeton-bound Nolan Kelly and the Pilkvist twins Dylan and Ryan.

with the most descriptive words for each player on the team. They collected all suggestions and then voted on the best word for each player. A couple of examples of player words for the freshmen are (Fierce) Lia Giroux, (Animalistic) Grace Beetner; (Sedulous) Kalista McMillon (Diligent), and Kyra Snell (Smiley). According to Coach Mac, "The team hopes to get the words printed on the player jerseys at the end of the season to emphasize that they are not just one or two stars but a multi-faceted unit. Individually adding value but ultimately coming together to play as one, win or lose."

In addition to bonding, the team learns a lot by watching themselves play. The coaches immediately noticed the team's ability to lift each other up during film sessions. The coaches believe this carries over from the example the three captains, in particular, consistently set on the field. Coach Mac added, "It can be pretty obvious when players make mistakes on film, but we always talk about the opportunity to build on our weaknesses instead of only leaning into our strengths." The coaching staff believes that's one key reason the team you come to watch at the end of the season will be a different one than it was at the beginning." They have also watched some college games, including one in-person at USC, where some of the players met players from the team.

Since team bonding is a focal point of the season, in addition to film, players' parents have opened their homes for Team Pasta Nights before key games. Pasta nights are a tradition the coaches brought from their playing days. It provides that family-like time by sharing a meal while getting mentally ready for the game ahead.

Another way the team is working together is by giving back to the community in the form of community service. Coach Mac has had the team over to her house to prep for a community service opportunity. The team prepared 42 kids' school lunches for 'Hang Out Do Good.' Hang Out Do Good is an LA food drive charity that organizes lunch drop-offs for donators.

Players were asked to donate their time, several parents contributed money towards supplies, and the coaching staff covered the rest. According to the coaching staff, they are continually looking to give back to the community in the form of community service. The Eagles improved to 9-2 on the year and held the top spot atop the Pioneer League standings at 4-0. It's the best start for the program since 2016, when they started 11-3. They played Da Vinci on Monday this week and traveled to Lawndale yesterday before hosting North Torrance at 3:30 p.m. on Friday.

Baseball Team Sweeps Da Vinci

The Eagles swept Da Vinci 5-2 and 8-1 in Pioneer League play. The games were moved to accommodate a double-header due to the rainout cancellations. In the first game, Mateo Heredia had a hand in his team's first three runs with an RBI single in the first inning and a two-run single in the second inning. Luke Elward picked up his third win of the season by throwing five solid innings.

In the second game, Hudson Comer's two-run single highlighted the first inning in the Eagle's easy win over the Da Vinci Wolves. Brady Engelhardt went the distance for his second complete game to earn his third victory and, in the process, lowered his ERA to a minuscule 0.40.

With the in-climate wet weather and all the delays in the schedule, this week's games are to be determined.

Softball Team Comes up Short

The Eagles were on the short end of a 5-1 loss to West Torrance, marking their fifth loss in a row, and dropped to 0-2 in Pioneer League play. The lone offense for the Eagles came in the first inning when Sienna Mayer singled and later scored on Bella Gridley's RBI single.

The Eagles were scheduled to play Da Vinci on Monday, South Torrance, yesterday and host Torrance on Friday at 3:15 p.m., weather permitting. •

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF JEFFREY E. FULLARD aka JEFFREY FULLARD

Case No. 23STPB01930

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of JEFFREY E. FULLARD aka JEFFREY FULLARD A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Peter Fullard in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES. THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Peter Fullard be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A HEARING on the petition will be held on March 29, 2023 at 8:30 AM in Dept. No. 2D located at 111 N. Hill St., Los Angeles, CA 90012. IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law. YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.
