Food, Toy Drive Brightens Up Christmas for Families in Need

By Cristian Vasquez

Books, toys, popcorn and music were all only just a part of the festivities out together for families during the Holiday Food Program hosted by One Voice and the Head Start State Preschool. The day's event hosted more than 300 families of Inglewood children who are registered with the Head Start State Preschool to provide food baskets, books, toys and a family photo with Santa Claus.

"It is perfect because a lot of people simply needed that help," Inglewood resident and uncle of a Head Start student Rafael Vasquez said. "I think there are enough families that are on a low budget and that need help, especially as bad as the economy is. For me, this is great since a lot of people do need this help."

The Holiday Food Program is organized by One Voice—a non-profit organization dedicated to helping families that live within the poverty level throughout the Greater Los Angeles area. For 14 years, One Voice and the Head Start Preschool have been working together to help families in the Inglewood area are associated with Head Start.

"We do face painting, arts and crafts throughout the event--we even have a band inside," Maria Armero, Family Social Worker with Head Start, said. "These people here are all volunteers and everything is sponsored through our One Voice community partner. They are a group of sponsors that come out and donate to the community. All of the people that you see out here today, none of them are paid."

Each child will receive books and toys given personally by Santa, while each family is able to take home a food basket that includes a turkey, rolls, carrots, squash, potatoes, yams, onions, rice, beans, bags of apples and oranges, candy, a fresh apple pie and canned goods. The Holiday Food Program takes place throughout a four-day period, during which more than 2,000 volunteers gather at Barker Hangar where food is sorted out and packed into boxes and bags that are then loaded into trucks that distribute the goods to locations such as Head Start State Preschool in Inglewood.

"I have been here [Head Start] for 14 years and have been part of the event from the beginning," Armero said. "Since all of our volunteers have been with us for so many years, we have a very good idea of what it is that we need to do. We have old and new volunteers, all of which get together during a meeting before the event in order to identify where help is needed. Once we know, we then divide the volunteers so they know what to do."

At the beginning, the program's efforts reached 175 families but have since expanded to benefit more and more needy families. Throughout the Los Angeles area, approximately 2,500 families are assisted each year. In order facilitate the distribution efforts and to better pinpoint where the needs of the

Changing the Community, World One Child at a Time

By Cristian Vasquez

Since 1941 the Hawthorne Kiwanis Club has been actively seeking to ways to help the city by working with different local organizations, schools and individual families. "Our board of directors every year makes out a budget and we try to divide the money up so that it goes to the best interest of the best entities within the city," Hawthorne Kiwanis Club President and local business owner Jerry Flory said. "That is really the basis for us. It is to help develop the communities and whatever their needs are, of course with kids being the number one priority."

Throughout the year, members of the Kiwanis Club engage in a wide range of activities aimed at raising money, building awareness and engaging Hawthorne. Recently the Kiwanis hosted its annual Senior Christmas Lunch, where nearly 300 seniors gathered and enjoyed a meal with friends, fellow residents and music. "The senior lunch is something that we look forward to every year even though it is a lot of work for certain individuals," Kiwanis member Dennis Wild said. "A lot of people just get together and make it happen,"

Helping at the lunch were members of the local Key Club, which is the oldest and largest service program for high school students. This student-led organization includes teens from Hawthorne High School, Leuzinger High School and Hawthorne Math & Science Academy. Key Club members are also beneficiaries of the efforts of the Kiwanis Club. "They help with many different events throughout the city and we will sponsor them when they go to conferences out of state or in the state," Flory said. "We as a club support these kids. We have so many events in the city such as the community fair, which is our big fundraiser. We also have the fireworks stand, which is also one of our big fundraisers. Each year, the money that we develop and obtain through our fundraisers is put all back into the community. It could go to one of many different organizations in the city including the schools, which we help by giving scholarships to students around graduation time."

For Wild, who has been a Kiwanis member for 26 years, the volunteer-driven organization was an unknown entity when he first joined, but he has since seen and embraced the value of the club's efforts. Furthermore, the passion and commitment of the club members is something that Wild believes is fundamental to not just Kiwanis but to the community and its residents. "Perhaps some people join a club like this to help their business, but in our club that is not what it is all about," Wild said. "All of the members that are there now are there because they want to help the community--they want to reach out to individuals. Everything is on a volunteer basis and we work hard. Our goal is to have fundraisers to try and get as much money as we can to put back into the community."

Flory, who has been involved with Kiwanis a little more than 15 years, has also been a Little League District Administrator in Hawthorne, Lawndale, Lennox, Inglewood, Westchester and Marina del Rey for 28 years. His commitment to children through baseball and softball made Kiwanis a great second resource for him to reach out to kids in an effort to make their lives a little better.

"There are many organizations that we donate to--there are also several organizations that we bring canned food to or that we will bring presents that are unwrapped to," Flory said. "I am also part of the Hawthorne's Presidents Council and I am also a member of the Parks and Recs Foundation, which is another group that gives money back to the city. I have been really involved with the city for a long time since I have been in the city since 1956. I kind of grew up here."

Wild added, "If we can reach out and save one child from crime or from just being on the streets, then it is worth our effort to provide the funding and so forth. There are a lot of single-parent kids out there and if we can keep him from running the streets, than it is really worth it." •

Tips For Updating Your Look In Just Minutes

(BPT) - Women today are busier than ever. Sometimes doing it all means rushing home after work to get ready for a night out, or saying yes to last-minute plans. But what if there just isn't time to revamp your

Katy Atlas, well-known author of the style blog Sugar Laws, knows what it's like to do it all. She's a hard-working lawyer by day and a food, fashion and style expert by night. With her office desk often doubling as a vanity, here are some of her most-used time-saving tips and tricks for looking great all day and being comfortable from head to toe, so that you can say "Eye do it all with style."

Draw attention to your eyes

Many of us consider our eyes to be our best feature. But we're so busy that we don't have time to worry about our contact lenses throughout the day. Atlas relies on CooperVision contact lenses to keep her eyes comfortable and feeling good from morning to night. Plus, if your eyes feel great, you'll want to draw attention to them with Atlas' fashion and beauty tips.

Transitioning your makeup from a day to night look can be done in less than 10 minutes. Gently smudge your existing daytime eye shadow into the crease of your eyelid for instant smoky eyes. Then blend the same color along your lash line. Finish with an extra swipe of your favorite mascara and lightly applied bronzer along with blush to highlight your cheekbones. This will draw attention to the upper area of your face and put the focus on your eyes.

Hair for any time of day

Curls are also a great way to accentuate your eyes and give you a fun, carefree look that can easily transition from work to a night out with minimal effort. Wrap just the ends of your hair around a curling iron instead of curling from the bottom of your hair up. This will prevent that impossibleto-fix crimp. When finished, comb out the curls with your fingers to help loosen them for instant waves and wear them down or tied up in a loose knot.

The low ponytail is another sophisticated and sexy yet surprisingly effortless hairstyle that can be achieved at the office before a last-minute outing. Flatiron your hair until it's smooth and straight. If you don't have a flatiron with you, try using hair shine serum. You just want your hair to be straight, smooth and frizz-free. Then, find your natural hair part and tightly gather your hair at the base of your neck, leaving a small section loose. Secure the ponytail with a hair tie and polish the look by wrapping the loose section around the hair tie and pinning underneath.

Transitional wardrobe accessories

When you're in need of a quick outfit change after work, bring a bag with three essential accessories to the office to help you get ready in just minutes. Colorful, sparkly earrings or a necklace, a chic clutch, and wedges or high heeled ankle boots, are all you need to transform your daytime outfit into a great night-out look. Remember, don't overdo the sparkle because you want to be the focus, not your accessories. •

Vet Offers Pet Safety Tips for New Year

By Greg Perrault

If you are reading this, it means you have survived the end of the world according to the Mayan calendar. Cheers! It's now time to get matters in order for your pet in 2013.

Here is a simple check off list that every pet owner needs to do on the first of the year:

- Take a photo of your pet. Your pet's looks change with age just like us and if your pet goes missing you will need a current picture.
- Check your pet's microchip registration and update any new phone numbers or addresses. (If your pet doesn't have a chip, get one ASAP. They are inexpensive, safe and are the best form of identification.)

get the right policy for your needs. There are several companies that now offer pet health insurance. The least expensive may not be the best for your situation so always read the fine print. Most companies will require you to pay for services at the time they are rendered and then submit a form for review after your pet has received care. Reimbursement for care comes after the insurance company reviews the case and many times this may take a few weeks to a few months. If you are considering health insurance for your pet, it is important to get it early before any emergencies or health conditions arise. Most companies will request medical records from

"If you are considering health insurance for your pet, it is important to get it early before any emergencies or health conditions arise."

- Consolidate your pet's medical information into one folder. Include a list of any medicines your pet takes.
- Use technology to your advantage. You can scan and save your pet's medical records onto your phone. There are iPhone and Android apps you can download to file pet records, or you can just use a note-taking app like Evernote. You can even email medical records and pet photos to your smart phone.
- Program your veterinarian's information into your phone's address book. Include the after hours emergency clinic your veterinarian recommends.
- Program the address of your vet and the emergency afterhours clinic into your car's GPS.
- Put these things in your trunk: A spare leash, a plastic or steel bowl, some bottled water, a few cans of pet food and a blanket.

Done! That was easy.

Another important item to do for your pet on the first of the year is to make a budget. Emergencies can easily cost $2,000 to $3,000 and payment is usually due at the time services are rendered so you'll need to plan wisely. Put a set amount of money away each month for emergency care. Easier said than done, but there are a few different strategies that may help you. Here are some tips on how to manage the cost of your pet's health care.

Consider pet health insurance. Just like other forms of insurance, it's important to the previous 12 to 24 months and will not cover preexisting conditions.

If you don't like the idea of pet insurance, you should save a set amount every month. The amount should be at least the amount it takes to fill up your car's gas tank one time. This strategy can pay off if you have a healthy pet. If you don't have to use the money for emergencies, you've saved up a nice little nest egg for the future. However, you could be caught off guard if an emergency comes up before you've had a chance to build up some savings.

A better idea for most people is a combination of both insurance plus a small monthly savings. Look at the cost of the different insurance plans. Most insurance companies offer decent inexpensive plans starting around $25 per month and would cover emergencies but not routine care. In addition to the insurance, put away the same amount of money into a savings account for your pet. For example, $25 goes to insurance and $25 goes to savings. This way you are covered immediately should an emergency happen right away and you still are building a nest egg for the future.

I hope everybody is having a wonderful holiday season. I am looking forward to a great new year and wish everyone and their pets the same.

"All of our social workers here at the program are responsible for knowing the sizes and ages of all of our families," Armero said. "We go one by one through each family in the system and write a profile about them. The profile will include the child's age, its sizes and the number of members in the child's family. That is how One Voice is able to know exactly how many toys to bring and how much food to pack."

One Voice, located in Santa Monica, brought out its own volunteers to help with the day's festivities, which is also the culmination of months of planning and coordinating the logistics behind successfully organizing such an event. "Our program, One Voice and I will meet once a year to know exactly what it is that we are going to be doing," Armero said. "Everyone is here volunteering their time because they are interested. Politically Speaking

One Man's Opinion

By Gerry Chong

Among the many emotions man conveys to his fellow man, the most noble must be that of "compassion." Contained within compassion are the feelings of understanding, forgiveness, and a sharing of human frailty. For Democrats, compassion is the essential heart of their DNA and it oozes from every their children split up before the child is 10 years old, leaving the mother with years of sole responsibility of parenthood.

USA Today goes on to state that 80 percent of Black children and 58 percent of Hispanic births are to single mothers, exacerbating the problem of minority poverty.

The Heritage Foundation says children

"The Heritage Foundation says children in households with married parents are 82 percent less likely to be poor; while 75 percent of means tested welfare payments go to single parents."

pore. For Republicans, not so much. For that reason Republicans have a difficult conveying a caring but rational message to the public.

For Republicans, the need for compassion is too often brought on by a conscious, irrational act. Had that act not occurred compassion would not have been required. Let me cite an example:

We can all empathize with the plight of the single mother as she struggles to balance career and motherhood. That is compassion. But for some women, motherhood itself is an irrational act. The U.S. Department of Agriculture now estimates that it takes a minimum of $235,000 to raise a child to the age of 17. (It would take more if they were responsible for their child's Obamacare insurance until the age of 26); a sum too many mothers cannot manage on their own.

In fact, the New York Times, quoting the National Center for Health, says our nation has crossed an important threshold in that more than half of all births to women under the age of 30 are to single mothers...53 percent, to be exact. The Times goes on to state that two-thirds of the mothers and the fathers of in households with married parents are 82 percent less likely to be poor; while 75 percent of means tested welfare payments go to single parents.

Study upon study point out that children of single parents are more likely to be abused; are more likely to live in impoverished neighborhoods; are more likely to be school drop outs; and are exposed to drugs and alcohol at an earlier age. Later, they are more likely to be incarcerated and earn less than the median income. The pain and suffering are visited equally on the child, the single parent and society in general. Government spending, in no small part, is a reflection of the consequences of single parenthood.

With all of these facts well known, some might think our national leadership would make marriage a national crusade. Instead we are faced with a wall of silence on the source of the problem, focusing instead on compassion for the mother.

Hillary Clinton was wrong when she said "it takes a village to raise a child." In fact, it only takes two parents willing to take responsibility for their own acts. •

Political Penguin

By Duane Plank

Time for the year-end political review. Which is incredibly tainted after viewing the horrific events in Newtown, Connecticut a couple of weeks ago.

Now, I feel very privileged to have this bully pulpit available to me, to be able to pontificate on the body politic every week. But occasionally gets a little tough when the deadline hits a week before publication.

Specially when the carnage of Newtown occurs. Now, I am what I am. Never have fired a gun, nor a bow-and-arrow. Nor any weapon designed to kill someone else. Call me a pacifist. Or someone who doesn't need a firearm to prove my manhood. Or, I guess, to protect my acreage from the invading British hordes.

Oh yeah, that was two-hundred and forty years ago.

Just disgusted with the political opportunism that occurred after the little kids were assassinated, many of them shot in the head multiple times. Typical libs, led by the fossil California Senator Feinstein, waited for a day or two, and then blathered on for gun-control. And, the NRA morons somehow spun it, somehow, someway, that...not even sure how the gun-toting idiots could spin this carnage that was perpetrated on kids.

But, facts are facts. Innocent people died. Blown away with firearms. Sported by a 20-yearold kid. Who apparently was plagued with an ailment that has been labeled as Asperger's syndrome? Which is a mild form of autism. Thanks for a column supporter for enlightening me on that, so much was lost in what seems to always be the rush to be the first to report.

And, yes, most of the focus has been on the 20 toddlers who were blown away by the firearm-toting misfit. But adults were also gunned down, and, one boldly assumes, only because they tried to shield the young kids from the snap-crackle-pop of the angst ridden killer Lanza and his arsenal.

So the political review for 2012 will be a tad short, but will be continued next week. Maybe. Subject to breaking events that may transcend a recap of the fact that the POTUS was able to turn back a pretty darn good effort made by Mitt "The Glove" Romney and the Republicans to take back the White House.

Back in the early part of 2012, Romney was the presumed front-runner for the Elephant Party nomination. Per usual, the ebb and flow of the campaign, which the 24-7 media demands, tiltled the Republican nomination favor in the direction of some lady from Minnesota, and a pizza guy from down South, and then a canned, unemployed ex-Governor from the Keystone state. Pennsylvania, for those of you slow on the take.

Anyway, Michelle Bachmann soon gave it up, as did pizza man Herman Cain. Cain, was, ye gads, caught in some sort of possible marital scandal. Can we all grow up, folks, and realize that if alleged marital dalliances disqualified folks from attaining positions of power, we may have a pretty shallow pool of candidates to draw from?

So all of the Republican Presidential challengers, including the gadfly Newt Gingrich, who was campaigning hard as possible to sell books and pump up his appearance fees, fell by the wayside. Leaving the unemployed Santorum as the Romney alternative. Santorum was a nice story for a couple of months, but with relatively zilch dinero and no staff, couldn't compete with the Romney well-oiled machine.

More next week on this. Maybe. •

FOOD & DINING

How to Make Your Cocktails the Life of the Party

(BPT) - This time of year, homes across the country are bustling with friends and family celebrating the holidays with festive foods and drinks. Dairy products like butter, milk, cheese and cream are standard ingredients in celebratory dishes, but one area where dairy can play a starring role is often overlooked - the cocktail glass. Instead of just offering wine or beer, the California Milk Advisory Board (CMAB) has put together cocktail tips and tricks for making every gathering a happy hour at home.

1. Cheers to dairy. Served hot or cold, milky alcoholic beverages are delicious on a hot day or in the cold of winter. Cocktails made with milk can range from the classics like a White Russian to the more unusual Mardi Gras favorite Milk Punch, a somewhat lighter version of egg nog. Make sure to choose flavors and spices that complement the foods you're serving.

2. Look in the fridge. Chances are you already have everything you need to create a special cocktail or host a happy hour at home. Now is the time to use up the leftover craft beers from last week's game, that nice bottle of brandy you received as a gift and the California milk and cream you have in your fridge.

3. Apples to apples. Apples are one of those foods that everyone seems to love and that familiar apple flavor seems most welcome in the cooler, cozier months. Why not combine the iconic apple pie with a trend that is on the rise: hard ciders. With the influx of craft beer drinkers, hard ciders are coming into their own. Try creating a Belgian Hot Apple Pie Cocktail (see recipe) and wow your friends and family with your bartending skills. This cocktail takes the beloved flavor of apple pie and lights it on fire, literally.

Whenever serving alcohol in your home, make sure there's a designated driver to ensure everyone makes it home safely.

BELGIAN HOT APPLE PIE COCKTAIL

Yield: 1 serving

1 large scoop Real California vanilla ice cream 1 ounce apple brandy

12 ounces Belgian apple beer

Place ice cream in a large glass. Pour brandy into a small glass. Carefully touch a lighted match to surface of brandy to ignite it. When flames die down, pour brandy over ice cream and fill glass with beer. Serve with a spoon and a straw. •
