No End in Sight For School Board's Troubles

By Cristian Vasquez

After only two months of being introduced to as the State-appointed administrator to guide the Inglewood School District out of bankruptcy, Kent Taylor has left his post. Taylor's departure was made official on December 6 by the California Department of Education, the same agency that appointed Taylor.

"This change is in the best interests of taxpayers, students and employees of the Inglewood Unified School District," State Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Torlakson said in an official statement. "I'm confident that our work to address the District's troubled finances will proceed without interruption."

Taylor, an Inglewood High School graduate, stepped down Friday after State officials learned he had entered different financial commitments without the approval from the department--specifically a tentative agreement he made with the local teachers union without obtaining approval from the State.

"We were totally surprised pure and simple when this came about. We met with Mr. Taylor on Thursday [December 5]...he was talking to us about the food service program and other issues," Field Representative for the California Professional Employees, Local Union # 2345 Christopher Graeber said. "We were actually planning to meet with him the following day with regards to some conflicts we were having with him. So when we saw this, we were shocked."

Interim State Administrator La Tanya Kirk-Carter, whom he hired and was his second in command, will replace Taylor. However, it is yet to be determined how the decisions made by Taylor before he stepped down will affect the District after his departure.

"We are trying to see what exactly it is that he did because we had several concerns about him. We were trying to be good-natured because we were really concerned about the image of the District being so tarnished by all the scandals," Graeber said. "So we decided to work on several issues, but at the same time we had some major concerns about what he was doing that affected our livelihood and that of our members."

Working directly with Torklason is one of the demands being made by the classified employees union representatives, at least until the District is led out of its financial troubles. "Our basic concern and message to Tom Torklason is that when they appoint a new person, first we want to be part of the screening process because we felt that this person was not fit for this district," said Graeber. "We feel the brunt more than anyone else. The teachers--most don't even live in the community. Our members, at least a third of them live in Inglewood. We want to make sure the District succeeds because when it doesn't, they began to lay off classified employees. They gutter our workforce more than any other bargaining union in the District, so we want it to succeed."

The classified employees union presented a platform for accountability standards at the Inglewood Board of Education meeting in which they demanded monthly meetings with the State Superintendent of Schools to review the status of the work of the State Administrator, that the State rescinds all actions by Kent Taylor, such as suspension the Personnel Commission, direct involvement in the selection process of the next State Administrator for IUSD, full disclosure of improper actions that led to the resignation of Taylor and review of the powers and authority of a State Administrator.

"When the person gets here, we want to know precisely what authority that person has and we want to have meetings with Torklason or one of his top people," Graeber said. "We want them to meet with us when we have concerns. We understand that a State Administrator is a tough person and that they have to clean up some big messes."

There is little known as to whether or not the decisions taken by Taylor prior to his departure will stand. However, for Graeber and the classified employees, Taylor's departure is the first step to make things right. "He came in and rescinded some issues concerning our employees, but we don't know what happens now," Graeber said. "Once you do something as serious as he did, based on the State's wording, then it all becomes questionable. Once somebody lies to me, I don't trust them and some of the things this guy has done to the District are going to cause irreparable harm to the District for years. He was here for two months and I think he did more damage than the Board did--at least reputation-wise he did."

Messages left to the teachers union were not answered. •

Hawthorne Groups Make Christmas a Little Brighter

If we believe the people who say that 70 percent of the people living in Hawthorne are at or close to poverty level, then there are a lot of people who are struggling to make this Christmas a happy one for their families. That is why it is so important that the Hawthorne Presidents’ Council and the Hawthorne Chamber Commerce give out bags of food, turkeys and toys to these families who have very little. Thanks to these groups and others, Christmas will be a little brighter.

Hawthorne’s Christmas Wish List

Please Santa, give the City of Good Neighbors the following:

- Some businesses that want to set up shop at the Hawthorne Mall.
- Good Jobs to all of the unemployed or underemployed in Hawthorne.
- A safe Christmas season and 2013 for all of our residents and to those who put their lives on the line to protect us.
- Strong and wise leadership to guide our city through these tough times.

My Full Life

I find my life very “full” these days and at times “too full”. Mostly out of choice, I have committed myself to being involved in many activities and jobs. I start out by teaching high school Math at Long Beach Poly High School. After school, I change hats and travel over to the Hawthorne City Hall to check in as city clerk. Finally, a hobby of mine has turned into a small business that operates out my garage. Years ago, I made a nativity set for the front of our home. It was popular with several of the neighbors. So, I thought about making more of them to give away as presents, but the labor involved with cutting out the plywood and painting the scenes was too much. I went to a local sign maker to see what it would take to produce nativities in multiples. In 2008 we came up with a product and listed it on eBay. We thought we were doing well when we sold 21 scenes. Each year since our sales have increased. With our nativities now listed on Amazon and our own website, our product is being shipped to all parts of the country and to Canada. Our nativities are in town squares, in front of businesses, along side highways, used as props for Christmas programs and are three feet deep in the snow of Nome, Alaska. We have been able to hire help to fabricate the scenes and ship them out. As you can imagine, the Christmas season is hectic around our house. By the time Christmas arrives we are ready to rest a little. I have been blessed immensely and enjoy sharing my blessings with my family, friends and favorite charities and missions. I wish each and every one of you, my good neighbors, a very Blessed Christmas 2012 and a most productive 2013. Miracle in the Making Reaches Third Year of Spreading Hope

By Cristian Vasquez

It has been more than five years since Renee O'Neill first took her son Pat to Children's Hospital Los Angeles to begin treatment for his leukemia. Three years ago, O'Neill took her son home and he was clear of cancer with a fresh start at life. However for O'Neill, the experience of spending so much time at a hospital alongside her son marked the beginning of a passion in life--helping families whose kids are fighting cancer. Since then, O'Neill has been donating toys to kids at Children's Hospital Los Angeles that are being treated for cancer.

"While we were there, we saw the need that arises when someone becomes sick during the Christmas holiday," O'Neill said. "The children needed clothing and toys, so that first year, of our own pocket, we went and bought toys and happy meal cards [McDonald's] for the kids there. By the second year, I was more exposed and experienced since I had become actively involved with my city. The City helped me out a lot, the Hawthorne Police Department also helped and we were able to collect three huge boxes of toys. We had toys, we had clothes and we had money, which we used to buy $200 worth of happy meal cards."

O'Neill's toy collection efforts is one of many that take place at Children's Hospital Los Angeles to bring a few moments of joy and happiness for kids fighting to regain their health. "We have a wonderful toy program here, as most children's hospitals do, but ours is unique because of its size and how to receive up to five or seven toys during the one-day event. Last year there were so many toys collected, that other kids in the hospital were able to come in and pick a toy out of the box.

"Christmas for them, it's just another day and I know that because when my son was in the hospital for Christmas, we were starting to decorate--then he got sick and we had to take everything down," O'Neill said. "We couldn't have a tree, we couldn't have anything because of dust. Even though it was Christmas, it didn't feel like Christmas to us. We had to get up at six in the morning to be at the hospital at seven. He [Pat] would go through chemo--then we would come back until nine o'clock at night just exhausted."

O'Neill, who is also part of the Hawthorne Lions Club, the Hawthorne Women's Club and recently became the Director of Hospitality for the Hawthorne Historical Society, got a bit of a late start in the toy collection effort this year. Yet she is confident that she will be able to collect enough toys to bring a few moments of happiness to sick children at the hospital.

"I am really going to push it these next couple of weeks," O'Neill said. "I am going around to different companies in the city and since they know me now that I am more involved with the city, it should go well. Christmas is not about toys or having a party. I know that. It is about being with family and your loved ones, helping sick people and poor people. This is why I want to continue to do this."

"Many of the patients at Children's Hospital Los Angeles do not have toys at home and need something to keep them entertained."

we distribute our toys," Manager of Volunteer Services for Children's Hospital Los Angeles Wendi Kellaris said. "We have two arms--the inpatient and outpatient. In the inpatient, they receive a toy every week that they are here. The second arm is the outpatient clinic and the way the program is set up with the clinics is more or less based on incentive. If we have patients who have done a good job in between visits and followed their diets, did their exercises, went to physical therapy and taken medication, then they get a certificate that says 'good job' or 'good lab', meaning good lab results. The patient can bring that to us and they can go to the toy room and pick what they want."

Many of the patients at Children's Hospital Los Angeles do not have toys at home and need something to keep them entertained. In addition, it is estimated that 5,000 kids a year spend their birthday at the hospital, making the need for toys and joy even greater.

"We have a list of toys that are not only safe and hospital-appropriate, but they are popular with the patients," Kellaris said. "These are toys that we simply can't keep on the shelf because the kids like having them. They are generally things that the kids can do while in bed and that keep them busy with their minds off of their illness. We do give out a toy drive package which includes the suggested toy list."

While the hospital has many individual, private and corporate donors, O'Neill communicated with Dr. Stuart Siegel, who treated her son Pat, to bring the toys in that she collected. The toys are taken to Children's Hospital unwrapped and each child is able

In addition to providing a toy, O'Neill is driven by the fact that the few moments of joy brought to a sick child has a positive impact that nothing else can match. "For five minutes, you can make their [sick child] white cell count go up and it will keep going up, and that is what we really like to do," O'Neill said. "Being the mother of the patient, we are always looking to keep that white cell count up. When you bring them toys or good news, it goes up. I think Christmas is about giving to others and I always have, especially now that I have been brought to this Children's Hospital and I have seen the need there."

Having her son survive has given O'Neill a deeper appreciation and understanding for what the families at Children's Hospital Los Angeles are going through and keeps her motivated to fulfill her cause. "How can I not give? I have my health, I have my children and I have my husband," O'Neill said. "I have a home to live in and I have food. How can I not do something like this after having learned what these parents go through? Some of these parents are going to lose their kids. Some of these parents are going to be back there because the cancer comes back. I have lived that, so my family and I are just trying to reach out and give back to as many families as we can."

O'Neill added, "We want to let them know that there are families out there that care about them. We may not know you, but there are people out there in the world that want to do something for you. If I can be that person to get all that stuff and bring something to them, I think that's beautiful." •

Wiseburn Still Looking to Improve Fitness Test Results

By Dylan Little

During its most recent meeting, the Wiseburn School Board discussed the results from its 2012 Physical Fitness Test. While Wiseburn outpaces many of its neighboring districts, it still faces challenges in making sure students are fit.

The Physical Fitness Test is administered to fifth, seventh and ninth grade students nationwide to assess six areas of physical fitness: aerobic capacity, body composition, abdominal strength, trunk extensor strength, upper body strength and flexibility. These tests consist of a mile run, curl-ups, push-ups, behind-the-back shoulder reaches and an assessment of each student's body mass index (BMI). While over 68 percent of Wiseburn students pass five of the six categories on the test, Superintendent Tom Johnstone said that getting students to pass all the tests isn't necessarily a walk in the park. "It's very difficult to get our kids in shape in all six of the categories," said Johnstone.

"The challenge we're facing now and have been in the last few years is only 41 percent of our students meet all six standards."

Blake Silvers, Assistant Principal at Dana Middle School, agreed with Johnstone. He pointed out in his presentation on the District's results that while over 40 percent of Wiseburn students pass in all six categories, success in raising that number has been elusive for years. "The challenge we're facing now and have been in the last few years is only 41 percent of our students meet all six standards," said Silvers.

For the District, its lowest scoring category was Body Composition, which is tied to the students' BMI. Unfortunately, this area is hard to improve directly due to the body types of students, as BMI is tied to their diets and activity levels both in and out of school. Silvers said that to make progress in this category, the District needs to reach out to parents. "Body Composition is a concern," said Silvers. "We need to talk about food with their families."

While Body Composition is just one category students are tested in, it is also the most important to predicting a child's future health. According to Silvers, BMI is a more important factor than any of the other categories in the Physical Fitness Test when it comes to determining if these children will be at risk for future health complications. "BMI is the most important indicator of future wellness," said Silvers. "The percentage of 'high risk' students is increasing."

Silvers noted that while performance in categories other than Body Composition has been improving or remained the same as last year, the number of students in the "Healthy Fit Zone" for BMI has been decreasing annually, with this year only 54.9 percent of students receiving a passing rating. "We are spiraling downward," said Silvers.

Board President Nelson Martinez pointed out that another factor in the difficulties the District has had with Body Composition might be the history of cuts to physical education. With school education budgets being strained to cover core standards, areas outside of the standards in math, science and language arts have been neglected--with physical education being a ripe target for cuts to instructional hours. Martinez believes that the current increase in students' BMI can be closely tied to the decrease in physical education. "That [the lower passing rate in Body Composition] could be a result of the cuts that have been made to PE in the last 10 to 15 years," said Martinez. "I suspect that is a very strong factor."

However in previous problem areas, such as Aerobic Capacity, the District has been successful in implementing new programs that have lead to better student physical performance outside of the formal physical education curriculum. Recently, Dana has implemented a running club that has been successful not only in increasing students' aerobic strength, but also improving self-esteem with several members even completing the Los Angeles Marathon. In addition to trying to find a solution to problems in Body Composition, Silvers noted that at the middle school level, the physical education department has placed an emphasis on upper body strength. "One of the goals of the PE department at Dana is to get that upper body strength number up to 90 percent," said Silvers.

Because of the long history of testing, Silvers has been able to compare performance of students when they were fifth graders to their performance as seventh graders. He found most students are more likely to improve on the test as they age, despite the fact that the standards in the test reflect the increase in physical abilities between fifth and seventh grade. "This is interesting...it's kind of a longitudinal study," said Silvers. "As they are getting older, they are getting in better shape."

With the passage of Prop 30 and Measure CL, the District has a little bit of leeway in restructuring its secondary priorities. Johnstone cautioned that while physical education is important, to really make a meaningful impact in students' lives would require a great deal of attention and well-thought-out changes to the program. "I know we are getting pulled in many directions, but if this is something we want to do we need to focus on it," said Johnstone. "If we don't focus on it, nothing gets done." •

Childress helped Leuzinger rally from a 41-37 deficit after three quarters. Also for Leuzinger, Justin Delgado had nine points and Treyvion Anderson put in eight.

Assembly Member Steven Bradford and Senator Roderick Wright welcomed hundreds of families to Rowley Park in Gardena on Sunday for a toy giveaway and holiday celebration.

The event was the fourth annual celebration jointly hosted by the two lawmakers whose districts largely overlap one another, and include cities from Long Beach and Carson to Gardena and Inglewood.

"Every year we try to do something special for the kids around the holidays," Bradford said. "We're very thankful for all of our volunteers and generous sponsors who make this event possible."

Bradford's and Wright's offices work with non-profit organizations such as the local Boys & Girls Club and YMCA to identify families to participate in the giveaway. Every child in attendance gets a gift, and their names are entered into a raffle to win larger prizes, including bicycles, an Xbox, and digital cameras.

The festivities also included lunch, face painting, and entertainment. This year performers from Courtney's School of Dance in Gardena wowed attendees.

"It's always important to remember those less fortunate at this time of year," Bradford continued. "Especially given recent events in Connecticut, we need to be thankful for what we have and give back wherever we can."

Bradford and Wright were joined by Carson Mayor Jim Dear, West Basin Municipal Water District Director Gloria Gray, and Gardena Councilwoman Rachel Johnson. •

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on this property.

NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on this property.

NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (866)-960-8299 or visit this Internet Web site <http://www.altsource.com/MortgageServices/DefaultManagement/TrusteeServices.aspx>, using the file number assigned to this case 2011-16723.
