Zoning Amendment Public Hearing Pushed Back Pending Further Studies

By Cristian Vasquez

All five members of the Inglewood City Council agreed to push back a public hearing and requested more information before approving a zone code amendment to allow ambulance dispatch services. The Council requested to receive more concrete information regarding response data from the Fire Department. The Council asked for a specific analysis on what the response time currently is along with the percentage of response runs that would come from the current location, based on its history.

"I am sitting here in and I recognize the necessity for emergency response services, but I understand that nobody wants to live near an ambulance and fire services dispatching center," Inglewood Mayor James T. Butts said. "But I also have to know that this is absolutely necessary from our actual experience right now."

Staff presented a report to the Council proposing the zone amendment on June 19. However, no action was taken to approve the amendment pending concerns expressed by the Council with regards to the number of response calls originating from the existing ambulance service facility in the current C-1 zone. Data provided by the service provider indicates that 90 percent of the calls they respond to are addressing the emergency needs of Inglewood residents. There were also questions about fees imposed on the City for such emergency response services, which staff was not able to obtain a schedule for, although they did confirm that the County of Los Angeles established a fee schedule that it is consistent throughout the entire region.

"We are recommending that City Council adopt a negative declaration for this item and approve zoning code amendments as recommended by the Planning Commission," Acting Economic and Community Director Linda F. Tatum said. "If Council was to approve the amendment, it would not approve that particular use [for the service provider]. The provider would still be subject to come back for a SUP process through the Planning Commission and get approved before they could legally operate."

Adopting a negative declaration would only approve amending the zoning code to allow for such operations to take place in that particular area of the city. It would in no way automatically approve the current service provider, or any other interested emergency service provider, to operate from the proposed amended zone. The area of concern, downtown Inglewood, covers everything between Florence and Manchester avenues from north to south and La Brea and Prairie avenues from east to west.

"No other ambulance service is licensed to provide such service in the city. We are required to be on scene in eight minutes and we have maintained a 99.7 percent compliance rate since we began our contract in 2006," said Joe Chidley, CEO of McCormick Ambulance Services, which currently operates from the area. "They have had two sound-related complaints, but they respond code three to L.A. County Fire Department and they respond to more than 1,000 calls a month in the city of Inglewood. Denying the zone amendment would not alleviate us from our responsibility to respond within eight minutes because we would still have to post and respond to the area."

Councilmember Michael Steven expressed his concerns with approving a zoning amendment in the area given the number of complaints that his office has received with regards to the presence of the current emergency service provider. Being located in Inglewood's downtown area is a concern for Stevens, who believes this will inconvenience surrounding businesses due to the location of the service provider and the noise associated with such a service.

"I am not against McCormick Ambulance Services. When they were on Prairie and exited their lots, if they had to exit with their sirens on and their lights on, there was no disturbance to the community because across the street was the racetrack," Stevens said. "Now what is being proposed is to place them at the perimeter of our downtown area. Across the street I have senior housing where we have residents who already have a hard time sleeping as it is, for whatever reasons. They have complained to me about the noise from the facility. Once we give them a zone change, at that point and time they have a right to operate and that is the issue. We can't even place a restriction on them to not sound their siren as they are leaving because our purpose is to have them operate safely. There are so many other areas that we could place them at. What makes this facility so much better than any other available piece of property in the city of Inglewood?"

The Council was adamant about having more information before making a final decision. The issue will be revisited August 21 during a public hearing. "It is a difficult issue in the sense that we want an ambulance close by when we needed one, but we understand there is an impact to the surrounding area," Councilmember Eloy Morales Jr. said. "When we change zoning within a C-1 zone that is how we are trying to maintain it [emergency response services] close to the center of the city. We have to understand that there is always an impact, but we have to compromise and say that there is something that will benefit the entire city. It's not a perfect one, but it is a very well-thought-out option." •

A Student's Perspective Hawthorne Happenings

Back to Reality

By Glen Abalayan, Torrance High School Student

It is a shame how often people want to escape from reality. Compared to life decades ago, I do not understand some individuals' complaints of having such a hard life. It seems that there are more people complaining about their broken nails than their broken lives. It's ironic how as life gets easier, the complaints get louder. Naturally, when encountered with a difficulty, people attempt to fix what is wrong. For centuries, people have decided to act responsibly when problems arise. There is even a common proverb that says, "When the going gets tough, the tough get going." But with the emergence and accessibility of alcohol, tobacco and illegal drugs, people are irresponsibly choosing to instead mask their troubles for a brief moment instead of actually doing something to fix it.

One does not need to look very far to see the irresponsibility of certain individuals. The media is mainly responsible for this issue because of its unbridled proliferation of images and videos depicting drug and alcohol abuse. Instead of depicting how much these substances ruin lives, the media shows those taking the substances unusually merry. This common form of advertising subliminally tells the viewer that they can't be as happy unless they use their product.

Any commercial made by the liquor giants Budweiser or Heineken supports this idea. Their commercials effectively persuade customers into buying their product because of how they claim to give people happiness upon using it. Most of their commercials are in a party setting where everyone using their product has a large smile on their face and everything is happy and joyous. Some commercials even include a catchphrase such as, "Here we go." as if drinking their product will somehow take them into a "members only" utopia where problems cease to exist.

But the problem is that there isn't anything at the end of the bottle other than glass and irresponsibility. The happiness shown in the commercials hardly depict real life as the continued use and abuse of liquor result in fights, car crashes and broken families. Although they advise customers to drink responsibly, the message is sometimes difficult to find and speedily delivered to conceal it as much as possible. By hiding their advisory as much as legally possible, the companies continue to make more money because they know that blatantly telling customers to drink responsibly would reduce their sales and income.

actually take place on July 31 at 5 p.m. •

Tobacco and narcotics follow the same principles to persuade potential customers, but are more potent and dangerous. In the mid-20th Century, it was not uncommon to see someone break out a cigarette to relieve themselves of their problems for a brief moment. Today, people have moved from simple cigarettes to marijuana and other drugs to provide a stronger and longer escape from reality. This predicament is a very close prediction made 80 years ago in Aldous Huxley's book Brave New World, where citizens are sedated and are always in a euphoric state due to the extremely strong narcotics they religiously consume. At the rapid pace in which new and stronger forms of illegal substances are made, the illegal manufacturers may one day produce a product so potent that those who take it will remain in their own personal utopia and never wake up.

A major but unlisted consequence to an individual's constant flights in and out of this world is the loss of the individual's own humanity. Not a day goes by when someone is not on the news for a despicable act due to alcohol, smoking or drugs. As their ability to reason diminishes, so do the things that make them human. By taking substances to suspend reality, individuals do unspeakable things that cannot possibly happen inside a sane mind.

Suffering will always be a part of life. In its simplest form, there are only two ways to react to it: by accepting its presence and doing what is necessary to fix it, or to run away from it and merely delay its impending consequences. There is no way around it. People need to face their problems head on to finally move on. Regrettably, some cowardly people look for ways around this time-tested method and bury their problems in a sea of liquor, smoke and pills. Unfortunately, those who bury their problems become attached to their own utopia but pay the price by gradually losing their sanity. Life may be tough, but having to live a lie is tougher. •

News for the City of Good Neighbors

From City Clerk Norb Huber Good Neighbors Day A Wonderful Day!

Thank You to all the volunteers and participants in the 2nd Annual Good Neighbors Day. It was a great day in the city of Good Neighbors. From the Car Show to the Museum to the vendors fair to the food to the great live music concert, it was truly a day to remember. The site was cozy, right in front of City Hall. The big American flag on stage made the whole street look great. The program that recognized all the former city officials and some other city residents included a birthday cake and the singing of the traditional birthday song. I personally want to thank the city's public works department, the HPD, the Historical Society board and volunteers, James Osborne and his Beach Bums band for volunteering their time to be the opening act. It literally took hundreds of people to be involved with the event to make it

Many of the attendees commented on how nice the day was. We hope that this is the start of an annual tradition of celebrating Hawthorne's past and present.

Emmitt Rhodes, one of our Hawthorne famous musicians made a guest appearance and will possibly perform for us next year. We hope to invite Chris Montez to be our guest also.

Let's continue to build on this day and truly be a community of Good Neighbors.

Nominations for Citizen of the Year

Who will be Hawthorne's Citizen of the Year for 2012? It is time to submit written nominations to the Hawthorne Chamber of Commerce. There are many deserving persons across our community who never get nominated because some one doesn't take the time to nominate them. Be a good neighbor and look around at who is making a difference in our community. Nomination forms are available at the Hawthorne Chamber Office, 12629 Crenshaw Blvd, or you may simply write a letter explaining why an individual should be citizen of the year. Include both your own and their complete contact information. The surprise announcement will be made during the chamber's annual Installation of Officers and Civic Awards Breakfast, Thursday August 30, 2012, beginning at 7:30 am at the Hawthorne Memorial Center, 3901 E. Holly Park Gets Eliminated

By Joe Snyder

The Holly Park Junior Little League All-Star baseball team found the next level, the California Section 4 Tournament, a little bit too much as it was eliminated by host North Venice 11-6 on July 16. North Venice, which was the visiting team in the game, started out fast by scoring four runs in the top of the first inning.

Holly Park, however, bounced back with two runs to cut North Venice's lead to 4-2. The bottom of the first started on a double by Juan Oviedo. Aubrey Robinson followed with a base hit to score Oviedo. Issac Galen then singled, bringing home Robinson.

North Venice, though, went on to score in every inning, including two more in the top of the second, for a 6-2 lead. North Venice ended up scoring in every inning.

Holly Park got close with three runs in the bottom of the third, but North Venice kept pulling away. Down 9-5 entering the bottom of the fifth, Isaiah Flowers blasted a solo home run but North Venice would add single runs in the top of the sixth and seventh. "North Venice played a very consistent game," Holly Park manager Kevin Dawson said. "They hit the ball very well. We made too many mental errors."

North Venice was the District 25 champion and went on to lose to District 36 champion Manhattan Beach in the finals a day later.

Tri Park Ralls

The Tri Park Senior Little League All-Star baseball team failed to make the Section 4 championship series after falling to Santa Monica 7-4 on July 16 at Marine Park in Manhattan Beach. "It was a tough loss," Tri Park manager Armando Covos said. "It was a good game."

Tri Park started out well with leads of 2-0 and 4-2 entering the bottom of the fifth inning before Santa Monica, the District 25 champion, tied the game and then scored three more in the bottom of the sixth. Tri Park had a very balanced offense, according to Covos, but he credited his son Daniel and catcher Hector Garcia for strong defensive plays. Pitcher Andrew Cabrera went four innings, allowing two runs. "I give credit to Santa Monica," Covos said. "They did a very good job."

District 36 champion Manhattan Beach, which made it to the World Series two years ago and the Western Regional finals last season, won the tournament over Santa Monica on July 17.

Adam Pro Sports

Clippers or Lakers?

By Adam Serrao

It seems kind of silly to be continuously talking about basketball even though we're in the midst of what is turning out to be a great baseball season for the West Coast of the United States. Both the Dodgers and the Angels are looking like they will at very least get one of the two wild card spots available for this year's playoffs if they don't both end up making runs at first place spots. So why does the center of attention seem to stay on basketball even though the season is over and the Miami Heat have already been crowned champions? Well, besides the fact that the baseball season is an excruciating 162 games long and it is only just about halfway done, the moves being made in basketball right now will shape the entirety of next season. In other years, that still may not be enough to take baseball off of the front pages during summertime, but the difference this year has been that both L.A. teams have been the center of attention in the offseason. Both the Lakers and the Clippers have made moves to bolster their respective rosters, with maybe even more moves to come before play gets back underway. Up to this point, though, which team has had the more impressive offseason?

The Lakers have been the center of attention in Los Angeles for so long that it becomes easy to forget just how well the Clippers did last year. Not only did the team make the playoffs for the first time since the 2006 season, but they also finished only one game back of the Lakers in the Pacific Division standings. Seems Chris Paul really can make a difference to a ball club. Maybe that's why David Stern did all that he could to keep him from going to the Lakers in order to even out the amount of "power teams" in the NBA. Either way, it worked and Paul teamed up with Blake Griffin, Chauncey Billups and company to make a run at the playoffs. The Clippers' problem was that Billups got injured early in the season and took away a scoring starter and bench depth from the team. So in the offseason the Clippers have made some moves to bolster not only their starting rotation, but also their bench.

First on the list of things to do for the Clippers was to re-sign Billups--a good move, as he acts not only as a good veteran presence in the locker room, but also as a clutch scorer and a pseudo-coach on the floor. In addition to Billups, the Clippers also picked up 39-year-old veteran Grant Hill, Lamar Odom and Jamal Crawford to round out their efforts to revamp a bench that was probably the reason that they were ousted from the playoffs in the second round. From the outside, it looks like the moves that the Clippers made may not only get them further in the playoffs next season, but may also put them a step ahead of the Lakers in overall talent.

Enter Steve Nash. The Lakers acquired their new point guard in a sign and trade with the Phoenix Suns to capitalize on what might have been the biggest deal of the summer thus far. The Lakers also added free agent forward Antawn Jamison to the mix to bolster their bench and rounded out their starting five by deciding not to use the amnesty clause on Metta World Peace. As this article is currently being written, there is no new news with Dwight Howard. The Lakers have been leading the charge to acquire the big man from Orlando, but as everyone now knows, the process has become entirely too complicated to even talk about anymore. So from this point forward, let's make believe Dwight stays in Orlando at least to start off the season.

So with all of the moves made, which team will be better this season? Well, with the addition of Steve Nash, the combination of Nash and Bryant will give the Lakers a superior backcourt over Chris Paul and Jamal Crawford. Crawford can score points, but he shoots a poor average and is certainly no Kobe Bryant. With Pau Gasol and Andrew Bynum, the Lakers have more skill and athleticism in their front court than the Clippers' duo of Blake Griffin and DeAndre Jordan. Sure, Griffin is explosive and a human highlight reel, but he has virtually no outside shot. The one area where the Clippers may outdo the Lakers is in bench depth. Even there, however, the Lakers have improved over last year by adding Antawn Jamison. Jamison's career averages of 19.5 points and 7.9 rebounds per game will do much to improve a toxic bench of a year ago.

The Lakers won't be the better team just because they have the better players. The team is constructed in a way that it has not been in previous years and that alone will benefit them down the stretch and into the playoffs. Nash will become the new floor general and in the process lessen the load for Kobe offensively, giving the Lakers a fresher Kobe late into games and late into the season. Chris Paul is a good opposite to Nash, but the Clippers don't have an elite shooting guard like Kobe and they don't have an inside presence like the Lakers. Maybe if Odom returns to his Sixth Man of the Year form, the Clippers will be able to challenge the Lakers for supremacy. Grant Hill has traditionally been an excellent defender, but at age 39 he just doesn't have the knees to keep up with a player of Kobe's caliber anymore.

Nash's ability to space the floor will turn the Lakers into a team that fans throughout Los Angeles have not seen before. His skill set perfectly complements the Lakers roster and adds offensive potency to a defensively capable team--in turn widening the talent gap between the two clubs. This year, the Clippers will be good. They may even compile a better record than they did last year. But the Lakers will be better. Look for a Western Conference Finals matchup between the Oklahoma City Thunder and Steve Nash's Los Angeles Lakers. •

In 1962, the brilliant Ray Bradbury penned the gothic novel and poem Something Wicked This Way Comes, the story of a strange circus headed by the sinister Mr. Dark arriving in a small town. It is he who tattoos onto his body the picture of every victim he has conned into joining his circus, preying upon their hopes and bringing change from which they never

A presence dark invades the fair And gives the horses ample scare Chaos rains and panic fills the air When something wicked this NEWS FLASH: The Hill Pulse Opinion Research poll found that 68 percent of Americans believe Barack Obama has substantially changed the country--56 percent negatively and only 35 percent positively. Something Wicked This Way Comes.

In 1996, under President Clinton,
Congress passed the Temporary Relief for Needy Families Act (TANF). The act modified the welfare program by requiring applicants work 20 to 30 hours per week or make material efforts towards work.
Clinton said this act "ends welfare as we know it" and TANF did in fact reduce the number of welfare applicants by millions.
While the law prohibited its alteration
by executive order, on July 12 President Obama eliminated the work component of the law by executive order, thus violating the law itself.

And boiling currents pound like drums When something wicked this way comes.

On July 12, the New York Times reported that from 2008 to 2012, food stamp recipients rose by over 50 percent from 30 million to 46 million. Some of that increase was due to the recession, but according to The Times, much was due to policy changes. First, there are categorical eligibility rules declaring anyone receiving benefits from any other entitlement program automatically became eligible for food stamps. Even if a person received a flier describing the program, he became eligible. Second, any work requirement was suspended. Third, there is no maximum asset limit requirement. Fourth, the federal government offered states $50 million in bonuses to sign up applicants. So the program exploded.

When the House proposed a two percent reduction in the program, equal to $16.5 billion over 10 years, the Democratic Senate rejected that proposal.

When something wicked this way comes. By a 5:1 margin, the Senate had passed the Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA) defining marriage as between a man and a woman, and the House overwhelmingly passed the law by a vote of 342-67. Democrat Clinton signed it into law. In 2009, the Obama Department of Justice declared the law constitutional, but 18 months later Obama issued an executive order saying the DOJ would cease defending the law. In essence, Obama superimposed his view over that of both houses of Congress in clear violation of the Constitution.

Said Jonathan Turley, a liberal constitutional law scholar at George Washington University, "The Washington University, "The President is using executive power to do things Congress has refused to do. That fits a disturbing pattern of expansion of executive power. He is negating part of the criminal code because he disagrees with them. That goes beyond the pale."

'Cross this evil land ill winds blow For something wicked this way grows.

To close budgetary deficits exceeding $1 trillion every year, Obama proposes to raise taxes on 950,000 small businesses, but the Democratic Senate refuses to bring the President's proposal to a vote. The Heritage Foundation calculated that if these businesses earned an average of $250,000, their federal tax increase would be $24,888.

On July 13, Americans for Tax Reform disclosed that income taxes have reached 54 percent of the nation's GDP and the average worker must work until July 15 to pay for this year's tax burden. Something wicked this way comes.

On July 12, the Doctor Patient Medical Association polled 699 doctors, who revealed that 83 percent had considered quitting medicine because of the burdens of Obamacare. By the year 2020, the nation will face a shortage of 90,000 doctors, and of those continuing to practice 49 percent will cease accepting Medicaid patients because of excessive regulations, low-ball payments and excessive hoops required to obtain payment.

To date, Health and Human Services (HHS) had spent $1 billion to implement Obamacare and has drawn 13,000 pages of regulations. Yet the law allows HHS to spend another three years to finish drawing its regulations and procedures. One can only guess at the end result.

Political Penguin

By Duane Plank

Sometimes I tend to get a little personal in these columns. Maybe too much for some. And maybe I stray off the dotted line occasionally. Sorry. Do my best to keep the prose breezy, readable and interesting, especially with the deadlines that make some of my musings possibly a bit dated.

But off the top, I want to ask for your thoughts and prayers to be sent to Nick Ekbatani, who was severely injured in a motorcycle mishap two weekends ago. So severely injured that Ekbatani, who graduated from UCLA with a degree in political science a few years back, had to have part of his left leg amputated.

Met Nick a few times--attended a Trojan (before he was a Bruin) football game with him. He is the nephew of my high school buddy and still good friend Andy. Who waxes big-time political on some of the texts that he sends me, excoriating some of the policies and decisions made by the POTUS as he, according to Andy, and I paraphrase, continues to give away the farm.

Anyway, was dealing with my oh-so-non-important day-to-day troubles, heading to work one morning in the early gloaming, when I found out about Nick's life-threatening accident. Which kind of puts, at least for me, some stuff in perspective. Sent an e-mail to a friend that very morning, noting the terrible accident and the sadness I felt. Part of the friend's response was, "Life is so tenuous, no?"

Amen.

Okay, so had to guffaw a little bit when a story crossed the wires recently noting that the somewhat disgraced ex-Congressman from the Empire State, Anthony Weiner, was contemplating a return to the political scene a scant 14 months after his embarrassing mea culpa and exit from public service when he was outed, or he outed himself, after being caught sending suggestive Tweets and other modes of communication to women friends.

Weiner became a laughingstock for awhile, with the non-funnies like the non-watched Conan O'Brien show on some cable network that no one pays attention to, who made tawdry jokes at Weiner's expense for a few weeks. But like most media engendered maelstroms, the shelf life of the Weiner peccadilloes soon subsided and the political pundits were on to the next big thing.

Well, Weiner has stayed off of the front and back pages for the last year or so, staying out of the limelight. And remember, the guy committed no crime other than that of being so stupid and arrogant that he thought his Tweets and communications with others, randy as they may have been, would not somehow be discovered by the intrepid media-ites and make national news.

Now, and let's be honest here, gotta believe that more than a few of you out there in readerland have sent an ill-advised text, e-mail or Tweet. Or maybe even left a somewhat stupid voicemail on someone's tele? Anyway, the story goes that Weiner, who has always coveted the Mayor's chair in Gotham City, which is New York City, for some of you not up to speed, is chomping at the bit. And that the Weiner man is contemplating a run for Mayor in 2013.

Now, Weiner denies that he is plotting a comeback. But sometimes politicos may fib, right? And we all know the American public's proclivity to forgive and forget, right? Reference the Limo Liberal pin-up boy Slick Willie and his dalliance with the chubby, beret-wearing cow Monica Lewinsky.

BTW, whatever happened to the lovely Miss Lewinsky? Exhaustive research on the Internet thingee provided little new info about the woman with whom he had, according to Slick Willie, "an improper relationship." Favorite Lewinsky quote, when she deigned to sign an autograph for some moron in 1999: "I am kind of known for something that is not so great to be known for."

BTW, happy birthday to Miss Lewinsky, who celebrated her 39th a couple of days ago.

So the current POTUS has been out and about, beating the bushes, looking for every shekel as he lines his overflowing war chest for the battle with Mitt

"The Glove" Romney this fall. The President's operatives are doing their best to paint the seemingly at times befuddled and backpedaling Romney with a nasty broad brush, saying that when the Elephant Party nominee was the chief executive at a profiteering Boston-based private equity that he made a load of money. Which, as far as I understood, was the main reason to have a big business in America? To make a boatload of money for you, for your investors--and if the trickle-down thing worked out, for other folks way down on the bottom level of the food chain.

Romney, who doesn't do well when quizzed by the smart-aleck, left-leaning media-ites, finally had to stand up for a second and answer a few of the left-leaning queries. Maybe he will even release his tax returns soon?

Hey, my tax returns are out there in the public domain somewhere. Shouldn't the presumptive Republican nominee have to come clean? And maybe when "The Glove" releases his tax returns, we can all get some clarification on the somewhat murky birth certificate issue that is still, somewhat, plaguing the POTUS as he skates around the country with his palms out, grabbing as much dough as he can from the Limousine Liberals.

Out of space, but I promise that there will be a Princess Palin update next week. Seems the lass hasn't yet been invited to make an appearance at the GOP convention. Persona non grata? •

Sesame-Ginger Pork Patty with Grilled Pineapple

Ditch the bun and serve this Asianinspired pork burger with sweet grilled pineapple on top of a zesty watercressand-carrot salad. We like the taste and texture of fresh pineapple for this recipe, but canned pineapple rings work well too. Serve with short-grain brown rice.

Servings: 4 servings Total Time: 35 minutes Ease of Preparation: Easy

Ingredients:

- 3 tablespoons reduced-sodium soy sauce
- 2 scallions, chopped
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 tablespoon minced fresh ginger
- 2 teaspoons sesame oil, divided
- 1 pound ground pork
- 1 tablespoon rice vinegar
- 4 pineapple rings, 1/4 inch thick
- 4 cups watercress (about 1 large bunch), tough stems removed
- 1 cup shredded carrot Steps:

1: Preheat grill to medium-high (or see Stovetop Variation).

2: Combine soy sauce, scallions, garlic, ginger and 1 teaspoon sesame oil in a small bowl. Place pork in a medium bowl. Add half of the sauce mixture to the pork and gently combine without overmixing. Form into 4 patties, about 3/4 inch thick. Add the remaining 1 teaspoon sesame oil and vinegar to the remaining sauce mixture and set aside.

3: Oil the grill rack (see Tip). Grill the burgers, turning once, until an instant-read thermometer inserted in the center registers 155°F, 4 to 5 minutes per side. During the last 3 minutes of cooking, add the pineapple rings to the grill and cook, turning once, until dark grill marks appear.

4: Combine watercress and carrot in a large bowl. Toss with 2 tablespoons of the reserved sauce. Divide the salad among 4 plates. Top each portion with a pineapple ring and a burger. Drizzle any remaining sauce on top.

The undersigned caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the county where the real property is located. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction.
