LA Rams, Target Join Inglewood PD

Last Saturday morning, the Los Angeles Rams joined the Inglewood Police Department and the Target Corporation for the 2017 Shop With a Cop Initiative held at the Inglewood Target. This year, Inglewood PD decided to partner with Aidan's House, a non-profit organization serving as a supportive resource for families with special needs children. Each child from Aidan's House received a $100 Target gift card and was paired with an Inglewood PD officer and Rams personnel to guide them through the aisles and purchase items on their holiday wish lists. Here is a group shot from the event. Photo by Will Navarro

New Laws Passed to End Pay Gap and Harassment in the Workplace

By Rob McCarthy

South Bay employers next year will be paying more and asking less when the state's minimum wage rises again and a new law ends the practice of asking prospective employees how much they've earned at past jobs.

The hike in the minimum hourly wage to $11 is just one of the changes that companies must incorporate into their employment practices in the new year. The state minimum wage is scheduled to increase every year on January 1 until it reaches $15 in 2022. Companies with 26 or more employees must pay $11 per hour, while smaller employers are required to pay $10.50 per hour next year.

Employers, particularly food service and retailers, could choose to reduce employees' hours to lessen the impact of the wage hike on payroll and operating expenses. Economists predicted when passed in 2015, the $15 minimum wage law would hurt employment by forcing business owners to cut staff and hours.

The other pay-related change ahead for South Bay companies is AB 168, which the Legislature approved in hopes of narrowing the gender pay gap for women. Employers no longer can ask a job candidate about his or her salary history, and instead must provide a salary range for the position if asked what a position pays.

Using salary history in pre-employment screening contributed to the gender pay gap, the bill's supporters said. Men traditionally earn higher salaries than their female counterparts for doing the same work, and knowing salary history gave employers an unfair leverage in salary negotiations, according to supporters of the bill.

A person's salary history cannot be a criterion when a company is considering making an offer of employment either, under the new law. The Legislature a year ago approved a less restrictive law that a company could not rely to past salary to justify a wage gap between two employees with the same job responsibilities.

The new law is a total ban of the practice, however. If the applicant "voluntarily and without prompting" provides his or her salary information, the employer may use it "in determining the salary for that applicant," under the new pay equity law.

AB 168 applies to all employers, including state and local government employers and the Legislature. Violation of the "don't ask, don't tell" rule governing past salary is a misdemeanor, subject to a penalty. The Western States Trucking Association denounced the law, saying it "effectively eliminates an employer's ability to negotiate wage, as well as creates a new reason to sue." The San Jose School District in the Bay Area also opposed the bill, saying that salary history information was valuable in assessing the quality of candidates for teaching jobs.

Local legislators Assemblywoman Autumn Burke, D-Inglewood, and State Senator Ben Allen (D-Redondo Beach) supported the bill's passage. Assemblyman Al Muratsuchi (D-Torrance) did not cast vote on AB 168.

Ahead of the change, employers are being advised to revise job applications, all hiring forms and notices--both online and hard copies. Company hiring materials should omit any questions that could seek salary history information, and policy and procedure manuals for interviewing and screening job applicants should be revised, according to employment law firms.

Another change coming for human resource professionals and employment agencies is known as the "ban the box" law. Much like the salary question, employers no longer may ask job applicants during the interviewing process if they've been convicted of a crime. An employer can, however, withdraw an offer of employment to a candidate if a conviction or criminal history shows up on a background check.

Employers with five or fewer employees are exempt, as are a small number of jobs. Those include government positions that require a criminal background, farm labor contractors and criminal justice positions.

Other employment-related changes happening on January 1 include:

Unpaid parental leave: The New Parent Leave Act expands the state's family rights law to allow employees who work for an employer with 20 employees to take 12 weeks of unpaid leave when a child is born. The existing law applies only to companies with 50 or more employees. This change is expected to affect 2.7 million working Californians, and applies both to private and public employers.

Parents of newborns, adopted or foster children are eligible for unpaid leave to bond with a child. Parents who work for the same employer can be asked to share the 12-week leave. Workers may use vacation, sick days or paid personal time off as compensation during their new state-mandated family leave.

Whistleblower protection: Senate Bill 306 will expand claims of retaliation by employers against whistleblowers who report alleged workplace violations. It allows the Labor Commissioner to launch an investigation of employers, with or without a complaint being filed. Current law authorizes labor commission investigations only when an employee files a complaint.

California law makes it illegal to retaliate against any employee who provides information to a government or law enforcement agency when the employee has reasonable cause to think there is a violation or noncompliance with the law. Workers in whistleblower cases cannot be fired, demoted suspended or disciplined for their actions. Employers who retaliate face civil fines of up to $10,000, not including penalties levied by the labor commissioner.

Coverage requirements for workers' comp: Professional corporations owned by eight or more partners can apply to be exempt from the state's workers' compensation coverage requirements for the owners. The workplace accident policy needn't include the professionals and directors of the corporation's board if they waive their right to coverage, under the new law. This change, supported by the California Medical Association, is expected to save South Bay medical practices up to $18,000 per year on their workers' comp insurance.

Current law made the opt-out available only to partners with at least a 15 percent ownership stake. State Senator Steven Bradford, D-Gardena, sponsored the bill that lowers the ownership stake to 10 percent, making South Bay medical and other professional practices with 10 or more partners eligible for the workers' comp policy savings. •

Wiseburn School Board Holds First Meeting in Douglas Facility

By Duane Plank

Five weeks after the Wiseburn Unified School District (WUSD) students moved into the glistening new retrofitted building located on Douglas Street, the Wiseburn School Board members held their first meeting in the first-floor room of the new high school last Thursday.

The open session, which started at 7 p.m. and ended at 8:45, featured the selection of member JoAnne Kaneda as the new President. Kaneda, who served two terms on the Board from 2001-2009, rejoined the group in 2014. She received her MBA from Drake University and brings her vast managerial skills, sharpened in the aerospace industry, to her new post.

Kaneda thanked outgoing President Israel Mora for his contributions and noted the District was in a "time of transition," as the search for a new superintendent kicks into high gear. She accepted her new position on the Board, saying, "I am honored and a little awed. I look for everyone's help [in this transition time]."

Selected to the Vice President/Clerk position was Roger Banuelos, who thanked Mora for his leadership as the District moved forward with innovative learning programs and shepherded the construction of the new high school.

During the members comments portion of the meeting, Mora thanked all involved for the success that the high school has become, mentioning that he wanted to thank District Director of Facilities Planning Vince Madsen for the near completion of construction. Mora noted that he had "walked the streets" on Douglas when the proposed high school was in its blueprint stage.

Prior to the selection of Kaneda and Banuelos, the members were privy to three special presentations—with the lengthiest made by Da Vinci School Real World Learning School Director Natasha Morse, focusing on the existing "Real World Learning" programs in place at Da Vinci Schools.

Morse noted that the programs provide students with the necessary skills "that can't be taught within the core academic curriculum through industry partner-supported learning experiences such as project support, internships, mentorship, workshops and tours." She said that in the 21st Century, students need to develop strong skillsets in critical thinking-problem solving, communication-collaboration, and creativity-innovation. By partnering with local industry professionals, she said, the goal is "to ensure that students are ready for careers in the rapidly changing workforce." Morse added, "We are trying to bridge the gap between education and employment."

Michelle Rainey, Principal of the Da Vinci Innovation Academy, also presented to the Board, briefly touching on whom the Innovation Academy serves, and how it strives to "create curriculum that inspires students and prepares them for a life of curiosity and learning." She also shared a video that was put together by academy students, showing the benefits of participating in the DVIA program. Rainey said that her program includes 400 students, which combines campus learning, home-schooling and independent study.

The third presentation of the evening was made by a quartet of women who had developed a foreign language survey as they attempt to inculcate the District in a dual-language program, centering on Mandarin and Spanish. The results of the survey, they posited, showed that more than 75 percent of the survey respondents said the addition of "Language Immersion" was an incentive to stay in, or permit into the WUSD. Board member Neil Godman, who has worked closely with the proponents of the Language Immersion proposal, said that "if they are the wave of the incoming parents, boy, we are in good shape."

The balance of the meeting included the Board members making their reports, which mainly focused on the opening ceremony held on December 9, with the members lauding the hard work put in to make the vision of Wiseburn High School a reality. They also got input from Madsen on several of the challenges and costs associated with the facility construction "change orders."

Five days prior to the meeting, the kick-off ceremony at the beautiful four-story edifice went off without a hitch—unless you may consider it a hitch that the 80-plus-degree weather drove some of the attendees to seek cover during the 75-plus-minute opening ceremony, which featured speeches from many of the people who made the state-of-the-art campus a reality.

The building perched where formerly stood a Northrop Grumman office structure back in the day, on the west side of Douglas Street at 201 North. It officially accepted students as of November 8. The initial construction and retrofitting process has taken two years.

Dignitaries who were key players in the project, like Superintendent Tom Johnstone, who will be retiring at the end of the school year; Mora, who has served the District since 2001; El Segundo Mayor Suzanne Fuentes; and Da Vinci Schools CEO Matt Wunder addressed the hundreds of attendees—some who occupied folding seats, fanning themselves from the rage of the unseasonable weather while others sought shelter under the overhang of the building.

Mora commented that he has "spent the last 16 years working on the Board, working on the dream of creating a world-class high school for the Wiseburn community," noting the support of the community in the passing of bond measures to fund the massive project.

In his speech, Johnstone thanked all the key players responsible for the new building, mentioning a favorite quote from George Bernard Shaw regarding the "unreasonable man, who adapts surrounding circumstances to himself. All progress depends," the quote continues,

"on the unreasonable man."

"I am proud to say," Johnstone said, "that nothing we have done to get here today has been reasonable."

The striking utilization of glass was a key component in the architecture of the building, which has more than 70 state-of-the-art classrooms and can house up to 1,600 students along with 200 administrators, faculty and staff.

Branded Phase 1 of the sprawling project, the building towers over Phase 2 of the construction, with work continuing to the north of the high school on the El Segundo Aquatics Center, gymnasium and soccer fields. Phase 2 facilities are scheduled to be completed in June, prior to the day Johnstone, whose office is located on the ground floor of the building, packs up his belongings and rides off into the sunset years of retirement.

Madsen, who was unable to attend the opening ceremony, but was present at last Thursday's Board meeting, was front and center Thursday night, answering members' inquiries and helping them address a lengthy list of change orders for both phases of the continuing project.

Post-meeting, Madsen emailed, "Now that we have occupied the school building, the District is working with the construction management firm to finalize the cost impact caused to the project by the loss of the electrical contractor after they went out of business. The District has been challenged on Phase 2 of the new campus with the multiple soil conditions as well. The existing soil conditions have impacted the budget and the schedule to the gym and pool. The District is working on solutions and options to recover time to the schedule and some cost-saving options to help with the budget pressures."

The next regularly scheduled WUSD Board meeting is on the agenda for Thursday evening, January 11. •

Top Tips for Selecting Unique Decor Gifts for Everyone on your List

(BPT) - As you strive for a happy holiday, do all your gift ideas seem ho-hum at best?

It's a common holiday conundrum: You want to show all your friends and family that you care, but finding the right present seems impossible. If you feel stuck, look for gifts that will enhance the home, because there is truly something for every personality. Skip the candle and coaster set and instead check out these unique, personal items that add fun and flair to any home, big or small.

Aquariums: Traditional rectangular aquariums are bulky and cumbersome, but now there are stunning new tabletop options perfect for everyone on your list. The biOrb TUBE 15 aquarium is designed to give a 360-degree view and features multi-color LED lighting with remote control for an eye-catching way to enjoy fishkeeping. The TUBE 15 is also a low-maintenance gift given its 5-step filtration that maintains a clean, healthy aquatic environment to achieve ideal pH balance. Enjoy the dazzling sight of bubbling water and an impressive light show all year long.

Decorative pillows and throws: Winter is the perfect time to cozy up at home, but that tattered old blanket just won't do. You can encourage friends and family to get some much-needed R&R by gifting them new pillows and a fluffy throw blanket. Fun pillows are available in unique designs that feature different pictures, words or phrases, so it's easy to find something just right for that someone special. Add a coordinating throw blanket and get ready to cuddle through all of winter's chilliest nights.

Restored photographs: Going for tears of joy? One home decor gift that will tug at the heartstrings is framed photography. A nice portrait is always a great gift option, but this year surprise your loved ones by finding old photography and getting it restored. That photo of Grandpa fishing or of all your aunts as children is sure to bring back memories. Place in a nice frame and it is guaranteed to be an unforgettable gift that will be proudly displayed for years to come.

Personalized signs: One of the year's most popular decorating trends is custom signage. Often made from wood, these signs are painted or carved with your preferred message. That means it can be customized to suit even the most difficult people to shop for. Popular verbiage on a custom sign includes the family surname with an "established" date. You could also include a literary phrase or personal mantra that your loved one enjoys. Because the message is personalized, you can make it perfect for everyone on your list.

Himalayan salt lamps: When the holiday festivities are over, it's time to settle in and deal with Old Man Winter until springtime arrives. The soft glow of salt lamps brings a warmth to rooms on the dreariest days. Made from large pieces of salt, these lamps have an almost rock-like quality with veins of white, pink and peach throughout. Some people claim they also help maintain good indoor air quality and help with Seasonal Affective Disorder (SAD). No matter what, they are a happy addition to any room: bedroom, office or living room.

The person who has everything? Check. The hard-to-shop-for teen? Check. The newlywed couple settling into their home? Check. Home decor gifts are great for everyone on your holiday gift list, and best yet, they won't be like anything else your loved ones receive, making your gift memorable and truly cherished. •

HAWTHORNE BUSINESS EXPO

Councilmember Olivia Valentine is spearheading the event once again this coming year to help our local businesses succeed. The date is set for January 24th at the Memorial Center. We look forward to having even more vendors there to provide excellent information and offer services to allow our small business owners an opportunity to not only survive but to thrive.

HAWTHORNE IS HIP, HAWTHORNE IS COOL

An article last week in the LA Times highlighted the great things happening on the east side of Hawthorne these days. SpaceX, Tesla Design Center, the Boring Company, the LA Ale Works, two Marriott Hotels being dropped into place over by City Hall, the new Arts District all contribute to Hawthorne becoming a hip place to set up shop. Things are really cracking now that SpaceX has jettisoned the negative press on the City of Good Neighbors. Everyone loves a winner and Elon's team is winning. Everyone wants to be around something exciting. Now, it's cool to say you have a business in the warehouse district around Crenshaw Blvd. Amazon Fulfillment is over there on El Segundo Blvd. The Green Line Housing development is ready to take off. Hawthorne is HIP now. The Times article even said that Hawthorne was a destination city for people looking for a startup location. Pretty soon someone will even say it's groovy to live and work in our fine city. If you are old enough to know what it means to be groovy then I know why you are reading my column. You come from the old school days when newspapers were THE way to find out the latest news. There were no morning news TV shows, no internet, no twitter, no texting, no president insulting or attacking his enemies before we awake. Hawthorne is on a roll, it's nice to be rolling in the right direction.

THANK YOU FOR READING

My readership must be growing, judging by the responses I get. It is probably up from 5 to maybe 8 this past week. Wow! A 60% increase in readership! One reader wanted a nativity scene, which I delivered personally. One reader thanked me for reminding her of the way Hawthorne used to be. One said that he wants to have a cold one with me after I retire from my teaching job. (I told him I don't drink.) One reader came up to me and told me he enjoyed reading my ramblings. Of course all of my relatives have either stopped reading my column or they think I'm full of it. I'm "over" all of this crap. My old lady knows I'm a knucklehead. I don't give a darn what my readers think, I don't write to please anyone. I write to let my "inner self" out. This is the one time all week when I have the opportunity to "let loose". I can say things like, "thank you Mr. Trump for giving a lot of people enough money to buy my nativities". Since I'm a "lame duck" teacher, city clerk and columnist, I can pretty much say anything I darn well like. As a Christian I have been set free to live, really live. If you don't know Jesus whose birthday we are celebrating, I feel for you. Jesus has set me free to live and to love and not worry about what others may think of me. He was born to bring life. Jesus is everything and all that I need. My Christmas prayer is for more people to come to know this Jesus as their savior. Going to church may be "old school" but it works for me. I find the strength and courage to live life when I know who God is and how he loves me so much. Take out your Bible this Christmas and read Luke 2, John 3, Galatians 2:20 and Romans 8:28. Read and remind yourself of some of God's promises, then walk over to your refrigerator and pour yourself a nice cold one. Life is to be lived. Live it well. Live it in freedom, freedom from knowing whose birthday we toast. Time for a merry birthday party. A most, blessed Christmas to all of my readers. Merry Christmas! •

Tips For Helping Reduce The Burden Of Alzheimer's Caregiving

(BPT) - Caring for someone with Alzheimer's or other dementias is exceptionally demanding, and especially challenging. The caregiving needs of people living with Alzheimer's are not only often more extensive, but are often needed over many years - even decades.

A recent survey by the Alzheimer's Association indicates many caregivers are not getting the help and support they need - a whopping 84 percent of caregivers say they would like more support in caring for someone with Alzheimer's, especially from family members.

"Too many people are shouldering the caregiving burden alone," says Ruth Drew, director of information and support services at the Alzheimer's Association. "Many people want or would welcome help, but they are reluctant or just too overwhelmed to ask."

Tips for Supporting a Caregiver

Providing help and support to caregivers can be easier than most people think. Even little acts can make a big difference, Drew says. The Alzheimer's Association offers these suggestions:

Learn: Educate yourself about Alzheimer's disease - its symptoms, its progression and the common challenges facing caregivers. The more you know, the easier it will be to find ways to help.

Build a team: Organize family and friends who want to help with caregiving. The Alzheimer's Association Care Team Calendar is a free, personalized online tool that allows helpers to sign up for specific tasks, such as preparing meals, providing rides or running errands.

Give a break: Spend time with the person with dementia, allowing the caregiver a chance to run errands, go to their own doctor's appointment or engage in an activity that helps them recharge. Even one hour could make a big difference in providing the caregiver some relief.

Check in: Many caregivers report feeling isolated or alone; make a phone call to check in, send a note or stop by for a visit.

Tackle the to-do list: Ask for a list of errands that need to be done. Pick up groceries or dry cleaning, or even offer to shuttle kids to and from activities.

Be specific and be flexible: Open-ended offers of support ("Call me if you need anything," or "Let me know if I can help.") may be well-intended, but are often dismissed. Be specific in your offer ("I'm going to the store, what do you need?"). Continue to let the caregiver know that you are there and ready to help.

Help for the holidays: Help caregivers around the holidays by offering to help with cooking, cleaning or gift shopping. If a caregiver has traditionally hosted family celebrations, offer your home instead.

Join the fight: Honor a person living with the disease and their caregiver by supporting the Alzheimer's cause. Volunteer at your local Alzheimer's Association office or participate in fundraising events.

"It's a mistake to assume caregivers have everything under control," Drew says. "Most caregivers can use and would appreciate help. No one can do everything, but each of us can do something."

Los Angeles Chargers Lose Control of Division

By Adam Serrao

Right when the Los Angeles Chargers began to instill a bit of faith in their fan base, they traveled to Kansas City to take on the Chiefs and put up a dud. With a 30-13 loss at the hands of their rivals from the AFC West, the Chargers not only suffered their first defeat in their last five games played, but also gave up control of the division with just two games remaining. Leading up to this game--the team's biggest matchup of the season--the Chargers had won seven of their last nine games and were being heralded as one of the best teams in the AFC. Now, with the loss, Los Angeles must win out if they want any chance at even making the playoffs at all.

Arrowhead Stadium has its own way of making all opponents who take the field shrink down and gradually disappear. Just ask the Oakland Raiders, who flew to Kansas City the week before and yet failed to show up to the game once the play clock started ticking. Philip Rivers and company experienced a similar fate last Saturday night at Arrowhead. With a top spot for the AFC West on the line, Rivers threw three interceptions and the Chargers surrendered 20 straight points to take a 17-point loss.

"Maybe we made this game bigger than it really was," Los Angeles coach Anthony Lynn explained after the loss. "As a young team mixed with some veterans, we have to mature and get our guys ready to play. And that's on me." As the loudest stadium in all of football, Arrowhead and its Chiefs fans have their own way of making teams nothing short of a bit uneasy. After already experiencing a season of highs and lows, Charger fan themselves are now experiencing that same uneasy feeling as their 7-7 record means that the team no longer controls its own fate for a playoff spot and an AFC West crown.

With the New York Jets and the Oakland Raiders as the only two teams remaining on the schedule for L.A., it's quite possible that Los Angeles can win out and find themselves sitting pretty with a 9-7 record on the season. Even that record, however, would necessitate that the team receive some help in the form of losses from other playoff hopefuls like the Baltimore Ravens, Tennessee Titans and Buffalo Bills, amongst others--or even see the Chiefs lose both of their last two remaining games. "Our playoffs have begun," Lynn continued. "And there's no absolute that we're going to the playoffs, even if we win the next two games. But if we don't [win], we damn sure ain't going."

Unfortunately for the Chargers, the football game isn't the only thing that the team lost. As one of the healthiest teams in the league, a matchup against their interdivisional rivals certainly took its toll on the roster. During the game, Los Angeles lost starting linebacker Denzel Perryman, defensive tackle Corey Liuget and safety Adrian Phillips. They also witnessed star wide receiver Keenan Allen get carted to the locker room with a back injury and saw injuries occur to linemen Joe Barksdale and Russell Okung.

The Chargers began the season by taking losses in each of their first four games. Since that time, the team went on to win three in a row and seven out of their next nine as analysts around the NFL began to qualify Los Angeles as one of the league's most impressive up-and-coming teams that even had the chance to challenge the likes of the vaunted New England Patriots. Rivers was playing like a man on fire, the team wasn't turning the ball over, they weren't making mistakes and the defense was playing as one of the top units in the leagues. That all changed in just one game. The Chargers turned the ball over four times, with Rivers leading that charge. They were penalized nine times for 61 yards while missing tackles and even gave up three touchdowns and 30 points--the highlight of which was a 60-yard grab by Tyreek Hill as he zipped past Casey Hayward and flashed the "peace sign" while on his way into the end zone for seven.

"We kind of fell apart in a sense," Rivers said. "We just didn't execute. Obviously, give them credit. But just what we talked during the last four games, not turning the ball over and getting takeaways, we were just the opposite of that today." One of Rivers' worst games of the season couldn't have come at a worse time. With the loss, the Chargers now--according to ESPN's Football Power Index--have only a 17 percent chance to reach the postseason.

Instead of seizing the moment last Saturday night in Kansas City, the Chargers dropped the ball, figuratively and quite literally. The Chiefs have now beaten their rivals eight straight times, but perhaps none bigger than last week's 30-13 final that for all intents and purposes ended Los Angeles's playoff hopes prematurely. In the end, a Chargers team that was much different from the one that its fans were getting to know and love happened to appear once again. Now the only question remaining is whether or not Rivers and company still have some fight left in them or whether they'll roll over and fall into an abyss similar to the one that the team has experienced in seasons past. •

Democrats Need to Stop Asking Al Franken to Reconsider Resigning

By Cristian Vasquez

With the recent special Election defeat of accused pedophile Roy Moore, Democrats took in a breath of fresh air along with the Senate seat that was up for grabs. Throughout the election, Moore's reputation for scouting malls and high school football games for underage friends was put at the forefront of why he was unfit for office. However, today Democrats are having a change of heart regarding Senator Al Franken.

With at least four allegations against the former Saturday Night Live writer, Franken announced earlier this month that he would be stepping down from his position, but never really gave a timeline. To be clear, Senator Franken should leave. He made a choice to deal with these accusations while not being a public servant--and just a month ago, many Democrats vocalized their support for his decisions. Which makes the recent news that four of Franken's fellow Democrats have come out and expressed their desire that he reconsider resigning.

The list asking Franken to reconsider includes West Virginia Senator Joe Manchin, Senator Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.) and Senator Kirsten Gillibrand (D-NY). An article by Politico.com reports that Leahy initially issued a statement calling for Franken's resignation, but has since expressed regrets in private. Even more frustrating is Manchin, who under the guise allowing an Ethics Committee investigation, has asked Franken to reconsider and described Democrats reaction to the accused Senator as "atrocious."

Manchin and his colleagues need to stop. Asking someone to resign because of sexual assault isn't atrocious. Sexual assault is atrocious. The hypocrisy behind asking Franken to stay in office after the party spent an entire special election campaigning against a candidate accused of a sexual crime is nauseating. Asking Franken to go through an Ethics Committee investigation before resigning is no different from Moore supporters arguing that the Alabama judge was never found guilty of a crime. Asking for this investigation is no more than a stall tactic. It's a distraction that would delay the vulnerability of the Senate seat. It is a smokescreen so that people might stop talking about Franken and move on to the next headline. Democrats just gained ground in the Senate by defeating an accused sexual deviant and now they want to preserve power by asking that an accused sexual predator be given a proper investigation. You can't have it both ways, Democrats.

In addition, Franken decided to leave on his own but he really didn't set a date. So if Democrats are looking to buy time, the Senator has done a great job so far of giving them a chance to find a party candidate to fill the Minnesota seat. I get it: these four Democrats do not speak for the entire party. Yet, it is still a shame that after a winning a major campaign fighting an accused sexual predator, these senators turn around and ask for leniency on behalf of their own accused pervert. •

Has Sexual Harassment Plague Finally Reached a Tipping Point?

By Duane Plank

As another wave of politicians, industry titans, celebrities and now sports-related folks see their careers and reputations blown to smithereens by allegations of sexual harassment, one wonders if this is just the tip of the iceberg, or the tipping point in how alleged salacious behavior, or worse, is dealt with.

Ever since Hollywood impresario-mogul-pervert Harvey Weinstein got very chummy with a potted plant, and women began to go public with their stories of sexual harassment--or worse--the deck of cards, so help me, Kevin Spacey, has crumbled to the floor.

Careers that took years to build and foster have basically been vaporized, rightly or wrongly. You should be familiar with the names. Senators John Conyers and Al Franken: done. Familiar omnipresent celebrities who entered our house every morning like Charlie Rose and Matt Lauer: quickly shown the door. Titans in industry and Hollywood, and lower-level pols too numerous to mention, have been forced to resign because of alleged improprieties.

And recent allegations against men working in sports related fields, talking heads on the NFL Network, and men working at eponymous ESPN, have now been either suspended or canned with their careers in jeopardy because of harassment allegations--most of which are denied by those charged with the misdeeds.

Losing a job is one thing, though. Losing a life over an allegation is another. Kentucky

State Representative Dan Johnson apparently committed suicide last week when faced with allegations, which he denied, that he had diddled with a teenage girl.

So where do we go from here? Is everyone accused of some type of sexual harassment automatically expected to resign? And what is the definition of sexual harassment and what penalties should the...alleged...perpetrators face? Many moons ago, back in the sixties, the great Supreme Court judge Potter Stewart, when asked what he viewed as obscene, opined, "I know it when I see it."

Is that the threshold that now exists in the continuing social media junk pile America has become? A judgment call: we know it when we see it?

So, what defines sexual harassment in the workplace, or anywhere else in society? Obviously, attempted or completed rape is a heinous offense and should be prosecuted to the full extent of whatever law we have left in this country. Also on the harassment list would be sending lewd photos via a smartphone, so help me, Anthony Weiner. Unwanted touching qualifies, methinks.

But what about a simple flirtatious remark or suggestion? Which is now being reported by the offended parties X-years after the comment? And may have happened outside of work? Should people's careers be torched in that case? A life lost? •

Notice To Potential Bidders: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. Notice To Property Owner: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (877) 440-4460 or visit this Internet Web site www.mkconsultantsinc.com, using the file number assigned to this case 170817221. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. Purrrfect Companions

Amelia

Saving one animal may not change the world, but it will change the world for that animal. Share your love this season by adopting one of these wonderful kitties.

Amelia is a princess. If you desire a gorgeous, glamorous kitty with long fur, celadon green eyes and a floofy tail, then she is the kitty you have been waiting for. If you relish having a distinctive kitty, an unusually large girl and a double polydactyl with extra toes on all four snowshoe-sized feet who likes to walk on her leash and harness, then you will want Amelia. She may not be a lap cat or like to be held for long, but you will love having her beauty and grace in your life and your home. Amelia enjoys your affection and your caresses, and will enthusiastically rub back and forth against your legs--especially when there is a hint of food involvement. This beautiful girl will delight you in her love of play with toys and bring joy to your home.

Aspen is the mama's boy of his litter. At three weeks old, he was brought in with his brothers Jackson, Whistler and Tahoe. As the runt of the litter, he received the most attention--which probably turned him into the mama's boy he is today. Aspen loves falling asleep on people, being carried and falling asleep with his toys. He's the rational one of his brothers and will second-guess activities like looking in the trash or playing with toilet paper, but then joins in anyway. Aspen is very attached to his brothers. If he can't find them, he will cry--so it would be great if he could get adopted with one of them.

Tahoe may not look like his brothers (Jackson, Aspen, and Whistler), but he loves them dearly. He does have separation anxiety and likes to self-soothe by suckling on their tummies sometimes due to being taken away so young. Tahoe starts purring the moment you touch him, and loves being cuddled up to either his person or his brothers. He's very curious and loves investigating new and exciting spaces like closets and bathtubs. He enjoys a lot of attention and love and will definitely return the favor.

Whistler is the biggest out of his brothers and he knows how to throw his weight around. He has a wonderful appetite and strikingly handsome features. Whistler is very alert and very mischievous, often bringing his brothers into his shenanigans. He is extremely playful and has lots of energy. It would be ideal to get adopted with one of his brothers, so he has a playmate and a partner in crime. Whistler is going to grow into such a handsome cat and will thrive wonderfully in his new home.

Jackson is a very affectionate little boy. Like his brothers, Whistler and Aspen, he is a Siamese mix. He is a little shy at first, but comes around and just loves being doted on. He weaned very early and needs a lot of love and affection. Jackson is also attached to his brothers, so being adopted with one of them would mean the world to him.

Cara is a beautiful all-gray girl. She is confident and calm in new situations. Sweet and cuddly, Cara would love to be your lap cat! She is also very playful and affectionate. Cara would enjoy a home with one of her siblings, but will entertain all offers. Her siblings J.D., Harmony, Mikey and Tabitha are also available for adoption and can be seen on our website.

Ghirardelli is his given name, but he wears a tuxedo and is quite the charmer. Other kitties know him as "Bond, James Bond." He prances around in his immaculate tuxedo showing off how handsome he is. Ghirardelli chases his brother, Cadbury, pounces on him and then rolls around. He has an enormous amount of energy and can play for hours before he has to take a nap. It would be a great idea if he would be adopted with his brother Cadbury so he can have an active playmate. Or he could be adopted into a home with a young, active cat.

Like his brother, Ghirardelli, Cadbury is rather dashing in his gray and white tuxedo. He loves showing it off to all who will take notice. Even though Cadbury chases his brother and rolls around on the ground, his tuxedo is always purr-fect. And he is always ready for a formal occasion, like New Year's Eve. Wouldn't you love to celebrate with him? Cadbury would enjoy that! With his playful energy, being adopted with his brother Ghirardelli, or into a home with a young lively cat would be the ideal situation for Cadbury.

These kitties are available for adoption through Kitten Rescue, one of the largest cat rescue groups in Southern California. All our kitties are spayed/neutered, microchipped, tested for FeLV and FIV, dewormed and current on their vaccinations. For additional information and to see these or our other kittens and cats, please check our website www.kittenrescue.org or email us at mail@kittenrescue.org. Your tax-deductible donations for the rescue and care of our cats and kittens can be made through our website or by sending a check payable to Kitten Rescue, 914 Westwood Boulevard, #583, Los Angeles, CA 90024.

On Saturdays, we have adoptions from noon to 3:30 p.m. in Westchester at 8655 Lincoln Boulevard, just south of Manchester Avenue, and also in Mar Vista at 3860 Centinela Avenue, just south of Venice Boulevard. Our website lists additional adoption sites and directions to each location. •
