A Kitchen Blog with No Complications

By Nancy Peters

When the Internet and social media invaded everyday lives, individuals began to use online access as a way to express themselves. Before Facebook, Twitter, Tumblr, Instagram, Snapchat, etc., blogging was one of the first ways to use virtual paper and share personal thoughts and ideas. Many have found ways to actually make a modest living using their blog.

For Angela Morales, a lifetime Inglewood resident, her blog, The Full Tummy.com, is a brand new adventure. Raised by her single mom, Patricia, and her grandmother, the kitchen is a very important room in the household. Angela learned to cook sitting at each woman's knee. "As soon as I could reach the counter, I was right there in the thick of all the cooking in our household," shared Angela. "I loved watching the sauces come to life, the vegetables begin to soften and make a hissing sound as they sautéed in the olive oil, and the smell of garlic, lots of garlic. Yum! That is the best odor."

Her heritage is based in Mexican cuisine, but Angela finds that cooking anything Mexican or Italian are the best in which to cook; each cuisine allows for much experimentation, especially because she believes following a strict recipe is not always necessary. She admits her joy in cooking is just being in the kitchen with ingredients spread around the counter before being chopped or mixed in, and then, experiencing the smells as the dish begins to take shape, adding a little of this spice or herb, trying to see what makes the flavors bolder or stronger.

"Finding the complex flavor in the simplest of foods, discovering what new flavor can bring out another with an extra pinch of this or that, I just love 'playing' with my food," she chuckled. "My Mom and grandmother encouraged me as I was growing up and so it seemed a natural thing for me to make our meals as I got older. Of course, I began with non-complicated dishes, but then I started to see that cooking is always a science experiment. The chemical reaction between ingredients is interesting.

"In baking it is essential that you use the precise measurements of dry ingredients to wet ingredients, but in all other cooking, it is a matter of what tastes good and what works," she mused.

It was a dream that Angela began to have at the age of eight years to open a restaurant someday. Finances are not the only element that put that dream away. "My Mom reminded me that a restaurant is a 24 hours a day, seven days a week responsibility, regardless of how many hours the place would be open. So, I changed my mind about that," Angela said, laughing heartily.

Not running a restaurant in her adulthood is replaced by her blog. Angela's friends during high school in El Segundo and while at Long Beach State had continual queries of what kitchen tool to use for this and what spice/herb to use in that recipe, and a myriad of other questions, to which she knew the answers 99 percent of the time. For a few years friends made suggestions to write it all down. Angela was always the go-to among her friends about all things related to food, cooking, and baking.

Baking is actually Angela's first love and her infamous chocolate chip cookies are craved by those close to her. "I played with that recipe for quite a few years and by trial and error I have perfected what many have described as the perfect chocolate chip cookie," she said, with some amount of pride. "Baking that recipe during study groups, parties, or sports events at my school apartment became a tradition. Sometimes I couldn't bake those cookies fast enough. I have no intention of sharing that recipe with anyone, ever," she laughingly said.

Although not confident in her writing skills, this former athlete, originally recruited for her shot put and discus throwing skills, began to do research on blogging.

"I had hoped to go into sports-related physical therapy, particularly after the ankle injury from basketball sidelined me and I looked for another sport. I chose track and field but the strict NCAA regulations did not give me much leeway to continue in that. I decided to go a different path for a career. I majored in Behavioral Sciences with a Communications minor. I was able to channel my love of science, chemistry, cooking, and communication when I began The Full Tummy.com and the blog was 'live' on March 19. I work in web testing for a sports company headquarters in El Segundo, so I have knowledge of the Internet.

"Putting all that background together, I am able to incorporate what I am passionate about (cooking) with my Internet skills (blogging) and please my friends, and now my readers, with tips, recommendations for kitchen tools, apps for cooking, other bloggers and websites about cooking and food, food pairings, recipes, and my general thoughts about what I love to do—COOK!"

Angela's passionate perspective about food and cooking is rather simple. It is super easy to cook. Try a recipe and add something one time. Doesn't work? Take that away and add something new the next time you cook that food. Get comfortable in the kitchen. Buy the essential tools only. How do you know what those are? Read The Full Tummy.com on Sundays and Thursdays. The blog is free and at this time Angela has no plans to monetize it.

As long as one has the right tools and a few basic ingredients, one can experiment with just about any food. Puzzled about cooking terminology? Looking for a new recipe? Chances are The Full Tummy.com can help in any cooking department.

Keep in mind, though. One thing not on The Full Tummy.com is Angela's recipe for chocolate chip cookies. •

The Tribe Will Leave You Breathless

By Morgan Rojas for CINEMACY

A standout at last year's Cannes Film Festival is the Ukrainian crime drama The Tribe, a film told through non-verbal acting and sign language with no voice overs or subtitles. If that doesn't sound interesting enough, note the fact that the cast is made up of entirely non-professional actors. It is a modern day silent movie with a vibrancy that will leave a lasting impression on those who are willing to experience this unique art film.

Lost souls come together at an insular co-ed Ukrainian boarding school for the deaf, where new student Sergey (Grigoriy Fesenko) quickly learns that in order to hang with the cool kids, he has to prove himself worthy. What begins themselves. His hard work has definitely paid off ten fold.

Most of the scenes are shot in a one take, making the actors the sole focus. What's more, the lack of dialogue makes the performances feel much more heightened. Our eyes bounce around frame as we are more observant in trying to pinpoint just who our attention should be focused on. If there was any film that fits the criteria of "performance driven," this is it— like an intimate dance between lovers, friends, and enemies.

I can't think of the last movie I went to that left me physically uneasy, and I say that as a compliment. I felt cold sitting in the theatre, and I attribute that to the phenomenal as harmless high school pranks quickly turns dark, as the group exposes Sergey to their illegal involvement in truck stop prostitution of fellow classmates and robbery. It is the expectation that Sergey is to follow in their footsteps.

As his responsibilities grow within the group, his confidence and attitude change as well, and not necessarily for the better. His love for fellow classmate Anya (Yana Novikova) grows, despite the fact that he is in charge of pimping her out nightly. His feelings begin to cause trouble for the confused teen, and headed towards an existential crisis, he is pushed to the brink of insanity.

Sergey's coming of age story is a universal concept and familiar theme, but the way in which we experience his plight is unforgettable. The film's writer/director Myroslav Slaboshpytskiy is nothing short of a cinematic visionary, who states that he has been working on this film for over 20 years. What must have been an extremely difficult film to direct, especially since Slaboshpytskiy is not deaf himself and depended on a sign language interpreter to relay directions to the cast, seems effortless. Everything is intentional, from the run-down dorm rooms to the innocence of the characters production design and overall tone of the film. The icy, barren landscape of the city does its job in setting up the world in which the kids live in. The film's color reminded me of the Ryan Gosling drama The Place Beyond The Pines— muted, but alive. The run down boarding school, the dirty and desolate truck stop, and the hopelessness of the characters drum up emotions of pity while remaining insantly touching and beautiful. It's hard not to become attached to Sergey or Anya, and as the lights come up we are harshly transported back into reality, wishing for a moment longer in their world.

Screening at such festivals like Cannes, Toronto International, Sundance, and AFI among others, The Tribe has been one of the most buzzed about films of the year. The attention this film is getting is fully justified, and not just for its original use of sign language. At its core, the story is compelling; the performances pull at the heartstrings and the result will resonate with you way past the 132 minutes run time. The Tribe was made for an audience waiting for an authentically beautiful and powerful piece of cinematic art. The Tribe opens at The Cinefamily this Friday, June 26th. •

IUSD Budget Gap Eliminated

Inglewood Unified State Trustee Dr. Don Brann announced today that the District's 2015-16 fiscal year budget at long last eliminates a structural deficit that has plagued the school system for many years. IUSD sought a loan from the State in the fall of 2012 to avoid bankruptcy. A $55 million line of credit was set up and the state Department of Education took control, making IUSD the ninth California School District to enter receivership. Whenever that occurs, the elected Board loses its governing powers and becomes Advisory as the California Department of Education appoints a State Trustee to lead the District back to local control. Dr. Brann came on board in July 2013.

Dr. Brann noted in his message that a balanced budget is the first big step in the return of local control. But even still, there remains an unpaid loan balance of $28.5 million, and local control will not occur until the money is repaid. More information is available at www.iusd.net.

El Camino Summer Sessions

The second six-week summer session at El Camino begins July 7. Summer classes at ECC are a great way to make progress toward a college degree, and at only $46 per unit, students can benefit from considerable cost savings. To apply for summer classes at El Camino College or for more information on ECC summer sessions, see www.elcamino.edu/summer/.

In addition, high school students can get started on their college education at El Camino College this summer. Free summer classes are available to eligible high school juniors and seniors who want to earn college credits. Students must be California residents to be eligible for a fee waiver. To participate, high school students must apply online at www.elcamino.edu and submit a Concurrent Enrollment Application. For more information on how to earn college credits while still enrolled in high school, go to: www.elcamino.edu/student-services/highschool/. •

Wiseburn Students, Scholarship Recipients Honored

By Cristian Vasquez

President of the American Association of University Women, Beach Cities Branch Nancy Wloch and AAUW Tech Trek Co-coordinator Terry Hays-Horner honored seventh-grade students Celeste Almendariz and Diana Castellanos during a recent Wiseburn School Board meeting with the AAUW Beach Cities Branch Tech Trek Science Camp Scholarships.

"We have a lot of outstanding students that are being recognized for the outstanding work that they do throughout the year; we have been very blessed and fortunate to be sponsored by the American Association of University Women who send out girls every year down to UC San Diego to attend Tech Trek Camp," Wiseburn Superintendent Dr. Tom Johnstone said during the recent school board meeting. "We have girls that are in their 20s who now are engineers. We are so thrilled that you [AAUW] continue to support us and our girls, in terms of seeking careers in science."

Tech Trek will give both girls an opportunity to stay on a college campus for an entire week. The students will stay at the dorms, go to classes throughout the day and take field trips to different areas in order to spark a long-lasting interest in students pursuing careers in science, technology, engineering and math [STEM] careers, while giving the young girls a glimpse at college life.

"I was really proud of her and I think she deserves it; she's an excellent student, a really good role model to a lot of her classmates, she's an outstanding athlete and is well-rounded," Celeste Almendariz's dad, Sergio Almendariz said. "I know she doesn't brag about herself as much as I do but she's 12 years old and she already has two silver medals in water polo with the Junior Olympics. It goes along with her motivation to be a good student. She's into cross-fit, and she is a very dynamic girl. This is well deserved, she's a very independent young lady and I couldn't ask for anything more than this."

Celeste Almendariz who has been playing water polo for four years for the South Bay United Water Polo Club, a sport that both her siblings are involved with as well, will join Diana Castellanos on the one-week camp at UC San Diego. Each scholarship is worth $900 and covers the cost of camp, although each recipient is asked to pay $50 out-of pocket. Funds to cover the scholarships are made available through different fundraising activities as well as generous donations from AAUW members.

"We have luncheons, we go to the comedy clubs and do all sorts of fun things. We also have members that write checks," Hays-Horner said. "What we decided to do was work with the three middle schools in Hawthorne, the two middle schools in Lawndale and the middle school in Wiseburn (Dana). "This year we had so many donations, that instead of sending six girls we are sending sixteen girls. It might not happen next year since it just happens that that's how much money we have [at the moment]."

In order to select the scholarship winners, science teachers at the Dana Middle School were asked to nominate girls who demonstrate an interest in the sciences. Once the science teacher nominates the student, the student is responsible for filling out and submitting an application, which includes writing an essay that is read by AAUW branch members. The girls are then interviewed by a couple of the branch members and a decision is made based in all three requirements.

"I knew it was competitive so I was excited and I also knew how much she wanted it so I wanted her to give it her all," Martha Castellanos, Diana Castellanos' mom said. "She wrote the essay and edited it over and over again. It was something that she really wanted; she's always been interested in science and wants to be a veterinarian so this is a great opportunity. She's going to be around a bunch of other girls that have the same kind of interests and that is going to be amazing. Plus, being on a college campus alone is an experience of its own."

At present AAUW represents more than 100,000 college graduates across the United States and membership is open to anyone who has an A.A. degree.

"AAUW you can boil it down to wherever there are underserved individuals, and I won't just say women and girls because obviously that is a focus, but the national organization through philanthropy, through educations and through research supports underserved individuals wherever they are," Wloch said. "That might be the workplace, that might be in education, it might be politically."

Tech Trek was born during the late 1990s when an AAUW member near Stanford expressed their concern regarding the lack of women in science, technology, engineering and math careers [STEM]. By 1998 the AAUW launched Tech Trek on the Stanford campus and it has now expanded to eight campuses in the state, four in Northern California and four in Southern California [UC San Diego, UC Irvine, UC Santa Barbara and Whittier College], that are dedicated to operating these summer camps.

"I hope that she learns a little bit about what it is like to be on a college campus but more than anything she is going to be around other girls that are motivated as well and that is going to be an experience in itself," Martha Castellanos said. "She is fortunate that Celeste [Almendariz] is going, since she knows her very well but I hope she gets to meet some new people. It seems like this organization is really good at networking and I hope those relationships grow and it might be able that can help her with her future. These ladies are very well connected so we are really lucky that she got chosen." •

News for the 'City of Good Neighbors'

From City Clerk Norb Huber

OUT OF THE CITY

I am writing my column this week in the heart of the Sierra Nevada mountain range, amid the towering mountains, swaying pines and crystal clear lakes. After concluding my 38th year of inspiring young minds, I am enjoying my annual fishing/camping trip with the men of my extended family. The week-long relaxation and adventure that I have experienced the last 26 years has recharged and rejuvenated me so that I can hit the ground running upon my return to the city of Hawthorne. A Southern California Edison lake is where the trip takes place, and the low lake levels remind me of the need to conserve water. I know that it is difficult for many of you to look out on your lawns and see yellow and brown; my old lady is the same way. The low water level has not prevented us from catching trout, nor our enjoyment of God's creation. The gentle breeze and all of the trees make it relaxing. You can take the city clerk out Hawthorne, but you can't take Hawthorne out of the clerk.

COLD ONES

"Have a cold one". This saying that I throw into my column is my way of expressing the wish that everyone enjoys their life in the City of Good Neighbors with the beverage of their choice, hot or cold, fermented or unfermented. So have a cold one, as I am doing now!

TO RUN OR NOT TO RUN

The filing period for the city council and mayor positions begins July 13th. You must be a registered voter and a resident of the city of Hawthorne in order to run. Papers can be pulled from the city clerk's office during business hours.

UPCOMING EVENTS

Lonely Galaxy "Lost in Space"

Based on press releases from Space Telescope Science Institute and Keele University, provided by Bob Eklund

Space is big, dark, and lonely. But some parts of it are more lonely than others. Most galaxies are clumped together in groups or clusters. A neighboring galaxy is never far away. But one galaxy, known as NGC 6503, has found itself in a lonely position, at the edge of a strangely empty patch of space called the Local Void.

The Local Void is a huge stretch of space that is at least 150 million light-years across. It seems completely empty of stars or galaxies. The galaxy's odd location on the edge of this never-land led stargazer Stephen James O'Meara to dub it the "Lost-in-Space galaxy" in his 2007 book, Hidden Treasures.

NGC 6503 is 18 million light-years away from us in the northern circumpolar constellation of Draco the Dragon. It is some 30,000 light-years in diameter, about one-third the size of our own home galaxy, the Milky Way.

Schoolboy Discovers a New Planet

A 15-year-old schoolboy has discovered a new planet orbiting a star 1,000 light years away in our galaxy. Tom Wagg was doing work-experience at Keele University, Tom Wagg, working at Keele University in Staffordshire, England, discovered a new planet called WASP-142b, in the constellation Hydra. Photo courtesy of wasp-planets.net.

Staffordshire, England, when he spotted the planet by finding a tiny dip in the light of a star as a planet passed in front of it.

"I'm hugely excited to have found a new planet, and I'm very impressed that we can find them so far away," says Tom, now aged 17. (It has taken two years of further observations to prove that Tom's discovery really is a planet.)

Tom found the planet by looking at data collected by the WASP (Wide Angle Search for Planets) project, which surveys the night skies monitoring millions of stars to look for the tell-tale tiny dips (transits) caused by planets passing in front of their host star.

Tom's planet has been given the catalogue number WASP-142b, being the 142nd discovery by the WASP collaboration. It is in the Southern constellation of Hydra the Water Snake. While astronomers worldwide have now found over 1,000 extra-solar planets, Tom is possibly the youngest ever to have done so.

"The WASP software was impressive, enabling me to search through hundreds of different stars, looking for ones that have a planet," says Tom. The planet is the same size as Jupiter, but orbits its star in only two days. With such a short orbital period, the transits occur frequently, making such planets much easier to find.

Tom, a pupil at Newcastle-under-Lyme School, who has always been deeply interested in science, asked for the work-experience week after learning that Keele University had a research group studying extra-solar planets.

"Tom is keen to learn about science, so it was easy to train him to look for planets," says Professor Coel Hellier, who leads the WASP project at Keele. The planet does not yet have a name, though the International Astronomical Union has started a contest to name extra-solar planets. Tom is looking forward to making a suggestion for his planet. •

Holly Park, Wiseburn Majors Win Openers

By Joe Snyder

Photos by Joe Snyder

The Holly Park and Wiseburn Major Little League All-Star Baseball teams began the District 37 Tournament with victories last Saturday at Carl Nielsen Youth Sports Park in Westchester. Holly Park started by crushing Lawndale 22-0, before Wiseburn held on for a 3-2 victory over Compton.

Wiseburn got off to a good start with a 2-0 second inning lead before Compton tied the game. Wiseburn, then, scored the decisive run in the bottom of the fourth inning on a bases loaded walk.

Blake Guerrero started the scoring with a solo home run hit over the left-center field fence and Tim Trembling drove in a run with a single to give Wiseburn a two-run lead. Julian Vega was the winning pitcher for Wiseburn. Trembling went two-for-two and drove in a run for Wiseburn.

The game between Holly Park and Lawndale was a mismatch. Already leading 8-0 after only two innings, Holly Park poured it on with 12 runs on six hits, nine bases-on-balls, a hit batman and one error to make it 20-0 after the top of the third.

Holly Park added two more runs in the fourth and pitcher T.J. Thompson, in relief of starter Ricardo Ramirez, set Lawndale down in order for the four-inning mercy rule win.

"Our pitches were good," Holly Park manager Bud Manuel said. "They rotated good. We had to keep the kids focused in an easy game. We need to work on things."

Holly Park scored 22 runs on 12 hits as it took advantage of 11 walks, one hit-by-pitch and three errors. Holly Park started the game well with a double by Justin Roulson, a triple from Donjue Littlefel to drive home Roulson, and a two-run homer by Darren Bradley to give Holly Park a quick 3-0 first quarter advantage.

Bradley added a two-run double in the third to finish going two-for-four with four runs batted in and two runs scored. Thompson was two-for-three with two RBIs. He also walked once and hit into a fielder's choice as he was on base four times.

Roulson was two-for-three with one RBI and four runs scored. Littlefel went two-for-three, drove in one run and scored three times. Pato Francisco went two-for-four with two RBI's and two runs. Julian Franeros scored four runs and Asonit had a hit and three runs.

Pitchers Ramirez and Thompson combined for a one-hitter. Ramirez, though, struck out the side in all three innings he pitched and gave up Lawndale's only hit when a ball, hit by Joseph Cuevas, fell off shortstop Franeros' glove on a difficult play attempt. Thompson struck out the first two batters he faced before Lawndale's Anthony Lount hit a short fly ball to first baseman Roulson for the only ball hit for an out. The two combined for 11 strikeouts in four innings.

Holly Park's and Wiseburn's wins put the two Hawthorne-based teams into the second round of the winner's bracket against each other on Wednesday. The tournament runs through Sunday. Wiseburn also won the first round of the 10-11-year-old division by routing Lennox 13-3 Saturday at Nielsen Park. Holly Park fell to host Westchester 11-2.

REDS FALL SHORT IN MAGEE FINAL

The Holly Park Minor (age 9-10) Little League All-Star Baseball team made a sixth inning rally but fell short of the host Westchester Nationals 11-10 in the Carl Magee, Jr. District 37 Tournament of Champions final on June 16 at Nielsen Park.

Westchester, which rolled over Holly Park 13-3 on June 14, took an 11-5 lead after scoring five runs (four unearned) in the bottom of the fourth, but the Reds came back with five runs (two in the fifth and three in the sixth) that was started on a solo home run by Moliq Blue. Josh Johnson added a two-run double in that inning as he finished the game with two hits and four RBIs.

"I was proud of our team," Holly Park manager Harry Hampton said. "The kids never gave up."

LOCALS MAKE ALL-LEAGUE

Hawthorne, Lawndale and Leuzinger failed to make the CIF-Southern Section playoffs but managed some players to get on all-league. In the all-Ocean for Hawthorne, junior Carlos Jacobo made first team after batting .542 in league. Seniors Max Riley and Chris Phelps were second teamers.

For Lawndale, junior pitcher Tyler Bonskey, who had a shutout in the Cardinals 1-0 upset win over league champion El Segundo on May 7, and senior Dimitre McField both made second team. Angel Vital and David Oliver were second-team all-Pioneer for Leuzinger. •

Holly Park's Pato Francisco takes cut at a pitch in Saturday's District 37 Major Little League Baseball All-Star Tournament first round game against Lawndale. Holly Park rolled over Lawndale 22-0.

Issac Wright of the Holly Park Reds hits ball during last week's Carl Magee, Jr. District 37 Tournament of Champions Minor Little League Baseball final against the Westchester Nationals. The Reds fell short of the Nationals 11-10.

8 Ways First-Time Homebuyers Can Make Themselves Mortgage-Ready

(BPT) - It's rare to get something right the very first time you try it, but when it comes to buying your first home, a lack of knowledge and experience can lead to costly mistakes. One in four first-time homebuyers say they are completely unfamiliar with the mortgage financing process, according to a report by the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau. Even among those with an understanding of the overall process, the report found that many first time homebuyers still had significant knowledge gaps in important areas such as available mortgage rates, closing costs, down-payment requirements and income required to qualify for a loan.

"Not having all the information available could lead to consumers paying a higher interest rate or failing to secure an affordable mortgage for the home they want," says Eric Hamilton, President of Vanderbilt Mortgage and Finance. "While most first-time homebuyers understand the importance of their credit report score in securing a mortgage, it's important they arm themselves with comprehensive knowledge. Fortunately, there's plenty of useful information out there for borrowers who want to do their homework before diving into the loan process."

Vanderbilt Mortgage offers eight tips for first-time homebuyers:

1. Adjust your budget. A mortgage payment can increase your monthly housing expenses, so prepare by calculating what that amount will be and begin saving that same amount every month so you can get used to the budget change in advance. Use a free online payment calculator to help you predict your payment and understand your current debt-to-income ratio.

2. Plan for a down payment. Nearly all home loans will require you to put some money down as a down payment. Some home loans may require as much as 20 percent of the purchase cost as a down payment, although some Federal Housing Administration loans may require less. Decide on the amount you think you'll need and create a savings plan to help you reach that goal.

3. Consider the location and type of home you want to buy. Many factors influence the cost of a home, including its location, size, style and more. A larger home in a high-income area will generally cost more, and property taxes will be higher on a bigger, newer, well-located home. Many first-time homebuyers find manufactured or mobile homes are a good option. Knowing the estimated cost of the type of home you want to purchase can help you better manage your budget.

4. Stay on top of your credit. Lenders will consider your credit score and report history when determining your mortgage eligibility and the interest rate they may offer you. Make sure to review your credit report in advance. You can download a free credit report once a year from all three major bureaus at www.annualcreditreport.com. If you're planning to apply for a mortgage, it's a good idea to review your report more frequently and to consider paying to obtain your credit score from at least one major bureau. If your report contains errors, work with the credit bureaus to have them corrected before you apply for a mortgage.

5. Keep current on monthly bills. While it's important to save toward a down payment, don't let monthly bills slide. Paying your bills on time every month can help increase your credit score, and a good payment history is something lenders look for when reviewing your credit report. Use online tools like email reminders and automatic payment options to help ensure you never miss or make a late payment.

6. Work on your debt. If you have delinquent balances, bring them up to date as quickly as possible. If you carry a lot of revolving credit card debt, you may want to work to reduce it by paying more than the monthly minimum payment. While it helps to have a report that shows no late payments, the most important thing is to not have any delinquent balances before you apply for a mortgage.

7. Plan for escrow. In addition to the amount you will need each month toward repaying your mortgage, you'll need escrow - an amount added to and collected with each monthly mortgage payment that is applied toward annual homeowners' insurance premiums and/or taxes. Estimating taxes and total insurance costs can help you better understand how much your escrow will be each month, and you'll be able to budget more accurately as you prepare for home ownership. Don't forget that this amount may adjust every twelve months if your insurance premium or taxes change for the next year.

8. Take advantage of educational resources. From lenders' websites to government agencies, it's easy to find plenty of information online. Check out resources like the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and the Federal Housing Administration. •

Steamed New Potatoes With Fresh Basil And Butter

The sweet baby potatoes are starting to come into the farmers market. These young spuds are very tender and need very little in the way of seasoning. This is a favorite way of preparing them.

Ingredients

- 2 pounds of small potatoes
- 8 to 10 fresh basil leaves chopped coarsely
- 3 tablespoons of unsalted butter at room temperature
- Kosher salt and fresh ground black pepper to taste

Preparation

1. In a large pot bring water to a boil when the water in boiling add the potatoes and boil until tender 15 to 30 minutes depending on size. Check to see if done by piercing them with a toothpick.
2. Drain off all the water.
3. Toss with the basil, butter, salt and pepper.
4. Serve right away.
