Google's Test Car Makes a Rookie Mistake

By Rob McCarthy

California's self-driving car project went six years and nearly 1.5 million miles without causing a crash until last month when a Google test car sideswiped a Bay area bus. The Google engineers took responsibility for the low-speed impact, and claimed the software-controlled car made a rookie mistake.

It assumed the bus driver would wait.

The Google car and the city bus were sharing a generously wide lane when the software-controlled vehicle encountered "a tricky set of circumstances on El Camino," according to the Google team report. El Camino Real is a three-lane boulevard, much like Sepulveda Boulevard, with right-hand lanes wide enough for two drivers. The Google team decided to teach its self-driving car how this is done.

"We began giving the self-driving car the capabilities it needs to do what human drivers do: hug the rightmost side of the lane," engineers said in their report of the Valentine's Day crash. "It's vital for us to develop advanced skills that respect not just the letter of the traffic code but the spirit of the road."

A Google engineer was in the car at the time, however, the software was doing the driving. The vehicle pulled toward the right-hand curb to prepare for a right turn when it detected sandbags near a storm drain blocking its path. The Google car stopped, allowed some other drivers to pass, then angled back toward the center of the wide right lane at 2 mph when it sideswiped the city bus going 15 mph, the report describes.

None of the bus passengers was injured, and a videotape released last week by the Santa Clara Valley Transportation Agency backs up Google's claim it was a minor incident. Passengers appear surprised when the driver asks them to step off the bus right after the incident.

The Google engineer in the car at the time said that he also expected the bus driver to slow down and let the Google car back to the center of the lane. The videotape showed extensive damage done to the driver's side of the autonomous vehicle, a Lexus sport utility vehicle. Google has 14 of the self-driving Lexus SUVs in Mountain View. Eight are in Austin, Texas, and one car is testing in Kirkland, Wash.

"Our car had detected the approaching bus, but predicted that it would yield to us because we were ahead of it," according to the February Google Self-Driving Car Project report. The engineers called it an everyday type of misunderstanding between human drivers.

"This is a classic example of the negotiation that's a normal part of driving -- we're all trying to predict each other's movements. In this case, we clearly bear some responsibility, because if our car hadn't moved there wouldn't have been a collision. That said, our test driver believed the bus was going to slow or stop to allow us to merge into the traffic, and that there would be sufficient space to do that."

So far, the self-driving car project is a Northern California experiment. Critics of the self-driving car project think the state government and Bay area police should investigate each crash rather than take Google's explanation at face value.

Google says its cars have been hit nearly a dozen times since street testing began up north almost two years ago, and that other drivers were at fault each time. The February bus incident is the first time that Google took

‘Barney Thomson’ is a Devilish Good Time

By Ryan Rojas for Cinemacy.com

The title character in the new black comedy Barney Thomson is a barber without a quirk, admitting as much in thick Scottish accent in the film’s opening scenes that he “doesn’t see the point” – which might be why his barber’s chair is the only one empty in a crowded barber shop. The hapless hair-cutter’s self-deprecating voice-over of being no-one special, mixed with shots of crime-scene photographs of dismembered body parts, sets the stage for what’s to come – the story of an unlucky man finding himself at the center of a serial killer’s spree, much like a clumsy cousin of Sweeney Todd.

The directorial debut of comic actor Robert Carlyle, Barney Thomson is a mostly fully amusing effort that goes for laughs by consistently pitting the hapless lad’s bad fortune of having dead bodies befall before his feet with the misfortune of having a crime unit that just so happens to also be looking for a wanted murderer. The thick and impassioned Scottish accents complement the deft and lighthearted handling of the gruesome murders, but the way Carlyle sets the thing up makes Barney’s sad sack nature and array of bewildered faces makes for a funny outing.

Breathing life into this Glasgow-set world are a host of wonderful performances, including a rock-solid Ray Winstone as Investigator Holdall who’s got it out for Barney, a surprisingly funny character in Detective Inspector June Robertson (Ashley Jensen), and a hilarious Emma Thompson, who, from the moment we see her hooping and hollering at a Grey Hound race, in marooned bee-hive hair and leopard coat, gives a gem of a hilarious performance, and winks at being somebody with a mysterious secret.

From beginning to end in all 96 minutes, Barney almost begs the audience to see him as a normal Joe of non-importance, and it’s a box that almost confines Barney Thomson a bit too much. Like its main character, the movie is a mostly familiar bit of fun that could’ve pushed the boundaries a little more, though it speaks to the movie’s tonal strengths that it gets genuine laughs and genuine gross-outs without any sort of real blood splattering, and instead, smartly written scripting. It has a good burst of first-act fun as we learn the set-up, but as it goes on – and with the exception of a fun second act twist – the movie slogs and pulls its dead weight much like Barney is resigned to do for the rest of the movie, and without much of a final hoorah for our sad sack hero.

Not Rated. ‘Barney Thomson’ is now playing in select cities. •

News for the ‘City of Good Neighbors’

STATE OF THE CITY LUNCHEON

Mayor Vargas will give his first State of the City address on Thursday, March 24th at the Memorial Center. Registration begins at 11:30 a.m. with the program beginning at 12 noon. Tickets are $50 per person and can be reserved by calling the Hawthorne Chamber of Commerce. There are many neat things happening in our city and we will certainly be there to celebrate them with other business and civic leaders.

ten or so, but it did move fast. You get to choose what toppings you want on your pizza. For a medium pizza, the $7.95 price seemed like a bargain. I knew that I was going to have to write a little blurb after taking a few bites of the great tasting pizza pie. Monday was Pi Day and Blaze sold the pizzas for $3.14. Someone told me the line was wrapped around the building most of the day. Welcome to Hawthorne, Blaze!

MARCH MADNESS

If you like to watch basketball, the next three weeks is the best time of the year. 68 D-1 NCAA universities or colleges play in the Big Dance. All of them start with the same goal, win the national championship. Only one team finishes their season with a win. 67 teams fall short. The term, “one and done” refers to the fact that if a team loses, they are done. There are no tomorrows. That is what makes this tournament so special. It’s “do or die”. The closest D-1 university geographically speaking to Hawthorne is Loyola Marymount. LMU is located in Westchester. I enjoy watching basketball and have been attending their basketball games for the past eleven years. Basketball was my sport while growing up and I played two years of college ball. After graduating, all I wanted to do is coach basketball. I ended up coaching at Leuzinger and Lutheran High School. It was great seeing kids learn lifetime lessons on and off the court. Being the rather emotional type, I received a few technical fouls from refs that needed to have their eyesight checked out. I still get a little vocal when the guys in the striped shirts miss calls that go against my teams.

BLAZE PIZZA

My granddaughter, Jordan turned five this past weekend, so the rest of the family took her out to Disneyland to celebrate her day. Since I have no interest in standing in long lines waiting to get on rides that I really do not enjoy, I was left to tend for myself. I wondered over to the newly opened Blaze Pizza on Rosecrans. The line of people placing their orders was

PALM SUNDAY – HOLY WEEK

This Sunday is Palm Sunday in the Christian church. On that day, Jesus entered Jerusalem on a donkey and people waved palm branches to hail his triumphal entry. They were thinking that he would finally ascend to be their earthly king. But, he didn’t come to win a battle by force, he came in humbleness and in submission to God’s will. By the end of the week he was arrested, put on trial, whipped and spat upon. He was crucified with two other common criminals. If the story would end there at the grave, I would not be writing this. You know what happened that following Sunday. Of all of the world religions, Christianity is only one that does not place the onus on us. Jesus has done all the work necessary. We just enjoy all the benefits. I’m just a poor beggar that is given everything. Easter is everyday for me. Time to celebrate, and you know how I celebrate! Email me at: norbhuber@gmail.com •

Looking Up

A Perfectly Still Laboratory in Space

By Bob Eklund

Following a long series of tests, ESA's LISA Pathfinder has started its science mission to prove key technologies and techniques needed to observe gravitational waves from space.

Predicted by Albert Einstein a century ago, gravitational waves are fluctuations in spacetime produced by exotic astronomical events such as supernova explosions or the merging of two black holes. Recently, the first direct detection of these waves inaugurated the era of gravitational astronomy.

A future observatory in space, sensitive to gravitational waves with longer wavelengths than those detected on the ground, would be an essential tool to exploit this new field of study by probing some of the most massive and powerful objects in the Universe.

The LISA Pathfinder mission was launched in December, 2015, from Europe's spaceport in French Guiana. This spaceborne observatory, now operating at a "Lagrange Point" millions of miles from earth, is designed to achieve the purest-known "freefall," the extremely challenging condition necessary to build such an observatory. To do so, the team released two test masses—a pair of identical 2 kg gold-platinum cubes measuring 46 mm—inside the spacecraft, and is now verifying that they are truly moving under the effect of gravity alone.

This is by no means trivial: Even in space, there are forces capable of disturbing the cubes—including the radiation and "Solar wind" from the Sun—and the cubes need be isolated from all of these non-gravitational influences. To do so, LISA Pathfinder continually measures their positions and maneuvers around them with micro-thrusters to avoid ever touching them.

"As they fall freely through space, the two test masses should be extraordinarily still, since no other force is perturbing their gravitational motion—only a gravitational wave could jiggle them around," explains Stefano Vitale of University of Trento and INFN, Italy, Principal Investigator of the LISA Technology Package, the mission's core payload.

LISA Pathfinder, however, is not capable of detecting gravitational waves itself. For this crucial technology demonstration, the two freefalling cubes are only 38 cm apart—too close to record the minute wobbles in the fabric of spacetime.

The variation in distance caused by a passing gravitational wave is so small that a full-scale space observatory will need test masses separated by roughly a million kilometers, and be able to detect changes in that separation of about one millionth of a millionth of a meter.

"The precision we need to attain for future observations of gravitational waves from space is so high that it demands an unprecedented understanding of the physical forces at play on the test masses," says Paul McNamara, ESA's Project Scientist.

After having released the cubes from their locking mechanisms and having made sure they are in the most precise freefall ever obtained, the scientists will now spend the next six months running experiments, "poking" the masses to verify how still they really are. •

Bad Quarter Ends Inglewood's Season

Jordan Bell (Inglewood) attempts a three-point basket.. The Sentinels defeated the Falcons 66-50, before bowing out to host Crespi 69-62 on Saturday.

Article and photos by Joe Snyder

Inglewood High's boys' basketball team was seeking to upset host and top seed Crespi in the Southern California Regional Division I quarterfinals last Saturday in Encino. The Sentinels started well with a 14-9 first quarter lead and still held on to a 29-26 halftime lead. Then, came the dubious third period. The Celtics turned things on by outscoring Inglewood 20-9 to take an eight-point lead and went on to eliminate the Sents 69-62.

It was Crespi's second win over Inglewood in the playoffs. In the CIF-Southern Section Open Division consolation quarterfinals on Feb. 26, the Celtics edged out the host Sentinels 69-68.

Last Saturday, it appeared that Inglewood would seek revenge and make it to the Division I semifinals. The Sentinels were faced against a Crespi squad that has had a hot offense. The Celtics had 16 three-point baskets in their 89-71 Southern Section Open Division consolation final against Inglewood's Bay League rival Redondo on March 4 at Crespi. The Sents, who ended their season at 22-10, were able to contain the Celtics in the first half but Crespi converted on five three-pointers in the third quarter as it grabbed the lead for good. Inglewood outscored the Celtics (30-4) 24-23 in the final period but it was not enough to pull the game out. The Sentinels were led by Jordan Bell with 17 points. Terrell Gomez, a fourth year starting senior point guard, added 14 points.

In the first round on March 9 at Inglewood, the Sentinels pulled away from CIF-San Diego Section Division I runner-up Torrey Pines 66-50. The two teams were tied at 11 after the first quarter and Inglewood took a 27-21 halftime lead. The Falcons came back to tie the game at 29 on a basket from Chad Olive but the Sents came back to grab the lead for good. Inglewood would lead by as many as 20 points early in the fourth quarter.

The Sentinels were led by Gomez with a game-high 23 points and six assists. D'Angelo Smith chipped in 13 points and Jordan Bell contributed 12. Torrey Pines was led by Jackson Strong with 20 points.

Inglewood was the second place finisher, behind champion Redondo, in the Bay League with an 8-2 record. The Sentinels split their two games against the Sea Hawks losing their first game at home 58-53 before topping host Redondo 59-55 on January 29. The Sea Hawks (27-6 overall, 9-1 in league) are still in the regional Division I playoffs after ousting Lake Balboa Birmingham 84-72 on Saturday at Redondo. The Sea Hawks hosted Narbonne in the regional semifinals last Tuesday.

HAWTHORNE EDGES UNIVERSITY

Hawthorne High's baseball team scored all four of its runs in the bottom of the fifth inning and it was enough to hold off University High from West Los Angeles 4-3 in a non-league game last Saturday at Hawthorne. The Cougars improved to 2-0 with the win.

The Cougars were sparked by junior Peter Girgis who had two hits in three at-bats with three runs batted in and a run scored. Senior Andres Cordova was one-for-three and drove in a run. Senior Manny Huerta, sophomore Danny Villareal and senior Brandon Brown each went one-for-three and scored one run. Sophomore Johnny Pacheco was the winning pitcher. He pitched just one inning, allowing one earned run on one hit. Junior reliever Bernardo Robles hurled four and two-thirds innings, allowing two earned runs, two hits. He struck out one batter and walked two.

Hawthorne hosted Long Beach Jordan last Tuesday. The Cougars host Dominguez High from Compton today at 3:15 p.m. Hawthorne, then, is at home against Morningside from Inglewood next Tuesday at the same time.

ANIMO WINS EL SEGUNDO TOURNAMENT FINALE

The Animo Leadership High baseball team from Inglewood went nine innings to outlast Cabrillo High 9-7 in a consolation finale of the El Segundo Tournament last Saturday in Long Beach. The win improved the Aztec-Eagles' record to 2-5.

Both teams were tied at two through the regulation seven innings. In the eighth, Animo scored three runs in the top of the inning but the Jaguars (0-5) came back with three runs to tie the game at five. The Aztec-Eagles scored four times in the top of the ninth then had to hold off Cabrillo, who had two in the bottom of the inning.

Animo began the classic with a 6-2 loss to host San Pedro on March 4. The Aztec-Eagles, who were ranked fourth in the CIF-Southern Section Division VII last week, also suffered losses to San Pedro Mary Star (9-0), North Torrance (6-0) and Carson (14-3).

Animo visits Hawthorne Math and Science Academy at Holly Park today at 3:15 p.m. The Aztec-Eagles, then, are at Navy Field in San Pedro to take on Rolling Hills Prep Friday at the same time. Animo hosts Hawthorne Math and Science at Darby Park in Inglewood on Monday and visit Sage Hill Prep in Newport Beach on Tuesday. Both of these San Joaquin League games also begin at 3:15 p.m. • responsibility for the traffic collision.

The federal Highway Traffic Safety Administration told the Herald that the need to track collisions isn't there because of the limited testing of robot-controlled cars. Spokesperson Derrell Lyles told the Herald the NHTSA is taking a watch-and-see approach to regulating Google's project in the early phase.

"They are not being driven by the general public. NHTSA remains in close communication with the leading developers of self-driving vehicles regarding the testing of these vehicles. Given this very limited exposure and the controlled nature of the testing, there is no need for a formal system for tracking crashes involving self-driving vehicles at this time," Lyles wrote in an email.

Santa Monica-based Consumer Watchdog isn't so trusting of Mountain View-based Google, which is best known for its web search engine and online tools for analyzing web traffic.

The group issued a demand on March 9 that Google release its videotape of its robotic car crashing into the transit bus, now that the bus authority released its video of the incident.

"Google undoubtedly has its own — and probably better — video showing how its self-driving robot car crashed into a bus," said Director John M. Simpson with Consumer Watchdog's Privacy Project Director. "Google needs to come clean and release their video, as well as all recorded technical details related to the crash."

The transit company's video can be viewed at <http://www.usatoday.com/videos/news/nation/2016/03/09/81526496/>

Consumer Watchdog also renewed its call to the California DMV to amend its regulations and require that police investigate all self-driving robot car crashes and that video and technical details of the incidents be made public.

The DMV earlier this year released the nation's first proposed rules for the public use of self-driving vehicles. California's rules are expected to provide a framework for other states and for the federal government to follow as they consider their own policies for self-driving cars.

The proposed rules insist that a licensed driver be present who can take over the controls in an emergency. Self-driving cars must have a steering wheel, brake and gas pedal. The department also says that in the event of a collision, the autonomous vehicle's driver would be considered at fault.

The DMV requirement that autonomous cars have manual controls guards against a software hack, and would allow the passive driver to switch the vehicle into a manual mode so the controls aren't hijacked.

The Google car that sideswiped the metro bus had manual override controls, but it wouldn't have mattered.

"Our test driver, who had been watching the bus in the mirror, also expected the bus to slow or stop," the Google project report said. "And we can imagine the bus driver assumed we were going to stay put."

Google engineers ran simulation tests after the bus crash along El Camino Real in Mountain View and said they refined the street-navigation software. Their cars will "more deeply understand" that buses and large vehicles are less likely to yield to them than other vehicles on the road, the report promised.

Beware of human error, says a blog for drivers-training web site DriversEd.com. Assuming that someday autonomous cars are legal on public streets, it won't be ideal conditions for the robot. There will be a mix of human- and robot-controlled vehicles - the same driving conditions that exist in Mountain View where the Google car and the bus got tangled.

"And when driver-controlled and driverless cars have to share the road, it's not necessarily going to be safer for everyone" warned a blog posted Jan. 20 to announce the DMV rules for self-driving vehicles.

"In fact, it may be more dangerous, as drivers will have one more kind of road user to accommodate, and autonomous vehicles will have to respond to the one factor that can never be fully predicted: human behavior."

Distracted driving isn't going to disappear either because of self-driving vehicles either, the blog adds. "Even with the option for the driver to take over in an emergency, a licensed driver who wants to be chauffeured probably isn't going to pay close attention to the road ... what would be the point of giving up control in the first place?" •

These 3 Steps Will Help You Get Out Of Debt This Year

(BPT) - Providing for a family. Getting an education. Striving for the American dream. Sarah Thomas of Bono, AR, was like so many others, trying to better her life. She got a master's in nursing in order to give herself and her son a bright future, but soon after found herself overwhelmed by loans.

"I pursued an education and ended up with a ton of credit card debt," says Thomas. "The American dream gone wrong."

She's not alone. The average U.S. household with debt carries $15,355 in credit card debt and $129,579 in total debt, according to nerdwallet.com. And the Federal Reserve's interest rate hike this month means that you will be paying even more interest on your debt; that 0.25 percent rate increase equates to $2 billion in extra fees for Americans next year. For people like Thomas, the weight of paying off high-interest loans can be overwhelming.

Thomas was able to consolidate her high-interest debt and take control of her finances. If you want to take control of your financial future and eliminate debt, these simple yet highly-effective strategies can make a big difference.

Step 1: Build A Solid Budget

Use an online budgeting tool like Mint.com to organize your spending. Even if you aren't able to stick to the budget you set every month, it's important to know where your dollars are going so you can take action accordingly.

Step 2: Consider Cost-cutting Measures

Can you switch to a cheaper phone plan? Could you cut cable? What about buying generic brands? These are important questions you can ask as you audit your expenses and take appropriate measures to trim unnecessary spending.

Step 3: Research Debt Consolidation Options

Marketplace lending, also called peer-to-peer lending, is an alternative to traditional loans through which borrowers get access to low, fixed rates (insulated from further rate increases by the Fed) with no hidden fees or prepayment penalties. The industry is growing rapidly, with one of the leading platforms, Prosper, surpassing $5 billion in loans this year.

For many, a debt consolidation loan helps simplify things. Instead of having multiple bills with varying high interest rates, you can take out a loan to pay off all your debt, and then simply repay the one loan at a lower fixed interest rate. For many people, having one payment versus many makes it much easier to feel like they are in control of their finances.

An added benefit is that rates are often lower than with a credit card. According to a WiseBread.com article, it's important to begin the peer-to-peer lending process by getting a rate quote. Then you can do the math to determine how much money you can save consolidating your debt and paying it off at an accelerated pace.

Thomas decided to consolidate her debt through Prosper. She went to www.prosper.com and selected the loan's amount and purpose. "It's been the easiest, most streamlined process that I have ever had," says Thomas. "I am so thankful that we now have an attainable way to pay off debt. That way we can be proud of our hard work rather than forever burdened by it." •

Transform Your Home Today, Stay Safe Tomorrow

(BPT) - While many can only dream of the day they'll retire, for baby boomers, that dream is quickly becoming a reality. By the year 2030, approximately 20 percent of Americans are expected to be age 65 or older, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. But retirement doesn't necessarily mean relocating to a senior community. More and more, adults choose to "age in place," remaining in their current home, even after retirement. Here are a few ways to add extra convenience today - and ensure a safe home in the future.

Change Up Common Areas

When thinking about the long-term, start with the layout. In a perfect world, it's ideal to have all the key living spaces - bathroom, kitchen and bedroom on the first floor. If your home wasn't built with a first-floor bedroom or bath, and stairs have to be a part of your plan, install no-slip strips on the edge of each stair to help limit trips and falls.

Next, make sure there's plenty of room to move. Aim for doorways that are at least 32 inches wide, though 36 inches is ideal. Tight corners and doorways are a challenge for those with walkers or canes. For stress-free opening and closing, change out door handles from traditional knobs to lever handles for an easier grip.

Then, focus on the flooring. Installing carpeting can provide warmth and cushioning for you to enjoy now, and offers an added element of safety when it might be harder for you to maneuver around in the future. Choose a low pile carpet to minimize tripping - too much shag is a safety hazard. Area rugs are a major no-no, as unsecured rugs and loose carpet are one of the main causes for slips and falls. If you can't bear the thought of losing your area rug, use carpet tape to secure it firmly to the floor.

Boost the bath

If you can only update one place in your home, make it the bathroom. The bathroom typically offers the most opportunities for injury. In fact, roughly 234,000 injuries occur annually in the bathroom alone, as stated by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. An easy way to incorporate safety is to install grab bars. Today's grab bars are stylish, fitting in seamlessly with your space, rather than seeming obtrusive and sterile. Install them near the toilet, (make sure you have a comfort-height commode for easy sitting and standing) as well as in the shower. Some models, like the corner shelf with grab bar from Moen, pull double duty adding an element of additional storage you can take advantage of immediately, providing room to store your shampoo, and will help keep you safe while entering and exiting the bath. Check out retailers like Lowe's for a wide array of options that are fashionable as well as functional. In the shower, a handheld showerhead, like the Magnetix Engage showerhead from Moen, is an ideal option for those who may want to be seated while they bathe. Engage with Magnetix is also handy for cleaning the shower, by eliminating bending and squatting which can be hard on your joints as you age. Finally, at the vanity, choose a faucet with lever handles - they're easiest to grip and turn - and install sconces near the mirror for additional lighting.

In general, the most important advice for any room in your home is to think efficiently. Locate items that work together near each other to make tasks easier today, tomorrow and in the years to come. •
