Representative Henry Waxman Opens New Office in Manhattan Beach

Rep. Henry A. Waxman officially opened his new office in Manhattan Beach yesterday, January 31. Seen here: Local elected officials, Democratic Club member, and residents of the South Bay joined Rep. Waxman for the new office opening. The new office will serve constituents in South Bay, Peninsula, Torrance, El Segundo, Lomita and Marina del Rey. It is located at 1600 Rosecrans Avenue, 4th Floor, Manhattan Beach, CA 90266 and the office number is 310-321-7664. Photo courtesy of the Office of Rep. Waxman.

Coordinating Council Honors Students, Hears About Freedom 4U

By Lynne Gross

A drum major, a drama class role model, and a religious affairs officer are the three January Manhattan Beach Students of the Month. They received their awards at the Coordinating Council luncheon hosted at Verandas on Jan. 17.

The speaker for the luncheon was Dr. Greg Allen, the Director of Freedom 4U, an organization that works with families to try to prevent risky behavior on the part of teenagers.

The drum major is Isaac Siegemund-Broka, a student at Mira Costa High School. The school's marching band director, Joel Carlson, introduced Siegemund-Broka by telling that when he came for his drum major audition he, unlike other students, did not talk about why he should be the drum major. Rather, he stated he was going to talk about cars and then gave a thoughtful and appropriate explanation of why he admires Henry Ford. Carlson lauded Siegemund-Broka for his consistent excellence, his hard work, and his ability to take lessons beyond the marching field.

The drama class role model, Emma Nerad of Manhattan Beach Middle School, got off to a rocky start by forgetting a line during her seventh grade audition for drama class.

However, she persevered and finished and then waited for later to break into tears. She made it into the class and now that she is in the eighth grade, she mentors the seventh grade drama students.

Her drama teacher, David Levy, praised her for her abilities to help others and said all the seventh graders were eager to congratulate her for her Student of the Month award.

Creative Arts Center Presents (in)visible systems

Courtesy of the Manhattan Beach Creative Arts Center

It is a great pleasure to introduce you a new exhibition titled (in)visible systems at the Manhattan Beach Creative Arts Center, located at 1560 Manhattan Beach Blvd, features a new exhibition titled 9(in)visible systems. It features abstract painting and printmaking by three South Bay woman artists: Betsy Lohrer Hall, Kimiko Miyoshi, and Linda Jo Russell.

These artists, in one way or another, show their propensity to the geometric imagination: they explore the richness of color and tightly or loosely woven geometric patterns of forms. Their artworks are characterized by the interplay between colors and lines, which results in structural visual effects on the picture plane. The creation of these images resembles the building of a system that requires keen observation, contemplation, and trial and error. Their artwork reveals and hides the systems in the relationships between what is on the surface and what is covered.

Betsy Lohrer Hall's abstract geometric works form complex systems, which are applied, then forgotten. Relationships are formed by what is on the surface and what is peeking through from layers of color and line. They are records of time, and attention, made by an immense accumulation of simple acts.

Kimiko Miyoshi's printmaking shows her propensity toward scientific experimentation and observation. The "forgotten objects" that Miyoshi is drawn to become ciphers for her own existential state of being. These works transform insignificant and trivial objects into something visually striking.

Politically Speaking

One Man's Opinion

By Gerry Chong

An interesting story is currently circulating around the Internet that is purportedly true, but I could not vouch for its authenticity. I repeat this only to describe a mindset that ensues when an entitlement mentality erodes society's morality:

As a Realtor for the past 28 years, I thought I had seen or heard it all... until now. I was

"I have never understood why it is 'greed' to want to keep the money you've earned, but not greed to want to take somebody else's money."

showing homes in Pontiac, Michigan one afternoon recently and showed up at a home at the 4 p.m. time my appointment was scheduled for. After I woke up the homeowner, she let us in and then proceeded to tell my buyers and I (sic) that she had already entered into a contract to sell the home on a short sale (a short sale is a sale where the bank accepts less money than is owed on the home). After some chit-chat, she proceeded to tell us that she and her sister (who also lived in the area) were buying each other's homes via the short sale process. I mentioned to her that I thought relatives could not be involved in those transactions. She smiled and said, "We have two different last names, so no one knows the difference."

She went on to tell us that each of them owed over 100K on their homes and were in the process of buying each other's homes for 10-15K cash. To top it off, they were each receiving $3,000 in government-provided relocation assistance at the closing.

My buyers and I were amazed that she was outright admitting to fraud and yet, she continued. She began to tell us that the best part of her scheme was that because they are currently not working, that they (both) are now receiving Section 8 vouchers. I said I thought those were for renters and she said, "That's the best part--me and my sister are going to be renting each other's homes so we don't even have to move, and Obama is going to give us each $800 a month to pay the rent!" She then picked up a picture of Obama and did a little happy dance around her living room and while she kissed the picture she was singing, "Thank you, Obama... thank you, Obama."

So here's the bottom line...Both of these scammers got at least $80,000 in debt forgiven--$3,000 in cash for relocation (when in fact, they did not relocate); and to boot, you and I will be paying $1,600 in rent for them each and every month, perhaps forever...

End of story. Prominent Stanford University Economist and Hoover Fellow Dr. Thomas Sowell wisely noted, "One of the consequences of such notions as 'entitlements' is that people who have contributed nothing to society feel society owes them something, apparently for being nice enough to grace us with their presence."

Dr. Sowell continued, "I have never understood why it is 'greed' to want to keep the money you've earned, but not greed to want to take somebody else's money."

Good question, Dr. Sowell. Good question. •

Another Man's Opinion

Economic Recovery Slow but Steady

By Cristian Vasquez

It is no secret that the economy under President Obama has not fully recovered. Given the colossal collapse the economy took toward the end 2008 and beginning of 2009, it is going to take more than one term for a full recovery and the steps President Obama has taken are ensuring that such a recovery occurs. Beginning with the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 to the natural growth of businesses, the American economy is steadily recovering and getting stronger.

It is a given that nobody likes taxes being raised. However, after eight previous years of tax cuts and no significant job growth combined with the economic collapse, the response by the then-new administration was more than adequate. The famous or infamous stimulus money, depending on whom you ask, saved the economy. It is unfortunate that taxpayer money had to be used to save the private sector from an absolute meltdown, but had the President not taken such an action the consequences would have been dire. Despite the dreadful financial conditions that followed the end of 2008, the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 spared many, many more American families from losing their jobs and homes. By keeping these millions of people employed, the economy was given a legitimate opportunity to recover.

An economy will only thrive when there is a supply of goods that people have the ability to purchase. Had the stimulus money not gone out to help states, counties and cities weather the financial catastrophe we were thrust into, employee numbers in education, public safety (police, fire and homeland security, including border patrol and customs) and many other sectors would have been completely depleted. Keeping those individuals employed ensured that the country maintained a core of working individuals who would through their earnings kick-start the dying economy.

In order for the private sector to thrive, you need private citizens to spend. Granted that high tax rates lead to less disposable income, but without the President's actions there would have been far fewer segments of the population left with any sort of disposable income. Since the stimulus money was put into use, the economy has recovered. It's a slow recovery, but steady. According to The Bureau of Labor, since the middle of 2010 the country has seen an overall increase of employment, working hours and earnings. In addition, since October 2009 the employment rate has been on a steady decline--from 10 percent then to 7.8 percent in December 2012.

Are these numbers ideal? No. Are they what President Obama promised when campaigning in 2008? Not at all. Is it a healthy and significant improvement from where the country was in late 2008? Yes. The President's actions have slowly instilled life into an economy that had slowly deteriorated between 2000 and 2008. While the administration's tax hikes are a burden on anyone earning any kind of income, they were needed to address the woes that the country was suffering--and to this day, the investments have slowly paid off. Plus, after eight years of generous tax breaks and no significant economic and job growth, it was time to take a different approach. •

7here is an old saying: "When life gives you lemons, make lemonade."

Why only lemonade?

Right now the Meyer Lemon crop is coming in and for those of you who haven't experienced these treats, you must try them. Wikipedia states the following:

Citrus × meyeri, the Meyer lemon, is a citrus fruit native to China thought to be a cross between a true lemon and either a mandarin or common orange. It was introduced to the United States in 1908 as S.P.I. #23028 by the agricultural explorer Frank Nicholas Meyer, an employee of the United States Department of Agriculture who collected a sample of the plant on a trip to China.

The Meyer lemon is commonly grown in China in garden pots as an ornamental tree. It became popular as a food item in the United States after being rediscovered by chefs such as Alice Waters at Chez Panisse during the California Cuisine revolution. Popularity further climbed when Martha Stewart began featuring them in her recipes.

Now you all know my feelings toward Martha, but it won't stop me from singing the praises of these wonders.

The Chef

Chef Shafer's Meyer Lemon Sauce

Here are three great uses for lemons using one recipe:

- 3 lemons
- 6 basil leaves chopped julienne
- 2 cups rigotta cheese
- salt and pepper

Finely grate the zest of the lemon. Try to get only the yellow skin or zest not the white part. Mix together with the basil, rigotta, and salt and pepper.

1. Use as a dipping sauce for veggies and bread sticks instead of ranch.
2. Spread for a sandwich with roasted pepper and smoked turkey.
3. Melt into warm pasta with sauteed spinach for Lemon Alfredo.

Hope you try this one and send us your feedback to depot@sbol.com. •

How to Make Your Proposal Perfect

(BPT) - You've picked the perfect ring. You've practiced the words you'll use when you propose. But you know she would be livid if you asked her on the big screen at a sporting event.

Making an engagement truly memorable will win you points for a lifetime each time she retells your engagement story. These tips will help your engagement stick out. With so many engagements between Christmas and Valentine's Day, here are some great ways to make your engagement be one of a kind.

TAKE IT PERSONALLY

You are proposing to the woman or man of your dreams. The one person you've chosen to spend the rest of your life with. The person who is the perfectly unique match to yourself. So, make the proposal just as personalized and special as that person. Yes, you may have chosen the perfect ring, but presentation is equally important.

Choose something that will not only stun your betrothed, but also be something he or she can keep for years. Ditch the typical velvet box and go for a personalized, engraved keepsake box from Things Remembered. With dozens of box options, you can perfectly match the style of your new fiancé, from classic and elegant to contemporary chic.

Then, take it one step further and engrave something meaningful to commemorate this day. Your names, the date you were engaged or a personal love saying (that maybe only the two of you understand) are ideal inscriptions.

MAKE IT A PARTY

Yes, the holiday season is filled with parties, but a personal engagement party is something that you and your families will remember forever. Whether you choose a private, intimate locale to pop the question or a bustling public setting, convene family and friends during or afterward to celebrate together. Plan a special party to commemorate this momentous, life-changing occasion.

Don't forget, a great party doesn't necessarily mean great expense. Gathering at home with champagne, maybe a cheese plate and a homemade music playlist can make for one of the most memorable occasions of your life. Just be sure your future spouse is the center of attention, and you'll be set to make the event unforgettable.

CAPTURE THE MOMENT

Nearly all couples choose to hire photographers and videographers to capture the memories of their wedding day. But isn't the engagement just as momentous? As your heart begins to race when your knee bends toward the ground, the last thing on your mind will be your camera. But being able to actually look back at this moment will be something you'll treasure for years to come.

The holidays are busy for everyone; so if you plan on hiring a professional photographer, make sure to call at least a few weeks in advance. Luckily, unlike your wedding day, you'll probably only need the photographer for an hour or so. If you're already on a shoestring budget, see if a photography enthusiast friend will take photos for you. They may not end up in The Louvre, but with a decent camera, you'll be sure to have some great snapshots of the big moment.

When it's all said and done, you and your new fiancé may not remember every tiny detail. But using these simple tips will ensure your engagement day is a truly unique, memorable experience for you both.

prepares the prayers each day for American Martyrs School.

The teacher who introduced him, Jeff Lee, mentioned not only the high quality of the prayers but also Kelly's positive attitude, his self-motivation and his friendly easy going manner.

Joe participates in a number of sports including surfing, basketball, biking, and baseball. He also is a member of Friendship Circle where he works with developmentally disabled children. In addition, he maintains high grades.

In discussing at-risk teens, Dr. Allen noted the importance of families getting together for various activities, such as eating dinner. He also stressed the role parents have in listening to teens. His organization operates a facility that provides teens with healthy weekend alternative activities, many of them related to art and music.

The luncheon was chaired by Nancy Hersman. Officer Stephanie Martin led the Pledge of Allegiance and Rev. Msgr. John G. Barry gave the invocation. The next Coordinating Council lunch will be Thursday, Feb. 14.

Avoid Expected Delays Along Sepulveda/PCH

A local transportation project between February and early March will cause limited road closures from 10:00pm - 5:00am on selected dates.

In order to help ensure the continued operation of the Chevron El Segundo Refinery, Chevron will replace six existing coke drums that are reaching the end of their useful life with new drums of the same size and location within the refinery.

Chevron is committed to working with you to ensure that potential temporary inconveniences associated with the transportation project are minimized. We want to make sure that you have the details you need to plan ahead.
