Barbie's Home is the South Bay!

By Ron Sokol

It was 1945, in a garage in Los Angeles, when Harold Matson (a businessman) and the husband-and-wife team of Elliot and Ruth Handler founded Mattel, then known as Mattel Creations. The name Mattel combines Mr. Matson's last name with Elliott's first name. They were not able to use Ruth's name among the letters. This is a bit ironic since Ruth is credited with the creation of the Barbie doll (more about that in a little bit).

In the early goings, their company was involved with selling picture frames. In time, this became dollhouse furniture from the picture frame scraps. Mr. Matson chose to sell his stake in Mattel to the Handlers after he was experiencing poor health. In fact, Ruth took over his interest. By 1947, Mattel had its first successful toy, a ukulele with the fun name "Uke-A-Doodle."

In 1948, Mattel was incorporated into our City of Good Neighbors, Hawthorne. Eleven years later, during Christmas time, the company officially moved its headquarters to 5150 Rosecrans Boulevard, then a 16-acre site in the fine City of Hawthorne. Toys were the focus for Mattel. During the 1950s, the company benefited from its relationship with Walt Disney's popular Mickey Mouse Club television show through advertising. At the time, such advertising was rather novel.

As mentioned, Ruth Handler is credited with the creation of the Barbie doll, debuting on March 9, 1959. Just the next year, 1960, came Chatty Cathy, a talking doll, and in 1961, Barbie's good friend Ken was introduced. These were heady times for Mattel, which went public, was listed on the New York Stock Exchange, and acquired several other companies. (Barbie, by the way, has become Mattel's best-selling toy of all time.)

The Barbie Dreamhouse made its debut in 1962, and that same year, Astronaut Barbie was introduced. Sadly, there were some issues, trouble, and controversy in the 1970s.

It is not all peaches and cream, but the company remains alive and well today.

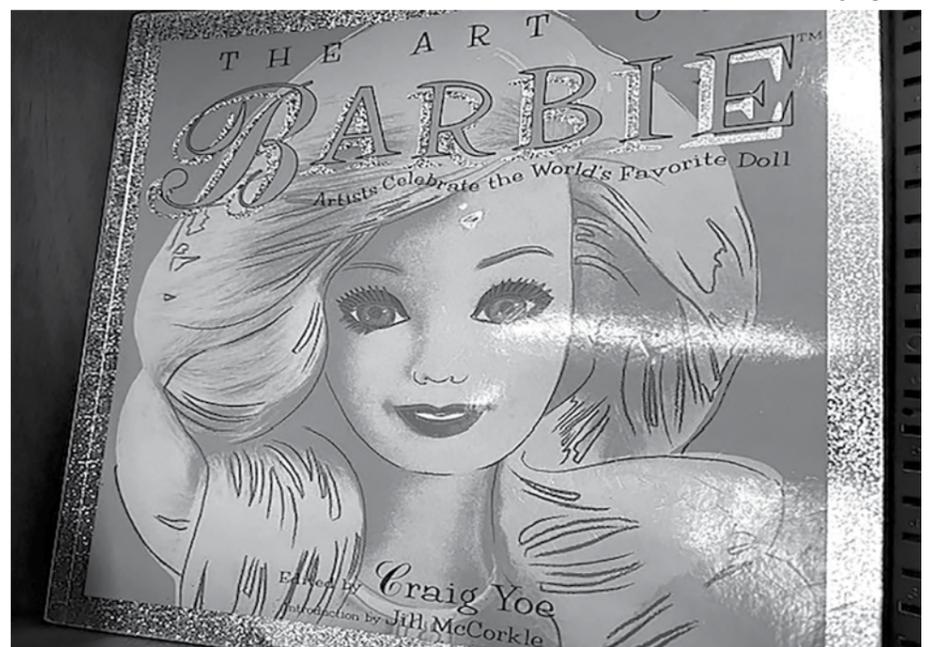

In 1991, Mattel moved its headquarters to neighboring El Segundo. By my calculations, our beloved Barbie – introduced in 1959 – was in her early 30s by the time of Mattel's move from Hawthorne to El Segundo. So, it is fair to say she grew up in Hawthorne. And, since then, from El Segundo, she has matured even more so. Over the span of her existence, Barbie has had more than 250 careers. She broke the "plastic ceiling" when she went to the moon in 1965, four years before Neil Armstrong. Since then, she has been everything from a doctor to a paleontologist to a rock star to a computer engineer. Now, she is a bonafide movie star!

Bottom line, Barbie is an absolute, unmitigated phenomenon. Mattel, a husband-and-wife company in the early goings and based right here in the South Bay to this day, has developed a true and lasting icon. In fact, sales of the Barbie doll notably jumped after the release of the recent blockbuster movie Barbie. Doll sales for the company surged to nearly two billion dollars. As if this is not enough, searches for the baby name "Barbie" also greatly increased.

Did you know the Barbie movie was the highest-grossing American movie in 2023? It has over a billion dollars in gross worldwide and has won (and is winning) awards. Barbie,

Sisterhood of Sleuths by Jennifer Chambliss Bertman

By Kim Harris,

order, I saw the book Sisterhood of Sleuths by Jennifer Chambliss Bertman and thought it would be a perfect addition to the collection. It is a middle grade mystery centering around Maizy, who is a 6th grader that discovers a box of donated books at her mom's second-hand store, Alter Ego. The books are Nancy Drew books, and one even has an inscription inside: to Annette from Susie. Maizy was going to pass the books on to the local bookstore when she discovers a picture of her grandmother Jacuzzi (Grandma Susie) and two other ladies taken 30 years ago. Maizy has many questions, especially when Jacuzzi denies being in the picture. Maizy then launches an investigation with her new friends Nell and Cam using the inspiration of Nancy Drew's legacy to discover a truth from the past.

Maizy is having a hard time adjusting to the new attitude her best friend Izzy has now that they're in 6th grade. Maizy is happy making movies with their stuffies and playing while Izzy now wants to be known as Isabelle and wants to experiment with makeup and nail

Musical Flora and Son Is Heartfelt, Foul-mouthed, Feel-Good Fun

By Ryan Rojas Cinemacy.com

Writer-director John Carney's crowd-pleasing movie musicals are similar to the infectiously catchy pop songs that soundtrack them so spectacularly. His movies, like the songs he helps write for them, celebrate the human spirit in heartfelt, emotional, and uplifting ways. However, underneath their charm and feel-good surfaces also lies a deceptive, painful truth that Carney can't help but fixate on: humans long to connect, despite not knowing how to communicate with each other. As his latest film Flora and Son (now streaming on Apple TV+) shows, sometimes the universal language of music is the only thing that can allow us to connect.

Set in Carney's native home country of Dublin, Ireland, the film follows fiery, foul-mouthed Flora (Eve Hewson), a lively young mother struggling to make ends meet. Spirited but scattered, Flora's world has been reduced to fit inside a cramped apartment where she is raising her young, rebellious son Max (Orin Kinlon), and where the walls rattle from the daily shouting matches before Max storms off. Warned that his punkish behavior could land him in the court system, Flora happens upon a secondhand guitar, which she tunes and gifts to her son—to no effect.

As boredom sets in, Flora decides to learn

New Wellness Center Helps ESHS Students Thrive

Since opening last August, Our Place at El Segundo High School has become a welcoming and calming spot for students to invest in and find support for their mental health and wellbeing. The room was designed with comfort and relaxation in mind, offering students a variety of seating options, including beanbag chairs and assorted furniture. The space features a main room and three additional spaces to provide individuals with options for a quiet place to relax, reset, or even take an exam, if necessary.

Inside the center, students encounter a variety of activities and materials to help them with challenges like depression, anxiety, stress, drug abuse, adjusting to high school, and social media. Students also have access to a variety of support services, such as individual and group counseling, teacher consultations, and topic-related groups. Several enthusiastic and dedicated students were selected to serve as peer-counselors for Our Place. They're currently undergoing orientation and training, and will soon begin serving in a peer-to-peer support role. ESHS School Psychologist Jan Van Horn said the wellness center is filling a critical role on campus.

The wellness center also has opened opportunities for partnerships with community organizations. This year, the district began working with Blue Line Dog Therapy, which visits the school one to two times per month. The organization brings Macy Gray, an Australian Retriever, and her partner, Carol, to provide animal therapy services for students. Blue Line Dog Therapy has committed to providing a therapy dog for Our Place every other week for the remainder of the school year.

The pandemic intensified mental health struggles, especially among teens and young adults, emphasizing the critical need for comprehensive and accessible support systems. This wellness center aims to provide a holistic solution for the mental health struggles faced by ESHS students. Initiatives like Our Place emphasize the El Segundo Unified School District's ongoing commitment to the success and wellbeing of its students. This focus on comprehensive wellness positions students to excel both in the classroom and beyond.

Going Back to School Make Higher Education Work For You

(BPT) - As you start the new year, you may be thinking about completing your education to pursue your career goals - or even enter an entirely new field. But if you've been out of school for a while, how can you make your resolution a reality? Between work, family and other obligations, the idea of going back to college can seem challenging. These days, there are more available options than ever before to access highly flexible educational opportunities. Many institutions of higher education offer online/remote or hybrid classes that make it easier to fit them into your busy schedule.

When researching opportunities, ask about specifics of different learning modalities, such as whether remote/online classes are synchronous (you attend remotely but at set times, making it easier to engage in real-time interaction) or asynchronous (you can engage with class materials on your own timetable), or how often hybrid classes expect you to participate in person, and where.

You may also consider a school that offers competency-based education (CBE) as an effective way to potentially meet your educational needs more efficiently. Through this flexible learning model, you earn credentials by demonstrating mastery through multiple forms of assessment.

Just because you've been out of school for a while doesn't mean you've stopped learning. Many schools today acknowledge the value of adult learners' experience by offering credit for prior learning (CPL) or experiential learning opportunities, which grant college credit for skills and knowledge you've gained outside of school, such as during military service. It's always worth

To help attract, retain and upskill employees, many companies today offer education benefits such as tuition assistance - even for part-time employees in some companies - and your coursework does not always need to be directly related to your job. According to the LinkedIn Workplace Learning Report 2023, providing learning opportunities has become a priority for organizations that are working to improve retention. Ask your employer about their tuition assistance program, as this can save you money as you work to increase your value as an employee. • a doll, a Mattel toy that first appeared in 1959, is now a very popular movie. Not too shabby for a company that began in a garage.

The South Bay is often feted as the place where Northrop Corporation was established, and aviation has spread its wing; where Marilyn Monroe spent formative years as a young girl, where the revered Beach Boys grew up and wrote many of their beloved songs, where Jim Thorpe, the inspirational Native American and stellar Olympic athlete, spent time and today has a park named in his honor. Also, let's not forget Space X (which sends rockets soaring into outer space). For years, the productive Chevron refinery has helped fuel motor vehicles and airplanes. The El Segundo team won the Little League Championship. The United States Space Force is also a significant presence in El Segundo.

All of that said and acknowledged, Barbie, too, has been and remains here. When Mattel moved from Hawthorne, it settled right next door in El Segundo. The South Bay is Barbie's home. But, think back for a moment to March 1959 when Barbie was first introduced to the public. She was simply an eleven-inch plastic figure whose full name was (well, is) Barbara Millicent Roberts.

Ruth Handler had watched her daughter play with make-believe paper dolls of adult women and believed there was an opportunity in the market for a toy that would encourage young girls to imagine the future. Indeed, here we are, over sixty years later. Barbie is thriving. She is a South Bay stalwart.

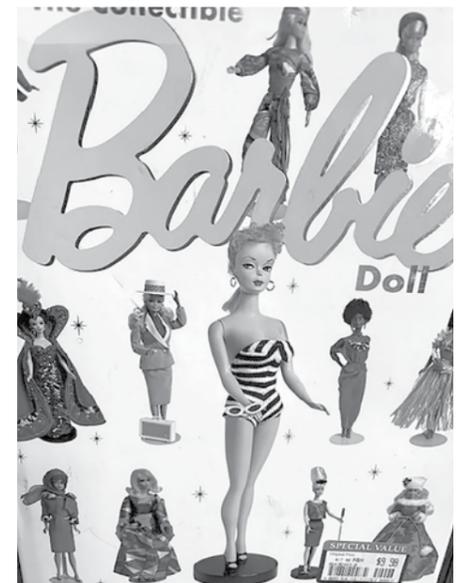

You go, girl!•

guitar herself, signing up for online lessons where she meets upbeat, Los Angeles-based Jeff (Joseph Gordon Levitt). Drawn to her hilarious sense of humor and wry coaxing, the pair become closer, and soon Jeff is sharing original songs with Flora, which inspires her to do the same. Her newfound musical interest not only gives her an identity and sense of life purpose, but becomes a way for her to connect with Max who she learns has been producing hip-hop and electronic pop music. The more music Flora brings into her world, the deeper she connects to Max and Jeff. Life, however, can get in the way of even the best melodies, she soon discovers.

Fans of Carney's (like me) will recognize that while his films are unabashedly feel-good fun, his characters are charmingly defiant rebels whose artistic spirits bump them up against the system. Going back to his directorial debut and star-making arrival with 2007's Once, to 2013's Begin Again, and through 2016's Sing Street, Carney's characters are often scraping to get by, and nearly down for the count after suffering life's punches. That is, until they discover the literal music inside of them which allows them to express their inner truths and live their fullest lives.

Flora and Son is so delightful, funny, heartwarming, and charming. And yet, while I loved it so much, it's also not Carney's best film (that remains Once, with Sing Street quickly behind). For one thing, the film is quite contained. The choice to have Flora and Jeff's relationship defined over the computer brings about limitations (I'm sure it was a conscious decision to illustrate their distance, another pandemic-era effect). However, Carney still breathes creative life into these scenes by cleverly staging ways to bring the presence of Flora and Jeff into each other's intimate living space through their conversations, illustrating the intensity of their bond.

But to review the film alone would be half-complete. Scored by John Carney and Gary Clark, the original songs are once again catchy, and moving. They have played in my head since I watched it, giving me chills as I bopped around in my seat during several of the catchy numbers. The songwriting might not reach the soaring highs of Once, or the unique synth energy of Sing Street, but songs like "Meet in the Middle" and "High Life" are fantastic and deserve to stand alone outside of the film.

Beyond John Carney's writing and direction, plus the wonderful songs, Flora and Son works because of its cast. Led by Eve Hewson, who embodies the main character of Flora amazingly, balancing her foul-mouthed toughness with a tender, funny, heartfelt spirit that also announces a star-making turn (she does have star-making charisma in her, being the daughter of Bono). Pairing well with her character is Or n Kinlon as her frustrated son Max. Jack Reynor pops up as Flora's former partner, Max's dad, in a shared custody situation. And rounding out the talent, Joseph Gordon-Levitt, as Jeff, brings his naturally warm-hearted self, along with musical chops, to pair well with Flora and give the movie its heart.

Flora and Son is a funny, heartfelt film, full of humor, heart, and infectious and emotional music. If this is your first start with John Carney, I'd recommend starting from the beginning and watching all his films. Through this cinematic journey, you might even discover the music that's inside of you.

polish. When Maizy and Izzy have to do a class project, Maizy writes a script about a lobster named Shellfish Holmes. Izzy wants to expand their group so invites Link and Ben to join their project. Soon Link and Ben take over the story and Maizy leaves the group to form another group with her old friend Nell and Cam. Nell likes to design fashions, Cam likes adventure and research and Maizy likes screenwriting and movie making. The three combine their interests into making a documentary about the legacy of Nancy Drew, focusing on her origins and the impact she made on many people throughout the years. Maizy also enlists Nell and Cam to help her solve the mystery of who donated the Nancy Drew books, who is Annette and why she isn't friends with Jacuzzi anymore.

As the documentary progresses, the girls learn that Carolyn Keene, the pseudonym author of the Nancy Drew books was not a real person but instead was an idea conceived by Edward Stratemeyer in the 1930's. He created the Stratemeyer Syndicate and hired Mildred Wirt Benson to write the first three novels. Mildred Wirt Benson embodied the spirit of Nancy Drew: she was adventurous, smart and excelled in many areas. She wrote 21 of the first 43 novels in the series. Maizy, Nell and Cam learned much of their information with the help of Harry, the librarian who doesn't like Nancy Drew, his nephew Calvin, a volunteer at the library, a suspicious college student Kelsey and her professor. Will Maizy and her friends solve the mystery of Annette? How is Jacuzzi involved in the Nancy Drew books and why would she deny knowing Annette? What happens to Maizy and Izzy's friendship? Read the book to find out!

I really enjoyed reading Sisterhood of Sleuths! I'm a huge Nancy Drew fan and learned more about how she came to life in books and how she evolved over the years to adjust to a changing world. The book intertwines the history of Nancy Drew while also addressing the angst of growing up and losing and gaining friendships. It was fun to read and I especially enjoyed the author's note that explained the history of the Nancy Drew books. Purrrfect Companions

Kitten Rescue rescues cats and kittens from a variety of situations. Most live in our volunteers' homes and those volunteers foster them until we can find permanent homes for them. Young or old, tabby or Maine Coon, we care for orphaned and abandoned kittens that need to be bottle-fed around the clock, moms with litters, cats that need socialization, and sick or injured animals. When they are finally ready for their forever home, we will help match you with the purr-fect one. When you adopt, you save a life... and in turn enrich your own.

Biscuit was rescued from the streets alone, starving and scared. Now happy and healthy, Biscuit is ready for his ideal home. For this sweet boy, his home would include another young, playful kitty because he just loves to run and play. He also loves his humans and starts his motor purring as soon as you give him any attention. This super cuddly boy would do well in almost any home and has dogs in his foster home. He would also be great in a home with gentle, loving children. Because Biscuit is a very young, playful kitten, he must be adopted with another kitten or into a home with another playful kitty. Biscuit cannot be an only pet. He will brighten any home with lots of love and his silly kitten antics.

Boo is a calm, quiet and confident kitten. He loves a good petting and will melt in your arms or lap if you give him scratches and some loving words. While his siblings are always up for wrestling or chasing each other, Boo will often contentedly watch all the commotion from a cat tree like a wise owl. Boo has an even keel, but he also loves to play, especially with "da bird" feather wand toy. He loves to jump and chase da bird until he is so tired that he starts panting. Boo is very acrobatic and agile, and will do jumps and flips in the air.

Ziggy is an adorable "Velcro" kitty who wants to be with his human at all times. Lovable, gentle and sweet, he is looking for pets, kisses and snuggling whenever possible. Ziggy will sleep on top of his human at night just purring away. When you are watching TV, he will sit next to you or on top of you. He loves to play with all sorts of toys and is especially enamored with the track ball toy. He also enjoys going to high places and checking things out. Ziggy does need to be in a home with another young kitty as a playmate.

Sapphire is a sweet and funny tuxedo boy who loves to cuddle and get love from everyone. He has lots of kitten energy and equal amount of cuddle energy. He loves to lay on your chest and go under the covers to cuddle with you. This very clever little guy is always interested in watching and participating in anything you are doing. He will be your shadow following you around and does not want to miss out on anything. Sapphire also enjoys playing in the sink and splashing himself with the water!

Sorbet is a sweet, cuddly lap kitten with soulful eyes. She will run to greet you at the door. After some feather playtime, she will settle on your lap for pets and purrs. Sorbet is bonded with her Siamese sister Zabaglione, but could also be adopted with one of her other siblings. Though she was the tiniest of her litter, Sorbet has a lot of spirit and will fill your house with love. She is accustomed to a small friendly dog in her household.
