New Delta Air Lines Terminals Get a New Update at LAX

Mayor Eric Garcetti, Councilmember Joe Buscaino, Councilmember Mike Bonin, Delta Air Lines CEO Ed Bastian, President of the Board of Airport Commissioners Beatrice Hsu and HENSEL PHELPS Vice President and District Manager, Damian Buessing for a ribbon-cutting ceremony to unveil the new LAX Terminals 2 and 3 centralized headhouse. It is part of a joint $2.3 billion project that will completely reimagine the current Delta-dedicated facilities, some of which dated back to 1961. The new headhouse, which is part of a multi-year terminal transformation will open to the public on April 20. Departing passengers will enter through the new facility that consolidates locations for ticketing and check-in, security screening, and baggage claim. The four-level, 770,000 square foot building is the latest project to open as part of LAX's $15-billion modernization program. A Walk in Time Capsule

By Ron Sokol

July 4th is a rather significant date. It means fireworks and the celebration of our country's independence. It also is the birthdate of not only well-known author Nathaniel Hawthorne, but Laurine Woolwine, the daughter of developer B. L. Harding. Laurine convinced her dad to name his proposed township Hawthorne back in 1905 when Mr. Harding and H.D. Lombard formed the Hawthorne Improvement Company. The two gentlemen bought some acreage and planned an 80-acre town site. The first plot was recorded in January 1906, with the initial land sale in July that year. There were all of three company dwellings at the time.

Today Hawthorne is bustling with over 88,000 residents. Hawthorne was early advertised as the town "between the City and the Sea." Today it is known as "the City of Good Neighbors."

History does have a way of impressing and teaching us. It helps us look back to see where we were and be better able to say where we are going. Thankfully, in 2011 the Hawthorne Historical Society was founded. The flagship is a wonderful museum located at 14100 Prairie Avenue, next door to Jim Thorpe park (good positioning indeed).

Bob Jensen has been the President of the Hawthorne Historical Society for three years now. Hawthorne is where he was born and raised. His parents were business owners in the South Bay, so he became quite familiar with how the city operates. Bob has notable enthusiasm for his hometown.

"Hawthorne has been a constant wellspring of innovation contributing to America's prosperity and culture: Jim Thorpe - Marilyn Monroe - the Flying Wing - Barbie - the Beach Boys - SpaceX, . . . and we're just getting started! We are very grateful for private citizens, Hawthorne natives, city officials, and service club members who have preserved pieces of the community's story and donated them to the Historical Society's collection. We want to preserve the city's history for the benefit of those who live here and those visiting who want to find out just who we've been and who we have become."

When folks look back at Elon Musk and the cutting-edge work of Space X, do you think Hawthorne might be renamed "the City of Dreams"? And, let's not forget Mattel. Barbie may indeed have an insight or two about her hometown as well.

Bob Jensen speaks very clearly: "One of Hawthorne's great attributes is diversity, which contributes greatly to our community. Russell Westbrook is an outstanding NBA star. Tarik Brock, first base coach for the Pittsburgh Pirates, are just a few luminaries. To be certain, Hawthorne has many cultures and races -- Asian, Native American, African Americans, and Pacific Islanders among them.

Historic and Scenic Train Rides in the West (Part I)

Travel at a Slower Pace with These Locomotives from an Earlier Era

May 10, 2019, marks the 150th anniversary of the completion of the nation's first transcontinental railroad. When the ceremonial gold spike was driven in at Promontory Summit, Utah, joining the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific rail lines, traveling coast to coast became easier and faster, opening the West to more settlement, commerce, industry, and tourism. Vacationers from other parts of the country rode the railroad to see the stunning landscapes of the West—the buttes, canyons, deserts, and mountains.

Now, more than a century later, tourists are still seeing these landscapes by train. On these historic railroads, watch soaring trees or rolling vineyards pass by your window as you view a new angle on the American West.

7 Days Finds the Heart in Sheltering In Place Together

By Ryan Rojas, Cinemacy (www.cinemacy.com)

Where to watch: Now playing in Los Angeles at AMC & Alamo Drafthouse Downtown.

Originally making its world premiere at the Tribeca Film Festival 2021, 7 Days is a feel-good, charming and heartfelt rom-com that perfectly captures this modern moment. It's a pretty conventional rom-com set-up that we've seen before: two young people go on an awkward first date, and when forces greater than them trap them together, Ravi (Karan Soni), on track for medical school and startled to see Rita's true colors.

Between the laughably awkward moments and reveals that Ravi and Rita experience together, 7 Days makes for a very funny time. Geraldine Vaswanathan adds her effortless appeal here, but it's Karan Soni who, as the hilariously effeminate and uptight Ravi, earns most of the laughs, each new reveal eeking out a quietly terrified reaction.

Past the cute setup, 7 Days takes on the more grim reality of COVID (impressively, must endure each other for much longer than anticipated.

But 7 Days adds to that simple setup. The film's writers—director Roshan Sethi, and one half of the film's stars' Karan Soni—give 7 Days its unique voice by crafting the central premise around experiences they both know well: the pressure felt by young Indian-Americans from their traditional parents to find their future spouses.

We soon find that Ravi (Karan Soni) and Rita (Geraldine Viswanathan), pleasant as they are in person, don't exactly attract. The comedy comes quickly once they find themselves trapped together by COVID's shelter in place orders (the film was shot during the pandemic as well), and it's here where we find that there are some discrepancies in who their parents promoted them to be on their date.

Rita (Geraldine Viswanathan) turns out to be less than traditionally conforming, cracking a morning beer and stowing away to talk to her "daddy" while carelessly leaving her vibrator lying around the house. This shocks the straight-laced and more traditionally-minded director Roshan Sethi is also a doctor), and we are given a deeper emotional story than before. It's here when real life health concerns force Ravi and Rita to acknowledge the larger parts about their lives, with their anxieties about getting older and the pressure of finding their future spouses.

Although it all takes place in a single room, the film presents a much bigger scope of life and explore's how the world's bigger than ourselves. The single location does present a limited vision then what you might be familiar with, but it's also what allows the actors to be so comfortable. And it's so well-paced that it doesn't feel limited, exploring little moments like cooking food together and getting drunk in fun ways.

There's definitely not as much cinematic bravado as say, Netflix's Malcom & Marie, a much more self-serious and technically deliberate look at dating and exploring space within a single location. But here, watching Ravi and Rita is like hanging out with fun and affable friends, and the relaxed writing and performances all adds to the film's

Other People's Clothes by Calla Henkel

By Library Assistant Mary Martes

Zoe, an art student living in New York is adrift after losing her best friend to a gruesome crime. Ivy was her other half from childhood, her only real friend. Unable to concentrate enough to continue school, her career counselor advises her to go abroad as an exchange student. Although not her first choice, Zoe lands in Berlin along with fellow student Hailey. They have classes together but are not well acquainted. Being in a foreign city and unable to speak the language, Zoe is happy to team up with Hailey. Thus, begins their adventure.

Hailey is everything Zoe is not – outgoing, ambitious, well-traveled, fluent in German, and from a very wealthy family. Zoe is unsure of herself, attends art school on scholarship, and hails from a small town outside Orlando, Florida. Looking for a place to stay, they happen upon an old pre-war apartment with cavernous ceilings and architectural detail. Beatrice Becks is a bestselling crime thriller novelist who is attending a writer's retreat for the summer and wants to sublet the apartment. Hailey and Zoe quickly agree to move in despite the peculiar behavior of their landlord and her lookalike mother. As time passes, they notice that something is not right. Could Beatrice be spying on them as models for her next book? Hailey decides that if Beatrice wants to write a thriller using them, she will take control of the narrative. Drugs, debauchery and destruction result as their days become a routine of hangovers, club nights, and bohemian society. As the women dive deeper into questionable notoriety, Hailey becomes increasingly unhinged and Zoe is plagued with paranoia, seeing signs of Beatrice everywhere.

The pace of this book feels like a movie score. It starts off slowly, melodically, relaxing into the rhythm. The tempo begins to quicken as does your heart, and the story begins to accelerate, steadily becoming more urgent and dances like the characters with wild, joyous abandon. As the tension rises, a dissonance grows beneath and explodes with a shattering crescendo and a shuddering halt. And just when you think it is over, the slow, discordant notes end with a shocking inevitability.

As the Museum continues to honor Hawthorne's history, we want to ensure our diversity is proudly displayed."

In July this year, Hawthorne will celebrate its 100th anniversary from when it first became an incorporated city. One hundred years! There is a commemorative dinner on July 8th, a parade and block party on July 9th, a day at the Museum on July 10th, and the opening on July 12th of a time capsule buried in 1972.

Speaking of which, the Museum itself can be described as a walk-in time capsule. Open Tuesdays and Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., with more activities returning now that the Pandemic is lessening. Take a look online at <https://hawthornehistoricalsociety.org/>. Members get a fun and very informative newsletter, among other benefits. It is indeed a chance to be a part of history.

Well, I think "City of Dreams" is an excellent motto for Hawthorne, along with "City of Good Neighbors," of course. •

News for the City of Good Neighbors from an Old Guy named Norb Huber

MORE THAN A GAME

Baseball is back, with opening day this week. Baseball is different than football or basketball or hockey or soccer. Major League Baseball is truly America's Past-time. Baseball is much more than a game to a lot of Americans, at least it is for the baby boomer generation and older folks that grew up with the game. We collected baseball trading cards. We listened to games on the radio. We had our heroes. Willie Mays was mine. The neat thing about baseball is that our teams play almost every day. So, if they lose badly one day, there is less than 24 hours to get out there and try to win one for the fans. We get emotionally tied to our home teams. We feel great when they win and terrible when they blow one in the last inning. The Cubs fans celebrate a victory by flying a big, white and blue, "W" flag out in front of their homes. Most teams have a victory song they play after a win. "New York, New York" is played in the Bronx. We all miss Vin Scully. He was the best announcer the game has ever known. He connected with fans of all ages. He made the game feel like a family outing. He could paint pictures with his words. "It's time for Dodgers baseball" was the beginning of two or three or more hours of relaxing times. "It's a beautiful day for ball game" is still played before the Dodger broadcasts. Yes, it's true that the game is great "all the way from Walla Walla to Kalamazoo"! Baseball is enjoyable even if your team is in last place and win one game ever once in awhile. The team, regardless of whether they are good or bad, is the city's identity. All of the history, all of the stats, all of the traditions go into making baseball what it is. Where else can you stand in the sunshine and sing the national anthem with thousands of other fellow Americans? Where else to you stand and sing: "Take me out to the ball game . . . buy me a cold one and some crackerjacks, I don't care if we ever get back". Maybe that is the key to our passion for baseball, it is our escape from the stresses of our day and our worries about the future. We need relaxation. We need to root and cheer and pull for our guys. We are more than entertained, we are part of the struggle to win, we feel that we are part of the team. Yes, it's just a game, but baseball means a lot more than a game to many of us, it's life, it's joy, it's disappointment, it's everything that life is. Every game there is a chance, a chance that we will win. Every day is a new opportunity for us to live, to enjoy life. Win or lose there's always another game tomorrow! Good Luck to you Dodger fans or Cardinal fans or Giant fans. Enjoy the season. Enjoy life! Don't forget to have cold one and relax.

If You are 50 and Older, You May be At Risk for Shingles

(BPT) - If you are 50 years of age or older, the virus that causes shingles is likely already inside of you. In fact, nearly all - 99% - of adults carry the virus that causes shingles, yet research has showed that only 7% of adults over 50 believed they were at an increased risk of developing the disease. But did you know there are steps you can take right now to prevent yourself from getting it?

Shingles, also known as herpes zoster, typically presents as a painful rash that develops on one side of the face or body. Shingles is caused by the reactivation of the varicella zoster virus (VZV), the same virus that causes chickenpox. After chickenpox, the VZV remains dormant in a person’s system and can reactivate years later. This reactivation causes shingles.

Unfortunately, experiencing shingles can be an isolating and painful experience. More than 96% of people who get the disease experience acute pain, often described as aching or burning. The symptoms can cause significant disruptions in a person’s day-to-day activities for up to several weeks.

People may also have long-term effects from shingles. Once the rash is gone, some people experience what is known as post-herpetic neuralgia (PHN) - a painful complication that can last for several months, and in rare cases up to several years. PHN is one of the most common complications of shingles, and occurs in anywhere from 5% to 30% of people who have had the disease.

As people age, natural immunity tends to wane and hinders the body’s ability to prevent the virus from reactivating and causing shingles. This waning tends to happen around 50 years old but can occur earlier.

Even if you’re a healthy, active person, you can still be at risk for shingles. Approximately one in three people in the US will develop shingles in their lifetime. It’s important that you consider your risk of getting shingles seriously and take action, so it doesn’t impact your life.

Since shingles is caused by a virus that can lay dormant in a person’s system, there is also a possibility of recurrence. Due to the nature of the virus, it’s difficult to pinpoint whether or not someone could continue experiencing recurrences. If you’ve had it once and haven’t taken action to protect yourself, you still have a risk of developing shingles again.

Since the shingles virus is inside of you, social contact is not a precursor for getting the disease. The risk is always there if you’ve had chickenpox. It is worth noting that if you never had chickenpox or received the chickenpox vaccine and you come into contact with the fluid from the blisters of the shingles rash, you can develop chickenpox. This could put you at risk of developing shingles later in life.

There are preventable steps that adults can take to protect themselves against the disease. All adults 50 years and older should speak with their doctor or pharmacist to learn more about how they can reduce their risk of shingles through vaccination. • simple charms.

To these ends, 7 Days is impactful because of its accurate look at young people's mindsets, of which looking for love, completion and the future are all so present. It's also impactful because they track COVID's deadly progression along with the meet-cute story, which is a strange layer of reality to see so soon following the very real pandemic.

And yet, 7 Days remains a fun, easy-to-watch romantic comedy that's straight up funny, going for every laugh it goes for, before becoming a sincere and heartfelt story on relationships in the age of a pandemic. It also leaves you wondering, how am I going to live after COVID? Who will I choose to be, and who will I choose to love? Will I choose to play things more traditional and safe, or dare for something more in this new

Easy Chicken Biscuits

Provided by Campbells Soup Corp.

This Easy Chicken & Biscuits recipe only takes 5 minutes to prep, making it perfect for weekday dinners, and it's also a great way to use up leftover chicken or turkey! Easy Chicken & Biscuits is like pot pie in a skillet! While the oven is heating, quickly simmer chicken and vegetables in condensed cream of potato soup- the soup makes a rich and creamy sauce that brings the filling together. Then, right in the skillet, just top the filling with refrigerated biscuits (we cut them up so you get bites of biscuit scattered all over the top) and bake until golden brown.

Ingredients

- 1 can (10 1/2 ounces) Campbell's® Condensed Cream of Potato Soup or Cream of Chicken Soup
- 1 1/4 cups milk
- 1/2 teaspoon dried thyme
- 2 cups frozen mixed vegetables (carrots, green beans, corn, peas) (about 9 ounces)
- 2 cups cubed cooked chicken or turkey
- 5 unbaked refrigerated biscuits (about 10 ounce package biscuit dough), cut in quarters

Directions

- Step 1: Heat the oven to 400°F. While the oven is heating, stir the soup, milk, thyme, vegetables and chicken in a 10-inch ovenproof skillet. Season with salt and pepper. Heat over medium-high heat to a boil, stirring often.
- Step 2: Arrange the biscuits on the chicken mixture.
- Step 3: Bake for 20 minutes or until the biscuits are golden brown and done.

Tips

- For the easiest cooked chicken, substitute 3 cans (4.5 ounces each) Swanson® Premium White Chunk Chicken Breast in Water, drained, for the 2 cups cooked chicken.

Rim of the Grand Canyon, as musicians and cowboy characters entertain you. You'll have a choice of several types of cars (some with air-conditioning), including restored 1920s Pullmans and 1950s railcars. Overnight packages with stays at the Grand Canyon Railway and Hotel are available.

Who it's for: Everyone, including families with children of all ages. AAA members save 15 percent off train, hotel, and RV park reservations year-round, and 20 percent on the AAA "Rails to the Rim" and "Rails to Rim Plus" packages.

What's special: Every year through December and into early January, hop on the annual Polar Express and travel 90 minutes to the "North Pole," located near Williams, Arizona. Mr. Claus and his reindeer greet those on the "nice list" with a holiday present. While sipping on hot cocoa and eating freshly baked chocolate chip cookies, passengers will get into the Christmas spirit as they listen to a reading of the Chris Van Allsburg story of "The Polar Express." (Note: Spots tend to fill up quickly.)

Napa Valley Wine Train

Round-trip length: 36 miles

Time: Lunch and dinner trains, 1.5-3 hours. Half- and full-day winery tours are also offered.

Price: From $150

Info: 800-427-4124; winetrain.com

What you'll see: You'll ride in luxury aboard restored 1915 Pullman carriages once used by the Northern Pacific Railway. The carriages have mahogany paneling, brass accents, etched-glass partitions, and armchairs that mimic first-class travel in the early 20th century. While rolling past vineyards, you will learn about the history of Napa Valley's wineries and restaurants.

Who it's for: People who love good food and fine wine. Family-friendly excursions offer multicourse gourmet meals and stops for tours and tastings (for those 21 years and older) at some of California's best wineries.

What's special: Cinco de Mayo marks the start of Tequila Train excursions, where passengers can sample tequila from Casa Dragones, a small producer in San Miguel de Allende, Mexico.

Roxanne is a nice 1 year old female domestic short hair Tabby kitty who was abandoned by her owner. She would love a new home where she can have a cat scratcher, some tasty treats, and a nice companion to call her own. <https://spcala.com/adoptable/pet/?ss=LACA-A-3208>

Happy dog Oliver came to spcaLA because his owner moved. Oliver is a 2 year old male Pitt Bull/Housend mix who is working on his basic obedience with the trainers while he waits for his second chance family. He is affable, has a great personality, and loves to play with toys. <https://spcala.com/adoptable/pet/?ss=LACA-A-3432> •

LIFE IS A MIRACLE

Jack Paul Cross, our fourth grandchild, was born ten days ago. Each little baby reminds us all of what a miracle life is. God creates us in His image. How could such a precious little baby be a product of chance or evolution? How could cells just accidentally come together to form such a complex living being? Jack came out crying. He started feeding and pooping right from day one. Each day he grows bigger and stronger on his own. It is simply amazing that such a tiny, little infant can breath, sleep, cry and poop. We thank God for Jack. We thank God every day for life and health for all of us. We are miracles, all of us are miracles. We were created in God's image. We are children of God. He loves us as his children. We can breath, sleep, cry and poop and God has us in his hands. A baby's birth is a great reminder of who we really are, God's children.

HOLY WEEK

This Sunday is Palm Sunday. It's the start of Holy Week with all things leading up to Resurrection Sunday, Easter. If you don't attend a church, find one to attend on Easter. No one will turn you away. Christian churches around the world will be celebrating the greatest event the world has known, Christ's resurrection. We have eternal life in Jesus. He died and rose again for the whole world. Those who repent, have life, eternal life. He is Risen! We are saved in Him. Rejoice and be glad people.
