A New Era for U.S. Space Force's Space and Missile Systems Center

Amber Meshack Connects the South Bay Community to LAX

By Kiersten Vannest

Los Angeles International Airport (LAX) is the fourth busiest airport in the world. Second only to Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport, LAX is the busiest airport in the United States. Since its inception in 1928, LAX has evolved and grown to become California's travel hub, a gateway into Los Angeles.

All of this growth and innovation in the runways, terminals, and renovations can only happen with a strong and robust team to keep the wheels turning. Keeping the hiring process evolving as the airport does is Amber Meshack, Director of Business, Jobs, and Social Responsibility. Amber heads up a division that aims to be a model for other airports around the world, leading new programs aimed at diversity, equity, and inclusion.

"We take our commitment to our neighbors seriously with respect to the social responsibility side," she says, "The consideration of power and how our operations economically impact those around us is really what my job entails."

This means ensuring fair hiring processes, developing training programs, and writing contracts that encourage the employment of small local businesses. In addition, Meshack has created a program called BuildLAX, which helps train smaller contractors around the area on the specifics of what it takes to be successful working on construction projects for larger corporations.

Most remarkable about her department is a nationally recognized apprenticeship-ready program called HireLAX. This program is directly targeted at helping local workers create new careers. Meshack relays the shortage of construction workers right now due to high demand and an aging construction workforce.

What HireLAX aims to do is to offer a training program to people from all walks of life in the Los Angeles and South Bay area. This could be high school students looking for an alternative to a four-year college, people looking for new careers, or even those with a past who are looking to begin a new venture.

"These jobs pay very well, and they provide a benefits package," says Meshack, "It's also something where you could put yourself through college working as a construction worker." As four-year colleges become more of a prerequisite for the workforce, less emphasis has been put on skilled trade jobs like construction work. Meshack tells of a female friend of hers who used

SMC and Its Mission Partners Successfully Launch Fifth GPS III Satellite

The U.S. Space Force's Space and Missile Systems Center and its mission partners successfully launched the fifth Global Positioning Systems (GPS) III Space Vehicle at 12:09 p.m. EDT (9:09 am. PDT) June 17 from Space Launch Complex-40 at Cape Canaveral Space Force Station.

The Lockheed Martin-built satellite was carried to orbit aboard a Space Exploration Technologies Corporation (SpaceX) Falcon 9 launch vehicle, previously used in a GPS launch last November, marking the first National Security Space Launch to use a reusable booster. The GPSIII reuse/recovery missions are saving the government a total of $64.5 million.

"The launch of GPS III SV05 is a testament to SMC's ability to rapidly and safely deliver new capabilities on orbit. This successful launch occurred just seven months after SV04 and the team worked concurrent operations between both SVs during the dynamic situation presented by COVID-19," said Mr. Cordell DeLaPena, Jr., USSF program executive officer for SMC's Space Production Corps. "At SMC, we are proud to deliver our fifth GPS III satellite and will continue to operate at an accelerated pace to meet the demands of our users."

GPS III SV05 is the 24th Military Code (M-Code) satellite to join the current GPS constellation comprised of 31-operational spacecraft, the last required for M-Code

'The Sparks Brothers' is a Music Documentary About the Best Band You've Never Heard

By Ryan Rojas for cinemacy.com

Spanning every bit of two hours and twenty minutes, it's clear that director Edgar Wright feels indebted to both educate, as well as attempt to make audiences appreciate the art-pop duo Sparks—the most influential band that you've never heard of—in the highly entertaining music documentary, The Sparks Brothers.

An unabashed pop music fan himself, Edgar Wright (Baby Driver) makes it his mission to not only tell the story of the Mael brothers—Ron against the mainstream of pop music that they'd would eventually operate in.

Of course, Ron and Russell themselves are present in this doc, too. So too do they want a part in constructing this (their) story, as their authorship has always been integral to their presentation. What I found interesting about The Sparks Brothers is that, while the Mael brothers were clearly all-too gleeful playing pop-provocateurs throughout their career (Ron famously sported a sort-of Hitler moustache, which

and Russell, whose band "Sparks" not only spans over five decades in which the pair made 25 studio albums and 500 songs—but capture their undefinable creative identity, and show how real commercial success would evade them over their entire career while they refused to compromise their vision.

But Wright the established filmmaker is up for the job, telling Sparks' story with an inspired assortment of zany and diverse animation styles whose tongue in cheek humor mix with the band's own ironical detachments. By intercutting these animations with an array of interviews from the music and entertainment world—including Beck, Mike Meyers, Jason Schwartzman and Flea (as well as Wright himself), who all profess their love for Sparks—it's a wealth of riches to tell Sparks' story.

To understand Sparks is to understand the Mael brothers: born in Santa Monica, California (already confusing, as most everyone thought they were a British band), there's Ron (the "older" one) and Russell (the "cute" one), who were raised on a diet of Hollywood and cinema by their late father (who passed away before the boys were teens). It was this level of theatricality and cinema that would inspire the band aesthetically, and would later influence them philosophically through the appreciation of French new wave film, in which the brothers' self-awareness would rally them to churn he would say curiously never got mistaken for Chaplin), it's clear that they were in some small part motivated by a desire to break into the mainstream, to be more famous than they were, or to a more simple degree, "be understood."

One of the most surprising and telling reveals is when, after the album of their first band, "Halfnelson," didn't sell well, it was their manager at the time who advised them to change their name to what would become Sparks (as they were told they looked like the Marx Brothers). While Sparks would (and should) be the last band in the world to be accused of having motivations to work to fulfill

How To Help Senior Loved Ones Protect Themselves From Financial Abuse

(BPT) - An often-overlooked aspect of elder abuse is cybercrime - and it's a problem that's getting worse.

In 2020, the FBI reported a record amount of cybercrime complaints - nearly 800,000 - adding up to over $4.1 billion in losses. More than half of those losses were suffered by people aged 50 and older.

"The financial consequences are staggering," said DJ Johnson, senior vice president of financial crimes risk management at Charles Schwab. "It's something we all need to prioritize, dedicate resources to address and work closely on to prevent."

The FBI data shows that, on average, Americans aged 50 and over lost nearly $5 million every single day, or nearly $3,500

Full Operational Capability.

M-Code in the newest generation of GPS satellites, brings new capabilities to users, delivering positioning, navigation and timing (PNT) information with three times the accuracy and up to eight times the anti-jamming capability than its predecessor. SV05 augments a GPS III constellation that broadcasts a new civilian signal called LIC, which is easier to acquire, allows for ionospheric corrections, and improves reception in cities and remote areas.

GPS III SV05 separated from its upper stage approximately 90 minutes after launch. Engineers and operators at Lockheed Martin's Waterton Facility will now begin on-orbit checkout and tests, which are estimated to complete in approximately two weeks. Operational use is expected to begin in a few months.

"Today's launch culminated our work to use previously-flown hardware for NSSL missions," said Dr. Walter Lauderdale, Launch Enterprise's Falcon division chief. "Our partnership with SpaceX enabled us to complete this huge milestone well in advance of our first Phase 2 NSSL launch, enhancing flexibility and resiliency for National Security Space missions."

The U.S. Space Force's Space and Missile Systems Center, located at Los Angeles Air Force Base in El Segundo, California, is the center of excellence for acquiring and developing military space systems. SMC's portfolio includes space launch, global positioning systems, military satellite communications, a defense meteorological satellite control network, range systems, space-based infrared systems and space situational awareness capabilities.

Tips To Pay For Your Child's College Education

(BPT) - College tuition bills are due right around the corner. It's true that college can be expensive, but knowing all of the different financing options available and making a plan can help you and other parents find peace of mind.

However, it's easy to feel overwhelmed as you and your child evaluate the options. According to a recent survey by College Ave Student Loans, 71% of parents feel overwhelmed by the cost of college. Fortunately, you can ease these stressors by exploring your options and selecting the ones right for you.

"Even with college funding plans in place, seeing your first tuition bill can be a shock," said Joe DePaulo, CEO and Co-Founder of College Ave Student Loans. "After all, it's one of the biggest investments you can make for your child's future. Being aware of all the financing options that are available to you can help make the process less stressful and create a path forward on how to cover college costs."

The best payment methods will often depend on your financial situation, but before you make your decision, here are a few options to consider:

If your child is looking to apply for college financial aid, the first thing they should do is fill out their FAFSA form. The Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) helps the federal government, states and colleges determine how much financial aid your child qualifies for, including accessing federal student loans.

The new 2021-2022 FAFSA form is available. And because some states and schools have limited funds, it's crucial to fill out and submit your forms sooner rather than later.

If your family's financial situation recently changed due to a job loss or a drop in income, you may be eligible for adjustments regarding your financial aid.

Some people think that if their child isn't a straight-A student, they won't qualify for scholarships. However, that isn't entirely true. Grants and scholarships are the most common methods families use to pay for college, according to the College Ave survey. There are many types of nonacademic scholarships that are available based on things like:

- Extracurricular activities
- Community scholarships
- Random prize drawings

Websites like Fastweb, Scholly, Cappex and UNIGO all have resources for finding scholarships that fit your child's needs. College Ave Student Loans also offers a $1,000 monthly scholarship sweepstakes.

Grants are like a scholarship that come from the federal government. The most well-known one is the Pell Grant, which offers subsidies that help students with significant financial need help pay for college.

With Pell Grants, the amount is dependent on a student's expected family contribution, the cost of attendance, the student's enrollment status and whether the student attends for a full academic year or less.

A lot of students work part-time jobs to support themselves while attending college. Many schools will offer on-campus jobs as a work-study option, which is financed by government aid and connected to your FAFSA.

If you've accomplished the above and you're still looking for additional funds, federal student loans can be a viable option. If you qualify, you should receive a letter from your school that details how much money and the types of loans you can get from the federal government.

One of the major benefits of federal student loans in the student's name is that they come with a low fixed interest rate and multiple repayment plans.

While federal loans are a great option, you may eventually hit the annual borrowing limit, depending on how much you plan to borrow.

If you do hit that cap, there are ways you can cover the rest. Private student loans, like those offered by College Ave Student Loans, can bridge the gap between the aid you've already received, and the amount you need to cover the remaining costs.

Every family will follow their own path when it comes to how they pay for college and will likely need a variety of sources to help. That's why finding payment options that fit your budget and your child's future goals is important. For more information on how to plan and pay for school, visit collegeavestudentloans.com.

per minute, to cybercriminals.

To protect your loved ones from financial cybercrime, the first step is awareness. What are the scams?

While fraud can come in many forms, some criminal schemes are targeted at the senior population, including:

- Romance scam: Fraudsters present themselves as potential romantic partners online to exploit their targets' desire for companionship - a desire that has grown for many who have felt isolated through the coronavirus pandemic - and eventually get access to their money.

- Person in need scam: Criminals pretend to be a loved one (e.g., a grandchild) in immediate trouble and need of money right away.

- Investment scam: Outreach with phony investment opportunities.

- Fraud investigation scam: Criminals pose as law enforcement officials, asking for personal information or even money to help with their investigation.

- Technology scam: Fraudsters appear to be a technology support team member or someone from a trusted financial institution asking for remote access to fix a fabricated technical or account issue.

Who Are the Perpetrators?

When we think of fraudsters, we tend to think of nameless, faceless people sitting in the dark, halfway around the world. In reality, a report by the Office of Financial Protection for Older Americans found that in 36% of cases, the victim knows the perpetrator personally.

This is why caregiving should be a group effort. Bring other loved ones into the conversation, instead of leaving it in the hands of just one person. Lean on the financial institutions you keep your money with to be an extra set of eyes and ears for you. For instance, at Charles Schwab, we have teams dedicated to identifying and dealing with fraud attempts.

How Can Caregivers Protect Senior Loved Ones?

For caregivers, if you're worried about your loved ones, start with this checklist to protect them:

- Talk about it. Have a conversation about common scams. Discuss your loved ones' investment goals and attitudes toward money so that you can recognize irregular behavior.

- Designate trusted contacts. Make sure financial institution reps know who to contact on your loved one's behalf in the event of suspected exploitation, fraud or health issues.

- Get organized. Locate and safely store important financial documents, such as wills, trusts, powers of attorney, account statements, insurance policies and beneficiary designations.

Even After You Put Things in Place for Your Loved Ones, Be Vigilant:

- Check in. Regularly review and update important financial documents.

- Listen. Pay attention to what your loved ones are saying and listen for worrying key phrases, such as "people are asking me for money," "my bills are confusing to me" and "I don't understand financial decisions that someone else is making for me."

- Watch. Look out for red-flag behaviors, including unusual or unexplained financial activity, abrupt changes to documents, unpaid bills or mail piling up, new friends or sweethearts or confused behavior.

audiences reactions (which they never did, to be clear), it is telling that a constant need to work against rejection fueled them to achieve pinnacles of creative accomplishments that, who knows, might not have happened otherwise.

Sparks' prolific output would be for our collective cultural benefit, as Ron (the songwriter) and Russell (the voice) would create some of the most genre-defining music of the '60s, '70s and '80s, which would go on to predate electronic synth music like New Order and Pet Shop Boys. So even if you're not aware of Sparks' music (which you likely aren't), or don't entirely "get" their music (which mass audiences clearly didn't—hence this doc), The Sparks Brothers is a fantastically abounding story about creative artists who were unafraid to chart forward, to re-define themselves, to change up the formula and evolve to new places, which is a rare but necessary thing for artists to do today. Sparks wanted to stay true to their selves and never compromise on their unique vision. So they chose to be the best band that you've never heard of—until now.

construction work to put herself through Berkeley Law School.

The idea behind this initiative is to make sure that this career opportunity is available across the board, providing a chance to build a lucrative career, whether in construction or working in another capacity at the airport.

Meshack oversees business connections in every facet of the airport, from construction to food and stores inside the terminals to IT. She strives to hire local businesses to help in the airport's operation and works to make sure that locals are hired by these businesses and the airport. LAX goes as far as to contract a local photographer or graphic artist on a project-by-project basis. She encourages local businesses and entrepreneurs to present their ideas and get involved.

Monthly, Meshack meets with what she calls their Innovation Lab. Each month, her team invites vendors to present ideas for goods and services. "We've gotten some really innovative ideas and partnerships in that way." Meshack lists things like apps, environmental upgrades, services, and designs.

Meshack herself comes from a background of working for the city. When this department was created, she was working as a chief of staff for the new people mover train project. Meshack was sourced to get her current division up and running. Using her knowledge of the city and management experience, she set to work developing strategies for the airport to be more inclusive.

"When we say diversity from all walks of life, we do have an emphasis on...heavy recruitment in the communities that are closest to the airport," says Meshack. In addition, when she draws up a contract with a vendor for the airport, a clause almost always exists that ensures fair, diverse, and local hiring. For the businesses she strives to include, she says that the airport provides in-house recruitment teams, which lessens the effort on the business to go through the time and labor-intensive process of hiring.

Meshack's future goals for the airport and her division revolve around the continuation of her team's efforts to increase inclusivity and expand diversity. "We [want to] continue to apply best practices for increasing diversity and equity in everything we do as an airport. Our CEO Justin Erbacci always says, 'it's not just what we do, it's how we do it,'" she says.

On June 23rd, Meshack's team will be holding a webinar intended to inform vendors about how to implement diversity and inclusion, as well as what the diverse LAX customer and workforce is looking for right now. For more information on the webinar, HireLAX, or BuildLAX, visit the Los Angeles World Airports (LAWA) career page or email businessandjobs@lawa.org.

Public Hearing on June 29, 2021 for adopting 2020 Urban Water Management Plan
The City of Inglewood provides water services to approximately 85,000 customers through 15,700 service connections within its service area of 7.2 square miles. The remaining customers are serviced by the Golden State Water Company or Cal America Water Company. The City service area is divided into three pressure zones for elevation differences that vary from 60 to 247 feet above sea level. The City's water production system consists of four active wells and the Water Treatment Plant. The City provides approximately 8,982 acre-feet of potable water to its customers every year. Of the 8,982 acre-feet of potable water served, 3,400 acre-feet are produced by City wells, and 5,582 acre-feet are purchased from the Metropolitan Water District via West Basin Municipal Water District (WBMWD). In addition, from WBMWD, City provides 686 acre-feet of recycled water to a few particular customers: Inglewood Cemetery and Hollywood Park, and City facilities.
The State of California Urban Water Management Planning Act of 1983 (Act) requires urban water suppliers servicing 3,000 or more connections or supplying more than 3,000 acre-feet of water annually to submit a Urban Water Management Plan (UWMP). The State of California, through the California Water Code

Division 6, Part 2.6, Sections 10610 to 10657, declares that each local government shall adopt a UWMP to help the State in implementing the plan and protect the interest of the people, business sector, and the economic climate. UWMPs are prepared by urban water suppliers every five years. These plans support the suppliers' long-term resource planning to ensure that adequate water supplies are available to meet existing and future water needs.

* Within UWMPs, urban water suppliers must:
• Assess the reliability of water sources over a 20-year planning time frame
• Describe demand management measures and water shortage contingency plans
• Report progress toward meeting a targeted 20 percent reduction in per-capita (per-person) urban water consumption by the year 2020
• Discuss the use and planned use of recycled water
Adopting the UWMP is required for the City to be eligible for State grants, loans, and assistance. City submitted its first UWMP to Department of Water Resources (DWR) in 1985, and updated plans were submitted in 1990, 1995, 2000, 2005, 2010, and 2015.
Pursuant to the Act, the City Council will consider public comments received, and any comments received will be noted in the final document to be filed with DWR.
Note: The UWMP 2020 with 1149 pages are available on City of Inglewood City Website for review. Hard copy are also available to public at Inglewood Public Works Department. Inglewood Daily News Pub. 6/17, 6/24/21
