Don Brann: Still “Being Born” After All These Years

By Duane Plank

Don Brann, who has worked in the fields of education and community service for 50 years, took his first teaching job at El Segundo’s Center Street School in 1970. Did he enter the teaching profession because he had a passion for educating and inspiring young minds to help shape the future?

Not really. It turns out Brann had a less altruistic, very practical reason for entering the educational field. “I wanted my summer’s off,” he said. “I realized that if I entered the regular working world, I wouldn’t get my summers off anymore.” After graduating from the USC school of business, he took a job with the May Company department store chain, but soon realized working that gig entails showing-up all year, a scenario that did not appeal to Brann all that much. “Hey, what happened to summer?” he remembers thinking while working at May Company. He decided to return to school and earn a teaching credential. “Then I would get my summer’s off,” he said.

Brann moved to Hawthorne in 1953, where he started his local schooling as a third-grader in the Wiseburn School District. He graduated from Hawthorne High in 1963, attended El Camino College, left with an AA degree, and then matriculated to USC’s school of business, graduating in 1968. Brann continued his schooling at Cal State Los Angeles, receiving a master’s degree in Elementary Education, then later returned to USC, leaving with an Ed. D degree in Administration in 1982.

Brann, who has served the El Segundo and Wiseburn communities for more than four decades, and is currently the president of the Da Vinci Charter School Board of Trustees, is slated to join the Herald, penning occasional columns that will mine his depth of experience in education, local governance, and local history. Brann said he anticipates opining on subjects ranging from residential living east of PCH, what he terms “ugly” El Segundo borders, Japanese families experiences in El Segundo in the ’30s and 40s, founding the Da Vinci Schools, and the Wiseburn Unified School District (WUSD) boundaries.

Brann has also served two stints on the El Segundo city council. At 74, Brann may have been the oldest person to serve on the council. Why did he decide to run for city council? “It is important for me to have meaning in my life, (hoping to) change the world, working through and with others.” There was an opening in the city council in 2008, after “retiring” from the neighboring Wiseburn school district, where he had served as superintendent since 1993. He ran for the council and won a seat, serving until 2012.

In 2010, Brann was nominated to become Mayor but lost to Eric Busch on a 3-2 vote. Ironically, Brann had the mayor post for the taking, but he decided to cast his vote for Busch, which tipped the scales, 3-2, in Busch’s favor. Do the math, right? Looking back, Brann says he “didn’t really need to be the Mayor, or care about it as much. “Eric Busch wanted to be the Mayor. I was content to just be a council member,” he said, adding that he “didn’t know when I went in that I would be a “maverick” council member, on the losing side, 4-1, of a majority of big votes affecting the city. “I just (did) my thing,” he said of his council tenure, “disagreeing without being disagreeable.”

Said Brann: “People, especially those who built this town,” seemed to like his political stances, noting that when he left the council six months ago, the old-guard in El Segundo lost “their champion” who often based his decisions on long-term “life experiences.”

He returned to the El Segundo City Council in 2016. He served until the end of 2019, when he stepped down because of a new law that mandated that if you were serving on a charter school board like he is with Da Vinci, then you could not serve in another office that you were elected to, like the El Segundo city council. Although no conflicts had arisen with Brann serving both posts, he was forced to make a choice and decided to keep his position with Da Vinci.

“It was an easy decision for me,” Brann said. “I like working with teachers and kids. I think they are a better bet to change the future than being on a city council.”

After his first city council stint, Brann returned to working as a superintendent with the San Gabriel Unified School District. In 2013, he was placed by Gov. Jerry Brown as the school board trustee/superintendent of the embattled, tumultuous, financially tanking Inglewood Unified School District. “A remarkable assignment,” Brann remembered, noting that at times he was protected by members of the California Highway Patrol. Brann was so successful in his assignment with the IUSD that he was selected as the Superintendent of the Year by Pepperdine University in 2014.

Brann has served as a school district superintendent an incredible six times, a career spanning 35 years. You might think that, at 74, Brann has had his fill of running school districts. But you would be wrong. “I don’t know if I will do another one (serve as a superintendent),” he said, keeping the door open to that, saying he wants to maintain meaning in his life. “I don’t want to be bored. I like the work; it is really challenging.”

Matt Wonder, chief executive officer of the Da Vinci schools, knows why Brann has been so sought after as a superintendent by multiple school districts. “Don Brann is a genius,” he said. “He can see a better future, and he can then create a tactical plan to execute it, then he can garner all the resources to enact that plan. At every moment, he cares deeply about people, and he has a great sense of how people

Huber's Hiccups

News for the City of Good Neighbors from an Old Guy named Norb Huber

WHERE DOES IT STOP?

I have to say something. I can't be quiet. It is time to stand up for something I believe in. Or do I just roll over and let the loudest voices rule? I can understand why statues commemorating Confederate leaders are being knocked over but now the mob is knocking down any and ever statue. Columbus was one of the first on the list but now Junipero Serra is being defaced and destroyed in many California locations. Some radical leaders are calling for the destruction of the images of Jesus, the European depiction of Jesus, that supposedly represents white superiority. Even stain glass windows of cathedrals have been targeted. This is going too far. I don't care what color of human skin Jesus had while he walked here on Earth. I do care that the beautiful images that we have to remind us of his love for us are being destroyed. Why do we need to change the names of cities that are named after historical people from our past? Does it really matter if that person is politically incorrect years after their death? We all have shortcomings. We all are sinners. We all have skeletons in our closets. Jesus said, "he that is without sin among you, be the first to cast the rock". He also said, "take the beam out of your own eye before you take the speck out of your brother's eye." There is something to be said about fearing God more than fearing Twitter or the mob or those who disagree with you. God tells us to love thy neighbor as thyself. He has given us the ten commandments in which to live by. Those who loot and steal have no fear of God. Thou shall not steal doesn't even cross their minds. I know that I speak for many of my loyal readers when I say we need to stand for what we know is right. We love our country. We love America's history, filled with good and bad. We truly have been the greatest nation that this world has ever known. We share values that bind us together. Those values of respect for authority and for each other, justice, equal rights and liberties, and patriotism. We love our flag and what it represents. We love our military people who are there to protect us. We love our peace officers who put their lives on the line every day and night. Without law and order, there simply is chaos. These values are not reserved for one race. These are shared values. God is colorblind. I believe that a majority of Americans are also colorblind. We want the best for all people, regardless of race.

Citizen Scientist: Cruise Control for Martian Motoring

By Tommy Vinh Bui, MLIS Associate Librarian Inglewood Public Library

School may be out but that doesn't mean the learning ceases, space cadets. Summer means it's time to pursue some knowledge acquisition outside of mandated curriculums without plodding through yet another wearisome Zoom session for the umpteenth time. This is a golden opportunity to wrap your brains around an edifying endeavor that'll produce some real world results. Other-worldly, actually.

With your help, Citizen Scientists, you can help the NASA Curiosity Rover form a more nuanced understanding of its surroundings and effectively navigate the asperous terrain of Mars. Using newfangled online tool A14Mars, participants can help to label terrain features in images already transmitted from the distant Red Planet. This process will aid in training an artificial intelligence algorithm to speedily and automatically read the local landscape.

Quickly find yourself stranded and surveying the dusty red orb that is Mars. Clamor over crevices and climb cairns of conspicuous space cobblestones. Slalom endless avenues of sand or careen to a halt on a bevy of bonnie bedrock. You can explore heretofore uncharted topographies and demarcate boundaries around turbulent terrain and help classify with labels. These labels will be critical to refining and honing the Martian terrain-classification algorithm SPOC (Soil Property and Object Classification). Terrain recognition is key to gallivanting around Mars. Prior missions have encountered hiccups when mired in sand pits when terrain has proven to be a cumbersome encumbrance to unfettered data-gathering. And that's where machine learning analytics come into play. With your help accumulating accurate training data to learn from, you would be essentially imbuing the Curiosity Rover with the same technology implemented in self-driving

Aviva Breaks – No, Smashes – All Conventions Through the Beauty of Dance

By Morgan Rojas for cinemacy.com

In a word: Groundbreaking. In two words: Must Watch. Aviva is a surreal, dance-driven fever dream set against a Jewish-Israeli NYC backdrop of love, loneliness, and the yearning for growth. Breaking the fourth as the director of the Denzel Washington football drama Remember The Titans, or the Brittany Murphy/Dakota Fanning comedy Uptown Girls. Aviva is nothing – nothing – like his previous work. In fact, I had to do a double-take when I saw his name in wall immediately and casually addressing this loose and transparent structure with confidence and ease, Aviva shouldn't work. But it does, and wonderfully.

What starts out as a promising long-distance relationship becomes much more complex when European-living Aviva – played by both Zina Zinchenko (and at times by Or Schraiber) – moves to New York City to be with the man she loves, Eden (played by Tyler Phillips, and at times Bobbie Jene Smith). The protagonists, at times, are played by both a man and a woman, interchangeably swapping genders in the middle of scenes. The masculine and feminine qualities within every person are given a physical body here, showing how we all are gender-fluid when it comes to expressing emotions and navigating through life. The rest of the film is just as poignant, including entire scene-long monologues, naked contemporary dance, and beautiful cinematography.

Aviva is a groundbreaking production from Boaz Yakin, who is probably better known the credits. The choreography from former Batsheva Dance Company member and co-star Bobbi Jene Smith is a visionary feat, making the arthouse Aviva - available to rent at www.outsiderpictures.us - one of my favorite films of 2020. •

Bridget Duffy A Hawthorne Resident

Bridget and her family have an amazing history, and there is plenty more that we wish we could fit into this article. We were introduced to Bridget when we reached out to our residents in the beginnings of the COVID-19 crisis. Bridget and her family's contributions are representative of the good people who have created our "City of Good Neighbors" Hawthorne. Following is an opportunity to get to know one of your wonderful neighbors and her family!

Raised by her mother, Joyce Hays Duffy, and her father, Wallace James Duffy, Bridget grew up in the city of Hawthorne with her four other siblings. Her parents bought a house in Hollyglen for $13,500 in 1954, while they both worked in local high schools. Her mother worked as a P.E. teacher at Hawthorne High School (while the Beach Boys were still attending) and later founded the Hawthorne Tennis Club in the 1960s along with three fit into an organization. He is also crazy smart and has darn close to a photographic memory. He can use history to inform the future. He also has a beautiful heart."

Don Brann

Like many people today, Brann is slogging through Zoom virtual meetings to fulfill his DaVinci school board commitments. He recently participated via Zoom in a search committee to select a new superintendent for the Hermosa Beach School District.

"Not my best world," he said of holding meetings on Zoom. "I like handshakes and hugs, but we are persevering through it," though he did acknowledge that Zoom meetings are time-savers because you don't have to get dressed for them," he quipped. But he admits that he misses the human element of face-to-face meetings. "I want to get back to the boardroom and to the people," he said.

With the COVID-19 pandemic still lurking ominously, Brann knows we have entered a brave-new-world. "I think the COVID-19 virus's impact is going to change many facets of American life," he said, noting trends such as online shopping, distance schooling, and telecommuting, had already gained footholds in society pre-pandemic. He expects a ten-year acceleration in many social and work-place trends. One positive: He sees an easing of traffic, with more people working from home, and therefore leaving their cars in their driving, lessening freeway gridlock and air pollution.

He notes that at Da Vinci, they were able to seamlessly transition to distance learning over that weekend in mid-March when the schools were mandated to shut down. He said that as technologically based schools, DaVinci was "built for" distance learning, with teachers and students well-equipped with mobile devices and digital connectivity. "We are thriving in this type of environment," he said, adding that schools that will initially do the best are the ones that quickly have adapted to the new educational realities and offer relevant educational "products."

Brann said the COVID-19 pandemic had scuttled planned summer excursions to attend a Texas Rangers baseball game and a European cruise. "Everything we planned has been crossed-out on our calendar because they have been canceled. We are rolling with it pretty well," he said.

Brann, who lives in El Segundo with wife Sari, is a USC football fan, and devoted walker, who at one point said he walked for 1,500 straight days, his streak finally being derailed because of a surgery. He has competed in three half-marathons, calling them "a really long walk."

Brann said his life philosophy comes in part from one of the lyrics that struck a chord with him from a 1965 Bob Dylan song. Dylan penned and sang, "He not busy being born is busy dying." Brann tries to follow that mantra as he continues to face life's challenges and serve his community. "I try to live my life being born," he said while noting, "people don't care how much you know until they find out how much you care." After 74 years, Brann is still "busy being born." • other tennis playing families to bring the community together and host tournaments and barbecues at our former Memorial Center Park. These families were the Turners, the Richards and the Bryans (who spawned the famous Olympians and World Champions, Mike and Bob Bryan – the two that won a gold medal in the same Olympics that basketball legend Kobe Bryant won his in 2012). Her mother also worked as a volunteer for a Torrance hospital as well as a charity kitchen in central Los Angeles for over a decade. Her father worked as the head of the Drama Department at El Segundo High School, then became a city councilmember in the early 1960s, and subsequently ran for Governor of California against Edmund G. Brown Sr. in the 1964 primary under the Democratic ticket. Both of her parents taught at the local schools for over 30-35 years during this time.

Bridget is a Southern California native and lifelong artist. She had acquired her Associates degree from El Camino College in 1973, then later her B.F.A. at the University of California Los Angeles in 1975. She also studied at the Art Center College of Design as well as the Lukits Academy of Fine Arts. For a brief time, Bridget was the Art Director at Leo Burnett Ad Agency in Chicago in 1983, but ultimately returned to her first love: painting. She did custom work for theater film, television, theme parks, commercials, and music videos. Some of the big names include ABC, NBC, CBS, Fox, KCET, Disney, Universal, Paramount, and Warner Brothers. She was even asked by Astronaut Lt. Col Kevin P. Chilton, her former classmate, to work on a commemorative painting for his first NASA shuttle mission, the maiden voyage of Endeavor.

We hope Bridget's story can bring you some inspiration to keep on finding ways to give back to our community and to continue to pursue your personal goals. We thank Bridget, her family, as well as our incredible neighbors for everything you do for our community. As always, stay safe and keep on fighting the good fight! •

Arts Stimulation is Making a Difference for the Chronologically Gifted During Pandemic

"Adding beauty in a world for others to enjoy means even more for those that are chronologically gifted, who are on the cusp of cognitive decline. And, it's our job to see if we can make a difference in that way," as noted cognitive care educator, Lauren Mahakian, believes whole-heartedly.

In response to this belief, Mahakian is spearheading her innovative Live Love Art program, which launches on July 7, 2020 in Southern California at the Mary & Joseph Retreat Center in Palos Verdes and is targeted at favorable arts intervention of cognitive decline and/or preventing its exacerbation.

This type of arts-driven approach has versions worldwide and most noted museums, hubs for the arts, have, for many years, opened their arts portals for seniors and the cognitively challenged. One most noted is at the Museum of Modern Art (MOMA), with its "Meet Me at MOMA." Mahakian's Live Love Art involves a similar philosophy in celebrating people's gifts and talents, who otherwise might feel their best days were behind them. Live Love Art informs participants to live in the moment of now. Targeted at seniors and most even, those cognitively challenged, it has been proven, that people remember better when they are immersing themselves in the arts.

Live Love Art, a program incorporating stimuli, an approach created and trademarked by Mahakian is grounded on the benefits offered by the arts; a program fully embracing painting, poetry, literature, music, movement and classic film and involving participants on all levels with the intention to foster healing and well-being.

With added stressors we are now coping with as relates to the historic pandemic and an ever-changing new world, cognition can decline and existing cognitive impairment can be exacerbated. Live Love Art is meant to provide personal arts moments to celebrate the arts and in the process of it all, just may serve to stave off further health declines. Mahakian believes, "Why not, in the middle of a crazy and chaotic world where the chronologically gifted are not at the top of the list and furthermore have been earmarked as the most vulnerable - it's time for us to offer a platform for them to celebrate who they are!"

Live Love Art is an 8-week program, meeting Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10 am - 2 pm and early registration is required due to limited enrollment. Program Features Include: Wellness Distancing of 6 feet; Lunch; Certified Dementia Specialist-led activities; Special Accommodation such as handicap accessibility; food request; incontinence, etc. are available.

To register, please call Lauren at (310) 383-1877 or at lauren@familyconnectcare.com.

cars to identify and sidestep any potentially mission-moldering hazards.

SPOC was developed at NASA's nearby Jet Propulsion Laboratory and has already proven itself to be adept at recognizing and labeling various types of terrain. This data is translated into a visual map that mission team members can refer to when determining the most prudent path for the rover. The classification algorithm is already in use but the system can benefit from further training and additional datasets. The more data present, the better equipped SPOC will be in automatically distinguishing between cohesive soil, treacherous rocks, smooth and sturdy bedrock, and perilous sand dunes. Mars is a veritable obstacle course of pitfalls for our intrepid and steadfast Curiosity.

Play a part as Citizen Scientists the world over collaborate together to collectively create the Solar System's very first public benchmark for Martian terrain classification. Your contribution will be used for neural network models to better understand Martian environments that will aid NASA in many more missions to come. Autonomous space exploration will be reliant on good datasets to recognize locations that are safe to traverse and your succor and eagle-eyes are the first steps in that very direction of developing the technology necessary for cutting edge space exploration.

So spare a few online sessions to the Curiosity Rover this summer. This little lump of cogs and gears and high-gain antennas is depending on your keen space sleuthing and vigilant finger-clickery to maneuver around the unknown horizons of Mars. Today, getting its wheels unstuck from uncooperative crags. Tomorrow, doing donuts on some distant Martian bluff. •

 Bidders: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property.
 You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. Notice To Property Owner: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public,

 as a courtesy to those not present at the sale.
 If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (877) 440-4460 or visit this Internet Web site www.mkonsultantsinc.
 com, using the file number assigned to this case 200303078. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. Date: 6/9/2020

Huber's Hiccups

That does not mean that we are all the same. We are different and face different challenges. God is much greater than any virus or riot or protest or political fight. Martin Luther King, Jr. would have pointed us to the greater love that our Savior Jesus had for us all and that we share by loving one another. Yes, change is good if it brings us closer to one another and closer to our God. Contrary to what our media wants to portray, I know a great majority of Americans still believe in these rock solid values and virtues. I look forward to the time when I can get back to writing about stupid stuff. After standing up to salute our flag and reminding others of what we fight for, we all can have a cold one and relax. God is in control. He wants us to enjoy our freedoms and to serve Him and our neighbors. God bless you, my loyal readers. God bless America!

FATHERS – FIREWORKS – FACE-MASKS – FOURTH OF JULY

It was good to celebrate fathers. Fathers are essential. My father was a pastor, so when he spoke it was like God speaking to me. Those who honor their father and mother are promised a long life. There are way too many illegal fireworks going off in Hawthorne, all June long. Every year it's the same old thing. No respect for others, take no personal responsibility. "If you can get away with it, why not?", is their mentality. Gotta remember to take a facemask if I want to go any where indoors these days in CA. It's tough to wear a mask for an hour during worship service on Sundays. It is better than Facebook Live or Zoom. The Fourth of July holiday will be different this year. I think it might mean more to me. Whenever our beliefs are challenged we are more conscience of what we have and what we would miss if we lost our rights. This country has seen a lot in its history. We have seen maybe too much in the first half of 2020. Let's hope and pray the second half will be full of peace and tranquility, I kind of doubt it will be. Look for the good, live a life of gratitude, relax and have a cold one.

Featured Pets of the Week

Provided by Hannah Collett, spcaLA

Hello friends, I go by Lemur, a 3 month old male DSH. I have the most beautiful markings, or so I am told. I hope to find a home where I get lots of love, cat treats and the occasional nap. Come see about me today! <https://spcala.com/adoptable/pet/?ss=20-03664>

Woof! I am Jacob, a handsome male 2 year old Shepherd mix. I'm looking for an owner who has had experience with large breeds like me. I would do best in a home with children 12+.

Tommy is the name. I am a male 1 month old hamster! I'm here with my brothers Chucky and Phil. Did you know that us hamsters do not have good eyesight? We are nearsighted and also color-blind! We are guided by our sense of smell. <https://spcala.com/adoptable/pet/?ss=20-03702>

Meow, meow! Jiffy is the name. I am a curious 7 year old male DSH cat who is hoping to find a loving home, where I can be the one and only. Cat naps are my area of expertise, are you in?

Happy Tails

Marsha the kitten came to spcaLA South Bay Pet Adoption Center in early May. She was underweight, infested with fleas and covered in mange. Our staff got to work right away to make sure Marsha was in tip-top shape! With lots of TLC and Lyme Dips from our medical team, Marsha came out the other side a healthy and lovely kitten. She was adopted and taken to her forever home on June 5th. •

Congratulations to Marsha and her new family.
