Lights, Action, and Photo Booth!

By Ron Sokol

You may have read in a recent column here about the excellent academies that supplement the courses available at Hawthorne, Leuzinger and Lawndale High Schools. These academies provide hands-on, real-life work experience for the students. Hence the learning is not just academic, but can indeed help prepare them for tasks outside school, including a career. One goal of the academies is to teach students excellent, practical and hands-on skills. At Leuzinger High School the best-known academy is the Culinary Careers Academy, which not only has its own café, but in fact, is profitable. There also is a terrific Multimedia Careers Academy (MCA), which focuses on art, media and entertainment-based projects. One part of the MCA – many may not yet know about -- is the photo booth. This unique option is available at a very reasonable price for all kinds of events, including weddings, Bar Mitzvahs, Quinceanera, graduation parties, and, well, wherever folks want to have some good fun.

In the past, a photo booth was more of a vending machine, or a kind of kiosk, that contained an automated, often coin-operated camera and film processor. Today the majority of photo booths are digital. You can get variations, such as with respect to the background and lighting. The booth is staffed by one or more people who take the photos, which you get right there (and later can get them all digitally).

Case in point: One of our sons was recently married. We had a nice venue, but not a huge budget. Between the music, cost of the officiant, chairs, food, drinks, parking, all that, the cake even, well, it does add up. The bride-to-be at one point suggested a photo booth might add quality to the festivities, but then decided it would just be too much expense along with everything else. “Not a big deal. That’s one thing we can do without,” she sighed.

I felt differently. And, as you know, sometimes things are just meant to be. So it is that I found Anthony Bibian through Camille Vogel and Kamala Dexter Hall, both of whom work with the Centinela Valley Union School District. This was while writing the recent column on the district’s schools and their academies.

Anthony describes himself as the “college tutor” with the MCA. He also is the go-to about the photo booth, if you might be interested, and can be reached through email at bibiana@cvuhsd.org. Given all we asked of him and his assistant, it surprised me to learn he is only a part-time employee of the district, at 20 hours a week; that is the funding the school district has for the position.

Bottom line: A nicer young person would be difficult to find. And, as it turns out, the photo booth is a fundraiser for the school.

Anthony’s supervisor is the Head of the MCA, Sean Hiller, a full-time photography and video teacher at Leuzinger. Sean is an accomplished freelance photographer who worked many years as a staff photographer for the Los Angeles News Group (including the Daily Breeze and Long Beach Press Telegram).

Our son’s wedding was a truly fun event. Thank goodness that all went well, from the wedding to the cocktails to the appetizers to the dinner to the music and back. But, if you asked me to identify my favorite, most fun part – not focus on the tear-in-the-eye

Walk with Sally: The Power and Strength of Community

By Allison Armijo

Founded on the understanding that children of those diagnosed with cancer need support too, Walk with Sally has been a staple of the South Bay community for almost twenty years. “Sometimes when a child’s parent or sibling is going through cancer, understandably so, we focus on supporting the person that is fighting for their life. And sometimes we don’t realize the subsequent impacts that are being had on the children of those loved ones that are diagnosed,” said Tash Brooks, the new CEO of Walk with Sally.

Walk with Sally was founded in 2005 by Nick Arquette, whose mom, Sally was diagnosed with cancer. Arquette’s focus in founding the nonprofit organization was on mentorship, pairing up children ages seven to seventeen with mentors to establish a support system for those impacted by a loved one’s diagnosis.

Brooks joined the company in October, but has always been involved in philanthropy. Born and raised in Australia, she used to be a dancer, where she designed a dance program for children with autism and Down syndrome. Reflecting on that time, Brooks said, “It was extremely empowering for me to be able to use my talents in service of another.” Referring to this as the “helper’s high,” Brooks aims to put community at the forefront

West Basin Announces Funding for Grass Replacement+ Program Now Available

West Basin Municipal Water District (West Basin) announced that a new round of funding for the Grass Replacement+ Program (Grass+) is now available to eligible applicants on a first-come, first-served basis.

The water-saving rebate program offers valuable incentives to be water-wise outdoors: a significant rebate of $5 for every square foot of grass removed, up to $25,000 in value; a free custom landscape design, valued at approximately $2,000; and a free, low water use tree to expand urban canopy cover. West Basin will help fund 35 Grass+ packages beginning June 21, 2023. West Basin service area residents can find more information, confirm eligibility, and get started by visiting www.westbasin.org/grass-plus.

"The West Basin Board of Directors continues to encourage water use efficiency in our communities, regardless of current water supply or drought conditions, by replacing water-intensive lawns with beautiful, climate appropriate landscapes," said West Basin Board President and Division IV Director Scott Houston. "We especially want to support our neighbors who are disproportionately affected by environmental and socioeconomic factors. The Grass+ program is specifically designed to make increased water-efficiency at home a goal that is accessible for all," said Houston.

The Grass+ program is open to residents in historically underserved neighborhoods within the West Basin service area that have been disproportionately affected by environmental pollution and other socioeconomic considerations as defined by the California Environmental Protection Agency's (CalEPA) California Communities Environmental Health Screening Tool (CalEnviroScreen 4.0).

Last year, West Basin piloted this grass replacement program and successfully distributed 20 free design packages and a number of drought-tolerant trees. This year, the program builds on West Basin's efforts to reduce potable water demand with the potential to achieve an annual water savings of approximately 3.4 million gallons.

All of West Basin's grass replacement programs encourage climate appropriate landscape transformations to make water conservation a way of life. To learn how to adopt a Super-Cali-Frugalist lifestyle, visit www.westbasin.org/conservation.

Adults Graduate Through SBWIB Second Chance YouthBuild Program

Eleven young adults were honored for earning their high school diplomas during a graduation ceremony conducted by the South Bay Workforce Investment Board (SBWIB) YouthBuild Program at the Hawthorne Memorial Center June 22nd. The YouthBuild Program enables youth ages 16-24 who didn't finish high school to have a second chance and earn their high school diploma or G.E.D.

and gain occupational skills training in construction as well as leadership development.

SBWIB Executive Director Jan Vogel provided the opening remarks at the graduation and praised the students for their perseverance in achieving their goals. He also thanked their family members and friends who were in attendance that supported them along the way and acknowledged the YouthBuild Charter

School faculty members and SBWIB staff who make the program possible. Also attending was SBWIB Board Chairman Glenn Mitchell and SBWIB Youth Development Committee member Brian Markarian, Superintendent of the Hawthorne School District.

YouthBuild Alumni Alex Keaton urged the graduates to remember and put to good use the advice and lessons the school's faculty and counselors gave them. "Seven years ago, I never imagined I could be where I am today as a fully employed and responsible person," he further noted. Alex has since successfully graduated from college and is a business employee.

The graduates also received congratulatory certificates with a number of California State Assembly and State Senate members, as well as Congresswoman Maxine Waters.

The SBWIB had been a partner with the program's founding organization for more than 30 years before merging it into the Youth Services offerings of the SBWIB in the Fall of 2018. The YouthBuild Program is made possible through a grant provided by the U.S. Department of Labor.

Hawthorne's Bridge of Hope Eases Burden for Unhoused

As of May 22, all 12 pallet homes in the City of Hawthorne's Bridge of Hope Community Housing are occupied. This community provides interim shelter for unhoused individuals in Hawthorne, with a targeted stay of 90 to 180 days.

The official Bridge of Hope groundbreaking was held on November 30, 2022, and the community's ribbon-cutting ceremony took place on Monday, April 11, just over a month before occupants filled all units. A 3800-square-foot City-owned lot at 131st St. and Simms Ave. hosts all twelve 64-square-foot homes. The city has outfitted all units with lockable doors and windows, secure ventilation, a folding bed with a custom-fit mattress, a folding desk, electricity, a wall-mounted heater, an air conditioner, a fire extinguisher, a smoke detector, a carbon monoxide detector, slip-resistant floors and storage. The community also offers a kitchen, ingredient pantry and laundry room.

"We've created a five-year plan to resolve homelessness in Hawthorne, and this was one of our key items: to create housing for those unhoused," said City Manager Vontray

Norris. "I am proud of the resources offered by Bridge of Hope and am intent on expanding our assistance to Hawthorne's unhoused community members."

When individuals move into the community housing units, they are partnered with service providers who will help prepare them for life after Bridge of Hope. These City employees will work with residents to access job training, three daily meals, housing navigation, medical care and connection to additional services offered by Hawthorne's housing and homelessness staff.

CDBG CARES Act dollars, the American Rescue Plan Act awards, Permanent Local Housing Allocation (PLHA) grants and a HOME American Rescue Plan (ARP) allocation fund the Bridge of Hope Community Housing project. This initial iteration of the project will continue for three years or until all available funds have been exhausted. #### Blue Jean is a Confident and Resonating LGBTQ+ Drama

By Morgan Rojas for Cinemacy

We're halfway through 2023 and I can confidently say that writer/director Georgia Oakley's Blue Jean has a snug place on my forthcoming list of favorite films of the year. This indie gem—winner of the Venice Film Festival's People's Choice Award and four British Independent Film Awards—is not only a confident directorial debut, but an achingly resonating drama about one woman's desperation to safeguard herself when her livelihood is threatened.

In a phenomenal lead performance by BIFA-winning actress Rosy McEwen, Blue Jean captures the life of a closeted queer woman living against the backdrop of Margaret Thatcher's conservative England. The year is 1988 and P.E. teacher Jean (McEwen) rounds up her rambunctious class of high schoolers to discuss the day's topic: fight or flight. Honing in on the fact that one doesn't decide how to react but rather this instinct is innate and unique to each of us, Jean soon faces her own fight or flight dilemma. Mounting political pressure from the right pushes a new law, Section 28, into the forefront of conversation among her colleagues, who are unaware of Jean's sexuality. The law, which is equivalent to Florida's "Don't Say Gay" bill, prohibits the "promotion of homosexuality" by local authorities, essentially intimidating all queer men and women into silence.

As the prospect of living under this proposed government regime infiltrates Jean's mind, her girlfriend, Paula (Lainey Shaw) is someone who doesn't seem too affected. With a shaved head, piercings, and a leather vest to complement her motorcycle, Paula is the definition of a woman who is not interested in anyone's opinion. This confidence can scare Jean, who finds herself downplaying their relationship when out in public or caught off guard.

Jean's hidden secret is further challenged when a new student enrolls in her class. 15-year-

By Library Assistant Mary Martes

A grizzled Vietnam veteran watches over the junkyard from high atop a teetering tower of metal, waiting for his granddaughter to get home after Homecoming. He has left behind the drink that numbed the pain, but he still sees the horror of that hellish landscape in flashbacks. In a story of family loyalty, secrets, blood, and betrayal, Eli Cranor sets this tale of Southern noir amidst the craggy countryside of the Missouri Ozarks in his sophomore novel.

Methamphetamine, murder, and the White Supremacist movement coalesce in a tiny town at the base of the mountains. Poverty reigns after the factory shut down and the only jobs available were ones no one wanted to do, resulting in an influx of cheap labor, creating vehement animosity and division. Two families, inextricably intertwined, can never forget the pain exacted by each. From the high school quarterback and Homecoming Queen to the meth cooking bible quoting white supremacists to the sheriff and the haunted veteran, it is all about how to get through each day. For some, vengeance is all there is to live for. For others it is protecting the ones they love. What justice will appease the boiling

El Camino College Will Offer a New Bachelor's Degree in Respiratory Care this Fall

This is the first baccalaureate degree program in the community college's 76-year history. Starting in fall 2023, students will be able to pursue a Bachelor of Science degree in respiratory care, designed to expand on ECC's existing two-year accredited associate degree program, which has been in place for 50 years. The college's Respiratory Care program prepares students for careers as respiratory therapists, ready to care for patients and to access opportunities for leadership, education, and case management roles. The accelerated 18-month bachelor's degree program includes 41 units and will be offered in an online format across three semesters. so much, nor even the dancing – it would be the photo booth. There were all sorts of hats, glasses, fake noses, sashes, you-name-it; parts of costumes for young and old (including my 94-year-old father-in-law no less, who is a retired Marine Colonel. Rather stern by nature, my father-in-law loved the photo booth).

The guests just had a whole bunch of fun there. The photographs and images are memorable, silly at times, and can be quite touching as well. In all of it, with the noise, commotion, people in line, having set up (which took an hour), and then over two hours at the wedding, Anthony and his assistant were kind, patient, and easy to deal with. Did I mention how affordable it was? A bargain indeed.

The photo booth today is kind of like going to a photographer who will help you be a little (or perhaps even a lot) theatrical. Who doesn't like mugging a bit, given the chance?

For years hence we will look at the many photographs that the photo booth provided, which will bring back really good memories. Probably more than anything else, the photo booth will (and already has) put big smiles on our faces. Like I said, sometimes things are just meant to be.

So then.... Quiet on the set!

rage? What will they do to protect their own?

Cranor writes with an ease of voice and an intimate knowledge of the rural existence. His characters throb with life, pain, and heartache. It's survival rather than living. Burrowing deep into his characters, we inhabit the poverty-stricken, emotional lives of these rural inhabitants. We are immersed in the struggle for their souls, the fight for power and money, against hate and violence, battling for their lives. Gripping from the first page, Cranor carefully builds the tension, reveals some shocking surprises, then unleashes violence in a cascade of bullets. This writer is one to watch.

old Lois (Lucy Halliday) is unlike the other girls, she keeps to herself and doesn't care to assimilate into the school environment. One night, at the gay nightclub Jean and her group of friends frequent often, Jean spots Lois at the bar. Terrified that Lois may out her, Jean is quick to realize that she needs to be very cautious about how she approaches Lois from here on out. It's a delicate dance between teacher and student, which culminates into a crescendo in the film's final act.

Blue Jean is a stunning and meticulously beautiful feature debut from Georgia Oakley. A debut like this feels few and far between, creating a sense of both wonderment and disbelief that such talent has been discovered. Much in the same way that Charlotte Wells' Aftersun stunned audiences with its unexpected greatness, Blue Jean deserves the same attention.

The film grain adds a layer of visual aesthetic that radiates a warm and lived-in quality. Cinematographer Victor Seguin captures a saturated moody England, playing to the shades of blue and all-over desperation of the situation. Equally as impressive as the cinematic choreography is the score by composer Chris Roe. The melodic scales he traverses throughout the gentle, ambient score make the music feel alive, like living art.

Blue Jean is a modern-day masterpiece, an astounding feat by all involved. Its entry into the queer cinema canon is a welcomed addition, and its impact will no doubt resonate with all who watch.

Walk with Sally

of everything she does, including in her new role as CEO of Walk with Sally.

"I have been in the nonprofit space for the majority of my life, and I understand that community is everything. The first thing I wanted to do was listen to the needs of the community" she said, explaining that she finds it useful to ask herself questions like, "Who is our community? Who are we serving? Are we providing the programmatic impact that we're dedicated to providing?"

"Walk with Sally 2.0" expands on Arquette's original vision for the organization by prioritizing the variety of support available to families of those going through cancer; this includes mental health resources and consultations, in addition to physical resources like wigs and clothing. "We realized, as amazing and healing it is for a child to spend time with a mentor and build that connection, they may come home with complete food insecurity and housing instability," Brooks explained.

The majority of families involved in the program, Brooks explained, live below the poverty line. Thus, her team decided to focus their efforts on improving the financial empowerment program, even opening a shop in the office where children and families can come in to receive food, clothing, homeware items, and mental health consultations with licensed therapists. Accessibility, Brooks explained, is equally as important. She mentioned that for children who live too far away or have parents who are unable to take them in-office, Walk with Sally offers virtual therapy appointments and delivery service for home items, making resources available for those unable to physically come into office.

In addition to physical and emotional support, Brooks also wanted to look at what the organization was doing to invest in the future of children in the program. "We looked at the data and realized there was a bigger issue here that we weren't looking at. We realized that a lot of teens who are in the midst of grieving their parent or are fearing for the loss of their parent, it's really hard to invest in a future that might mean that you no longer have your parent or you may have to go into foster care because your parent is a single mom or single dad," she explained.

In response, Walk with Sally developed a new scholarship initiative launched this month, on June 6th. The program is a six-week self-esteem, growth mindset workshop facilitated by Wendy Lewis, a licensed marriage and family therapist who specializes in teen grief. "The workshop is really going to empower our teens to use the tools to support their mental health in times of grief and crisis," Brooks said. The program will culminate in a graduation ceremony where children will be connected with mentors in their field of interest who will share stories of how they overcame hardships in their own lives. Additionally, participating children will also take part in a quick-pitch competition, where they will present their goals and visions for the future to the community; the scholarships will be funded based on these pitches.

Only last year, the program was struggling to get students to apply, making this year an exciting and promising step forward in the future of Walk with Sally and the scholarship program, more specifically. "We have had an overwhelming response," Brooks explained,

"Fifteen kids applied, and some are even driving hours just to come in."

Brooks also mentioned the upcoming White Light White Night, which is Walk with Sally's largest, most critical fundraiser since the organization's inception. "We want the community to come together and celebrate life," Brooks said, "We just want to unite everybody." The event will be held in El Segundo on August 19th. The goal is to raise awareness for the organization's goals to support those affected by cancer and their loved ones and raise funds so they can reach as many people as possible.

"We are so inspired by the impact we're making," Brooks explained. She highlighted one moment recently when her team was able to help a single mom going through chemotherapy who didn't know how she would feed her son while she was out of work, recovering from the treatment. "We were able to provide six weeks-worth of prepared meals and groceries," Brooks explained, "which will be a big help to the mom's mental health too; she can worry less about how she'll feed her son and focus more on getting better."

Helping people like the mother and her son Brooks mentioned is central to Walk with Sally's mission. The White Light White Night fundraiser is a way for the organization to not only strengthen current programs, but also expand to develop new approaches to helping families with loved ones diagnosed with cancer.

But above all, Brooks hopes that the fundraiser can serve as an opportunity for people to not only uplift and support their community, but also learn more about themselves in the process. "Life is extremely heartbreaking and extremely inspiring. And what I know for sure is we are not supposed to go through life's trials alone. We are stronger together; we are stronger as a community. And Walk with Sally is that. It is a community that unites people to uplift those going through unimaginable trials," she said. •
