Gilda Dyckman Cracks Down on Catalytic Converter Theft

By Kiersten Vannest

During the pandemic, Los Angeles County reported a 400% increase in the theft of catalytic converters. All across Facebook, Next-door, the Citizen app, and local reports, stories of catalytic converter theft remain one of the top stories. So what is a catalytic converter exactly, why is it stolen, and how do they steal it? Gilda Dyckman explains what is happening and how you can prevent it.

To protect your vehicle from catalytic converter theft, Dyckman and her shop, Cars Automotive & Muffler, work with the El Segundo Police Department and other police departments in the South Bay to etch identifiers onto converters, as well as place protective cages and shields to deter thieves.

Every gas-powered car since 1975 has a catalytic converter. Located in the exhaust system, the catalytic converter serves to filter out the worst pollutants from the car before they enter into the air out the tailpipe. It looks like a little metal box on the bottom of the car, with two pipes coming out of it. In one pipe, harmful gases like nitrogen oxide and carbon monoxide from the engine get oxygen added or removed so that safer gases like nitrogen, oxygen, and carbon dioxide come out into the air.

"It's the metal that's in the catalytic converter," she explains, "the rhodium and the palladium. Rhodium is like $22,000 an ounce." As cars become more environmentally friendly and sustainable, the search for nonreactive metals to filter out pollutants has reached an all-time high. Rhodium and palladium do the job very well.

As we recover from the pandemic, the market for cars has started to pick up again, which means the demand for these metals has skyrocketed, driving up their price and value. One catalytic converter can cost around $2000 to replace and can be sold for scrap on the black market for a few hundred dollars, depending on the converter and the metal inside.

Hybrid cars like Priuses are targeted most frequently, because they contain higher levels of metal and because these cars also run on electricity, meaning the converter is used less.

Because there are so many drivers in California, and especially in LA County, the state requires correct catalytic converters on every car to pass smog check inspections. In some states, any aftermarket catalytic converter can be used for any engine in case of a replacement, but in states with high driving populations like California and New York, the converter must match the executive order number or engine family of the car. If a replaced catalytic converter does not match or is not on a list of acceptable aftermarket options, the car will not pass a smog test, filed under "emissions tamper."

This means, for some cars like the Prius, the converter must be replaced by the manufacturer in the absence of an aftermarket option. Dyckman cites an example of Hondas from 2005-2007, from which converters were being stolen faster than the manufacturer could replace them, so California had to grant an extension on cars that were on a waiting list for their new part.

El Segundo holds events like the recent "Etch and Catch," where residents can get their catalytic converters engraved for free. This can also be done any time, free of cost, at Dyckman's shop. As she explains, if someone is pulled over and found to have a catalytic converter in their trunk, there is currently no way for police to track if it belongs to the driver or not. However, if the converter has a VIN number or other identification tag etched into it, the police can more easily track the part.

For a price, shields, and cages can also be placed over converters to make it more difficult to steal. According to Dyckman, it takes about sixty seconds to steal a catalytic

Visual Poetry Lights up Los Angeles in Summertime

By Morgan Rojas for Cinemacy

When Amanda Gorman took the stage in January at the 2021 Presidential Inauguration, two things happened. One, she sparked a meteoric rise of her own accord, landing nationwide notoriety, book deals, and an IMG modeling contract. She also—maybe more importantly—normalized and encouraged younger generations to explore spoken word poetry for themselves, proving that age is not a factor when it comes to self-expression.

In his latest film, director Carlos López Estrada (Blindspotting, Raya and the Last Dragon) shows how the streets of Los Angeles are filled with inspirational youth who are ready to speak their truth in the spoken-word musical, Summertime. Like an indie version of In the Heights for millennials (complete with mixed races and various skin tones!), Summertime is a feel-good film full of literal most heart-wrenching scene comes in the form of a formally insecure woman finally standing up for herself to a manipulative ex-boyfriend.

I believe the success of Summertime comes from untraditional factors. The overall narrative and acting is fairly good, not outstanding, but what makes this film unforgettable is the outpouring of pure visual poetry (which outweighs any nitpicky criticism). Dave Harris, Mila Cuda, Olympia Miccio, Tyris Winter, Amaya Blankenship, Bene't Benton, Hanna Harris, Marco Bizio, Raul Herrera, Bryce Banks, Marquesha Babers, Walter Finnie Jr., Anna Osuna, Zach Perlmutter, Jason Alvarez, Austin Antoine, Maia Mayor, Madysen Park, Xochitl Morales, Paolina Acuña-González, Marcus James, Gordon IP, Cyrus Roberts, Pathum Madigapola, Nia Lewis, Daniel McKinley, Khama Iwuanyanwu, and Lukas Lane: job well done. visual poetry and promising artists of tomorrow.

The story of how Summertime came to be is just as impressive as the film itself. Together with López Estrada and Executive Producer Kelly Marie Tran, twenty seven youth poets workshopped their material over the course of one Summer in Los Angeles. The result is this feature film, a loose narrative structure comprised of intersecting stories from the poets themselves, all of whom make their feature film debut as co-writers and stars.

Depending on the scene (and therefore the dialogue), Summertime is a mix of emotional, comedic, and nostalgic instances that reflect the authenticity of the poets. One scene humorously calls out the prices at trendy Los Angeles eateries, and how a piece of avocado toast costs the same as basic livelihood necessities for lower income communities. Another scene shows an empowered queer woman giving a fierce monologue as she stands up for another same sex couple on a metro bus. Perhaps the

Stillness is the Key by Ryan Holiday

By Desiree De La Cruz-Miller, Library Assistant

Ryan Holiday is one of my favorite present day thinkers. He is the author of bestsellers The Obstacle is the Way and Ego is the Enemy, each pulling from the writings of stoic philosophers Seneca, Marcus Aurelius, Epictetus, and others. Now with his latest, Stillness is the Key, he once again presents a variety of stoic philosopher's notions and connects the wisdom of these philosopher's, through the pursuit of reason, to today's times. Ryan Holiday suggests that Next, the Spirit, he suggests getting to the point of "Enough." He feels that to experience stillness it is important to feel that you are good with where you are in life and with what you have. As individuals we tend to want more and are never satisfied. He feels that when we reach the point of being content and feeling that it is enough we will have peace and feel secure in ourselves.

Lastly, the Body, he suggests we "Take a Walk." He finds that walking is cleansing. We tend to think when we walk, and some of the greatest thinkers came up with their greatest insights and ideas when they went for a stroll. Men like Martin Luther King Jr., Ernest Hemingway and Ulysses S. Grant all walked to think; they experienced clarity when they walked. Ryan suggests that when we walk we do so in a "repetitive, ritualized motion"; we walk for exercise and often meditate during, which brings a stillness within.

Ryan Holiday offers many more ideas to achieve stillness which are a good guide if you are looking to find peace in your life. You will find this book in the philosophy section in of our library. Stillness is the Key by Ryan Holiday when we are able to live in stillness and find inner peace, then we can find happiness and be our best selves.

Ryan separates the book into three parts; Mind, Spirit and Body. For mind, Ryan makes suggestions such as "Limiting our Inputs." He suggests asking ourselves if the information we are taking in is necessary. At times our brains get overloaded with so much information coming at us on a daily basis, that we may feel as if we are drowning, which brings unneeded stress. By limiting the information we take in it can help reduce brain overload.

Huber's Hiccups

News for the City of Good Neighbors from an Old Guy named Norb Huber

CLOSE CALLS AND YOUR TIME

I experienced one of those scary moments last Saturday. I was playing in our men's club golf event and hit a nice drive but slightly into the trees on the 16th hole. My playing partners and I were looking for my golf ball when we heard a loud "fore" coming from the tee on the previous hole. Instinctively I threw my hands up to cover my head and it's a good thing I did because within a second a screaming yellow golf ball hit my hands and glanced off bouncing and rolling another 20 yards. Except for a bruise on my middle finger, I came out unharmed physically, but a little frayed emotionally. The man who hit the wayward drive came rushing over in his golf cart to apologize and to see if I was okay. I thanked him for yelling and told him I knew of a good lawyer and that he should expect papers to be served within the coming week. Only joking, it's not like I have never misdirected a drive. He did offer to buy me a cold one in the club house after the round, but being the weakling that I am having consumed one already, I declined his offer. Immediately after being hit in the hand, I started thinking, what if? What if I had not thrown up my hands? What if the screaming ball would have hit the back of my head? What if I was knocked crazier than I am already? What if I couldn't write this junk any longer? What if my time had come? We all have at one time or another in our lives experienced a "near death" moment. What if? Most of us would say that we were lucky. Luck was on my side last Saturday. Being a believer, someone of faith, I believe that God did not want to call me home at age 66. One of those dumb golf jokes involves a golfer who is told that the good news is that there will be golf in heaven, the bad news is that he has a tee time up at a heavenly course the next morning at 7 a.m. No one knows when his or her time will be up. I believe that God isn't done using me down here yet. He just might want me around for a few more years so that I can continue to spew out my swirling, summation of smoldering smoke signals of all sorts of bull crap, (I can't use that other "s" word in a family-friendly blog post that promotes beer drinking and is pro-God, pro-life, pro-USA, pro-family, pro-gun, and pro-conservative politically.) Whenever your life passes quickly in front of you, we start thinking about how we all are going to die. It doesn't matter how old we are, how old we look, how old we feel. Someone asked me recently how I was married to a lady that looks 30 years younger than me. I told him that that younger looking lady was my daughter. He believed me. So, either my ol' lady looks really young or I look rather old. Loyal readers, friends, neighbors, and/or all of you folk who read this junk, live life knowing full well that some day our time will be up. Value each day. Why worry? None of this stuff is going to matter when we are six feet under or sitting on a shelf. Have a cold one, relax and trust that God is not done with you quite yet. Just remember when someone yells "fore", be quick to duck, cover and roll!

converter, and more and more thefts are happening in broad daylight. Because of this, it's also important to know what catalytic converter theft looks like, so it can be caught more easily by neighbors and witnesses.

"What you're probably going to see is one or a few people, and they're usually going to be in an unmarked car with no license plate," she explains. She also says to watch out for sounds of a saw cutting metal, as typically portable saws are used to get the part out quickly. Often, she says, the process is tag teamed, with one member jacking up the car or waiting in the getaway car while the other works underneath the car to get the stolen part. Knowing what to look for, listen for, and report, neighbors, can help each other stop a crime in progress.

Manufacturers have recognized the black market boom of rhodium and palladium from their parts and have begun to attach catalytic converters to the engine, making it nearly impossible to steal without taking the entire car apart. However, with over two million automobiles currently registered in LA County, the risk remains high. If you want to get your converter etched, reach out to ESPD for more resources, or visit Dyckman's shop in Redondo Beach to get a free engraving. •

Your Neighborhood Therapist

Dear Neighborhood Therapist,

I am happily engaged, but as the wedding date gets closer I find myself thinking about a relationship from a few years ago. It was a very good relationship for a long time (we were together longer than my fiancée and I have been), and we had discussed getting married. I was close to buying a ring. It was very different from my current relationship. Now I find myself thinking about all of the ways that my former relationship was satisfying that my current one is not, and while I am definitely happy to be marrying my fiancée, I worry. How can I stop my past relationship from affecting my marriage?

– Worried About the Future, El Segundo

Dear Worried,

Your relationships with your parents, relatives, friends, and the place you grew up affect who you are, and who you are affects your marriage. It doesn't make sense that past romantic relationships would somehow play no role, either. This is the good news! In many ways, your "baggage" is baked in already: your past relationships are already affecting the current one. (The same goes for your fiancée and her life, of course.)

But I suspect that you'd like to know if it is possible not to feel the very thing you happen to be feeling. I wish I could fix that. The pang of regret, the path not taken, the things you miss about another person that you will never have again... these are things that most reflective people think about.

What you can do is try to figure out - as best you can, nobody gets it perfect - how your past relationships have affected you, and thus how they affect your marriage. The reason for doing this is so that you can account for these effects and act accordingly. Just as an example, you may discover that it's harder for you to give affection than you want it to be. Now that you know that, what do you do?

No, that's not so easy to figure out. You might need some help. But it's a good start if you take a look specifically at what you are giving up by getting married, and then think specifically about why you hope that marriage will make giving up those things worth it. What are the trade-offs?

Next, give yourself a break: we all think about what might have been, and the lives we might have led under different circumstances. Of course you may wonder what your life would have been like if you had married someone else. You may even wish you had sometimes, especially when things that you used to enjoy may not be as accessible as they once were.

You know you will have to make sacrifices, and yet you have still decided to give marriage a try. This suggests to me that you have a sense that you can do this, and that you think it's worth it. And that's the key. What I am about to say doesn't mean you should never work to make your relationship better, and it's not very romantic, but I think it's helpful to consider on those days when we think the grass is greener: a marriage doesn't have to be perfect, or even great. It just has to be, for you, better than the alternative on more days than not.

PETSPETS Pets PETSPETS

Purrrfect Companions

Maple

Many of the teenage and adult cats we rescue have been abandoned, neglected, abused, or dumped at the shelter and find themselves in a terrifying, lonely new world. They have withstood hunger, pain, illness and fear to overcome the odds and survive. They are supremely deserving and appreciative of a second chance at life. Waiting for adoption are cats and kittens of every age, color and personality. When you adopt, you save a life... and in turn enrich your own.

Maple once had a home of her own but was left behind when her family bought a fancy home and decided that they did not want her anymore. After they moved, a neighbor found poor Maple hiding in the shed and called Kitten Rescue for help. This sweet, mellow girl is fine with other cats, but really just wants to chill with her human. If you want to bypass all that kitten craziness and just want a snuggle pal, Maple is your girl. She does not need a big house, just a person (or people) with a big heart, who will never let her down again.

Portia is a special, darling creature who is shy, but shows her gregarious side once she is comfortable with you. This special girl likes to hide, but when she emerges, seeks pets and attention. Portia has a deep gray coat and captivating green eyes. She also has the most beautiful soprano mew but does not always show off her singing skills. Portia is looking for a home with a patient, loving family that will let her blossom on her own time.

Garfield is a very affectionate young kitten and would love to nap right next to you. He is always ready for a belly rub and a cuddle. As most active little boys, he enjoys playing with his toys. True to his namesake, Garfield has a great appetite and may attempt (without much covering or pretense) to sneak a nibble of your food.

Pinky is the small but mighty adventurer of the family. Pinky has never met a toy she did not love. She will also race around playing until she curls up by your side ready for lots of petting and love. Pinky has the loudest purr and loves to follow her humans around, curious to find the next adventure that will come her way. Her favorite place in the house will be perched on your shoulder. Pinky is bonded with her calm and gentle sister, Inky.

Inky is a little lap cat in training, with silky, soft fur. She is calm and gentle, always ready to greet you with a purr and a leg rub. Inky has a playful side too! As much as she loves your lap, she cannot resist a cardboard box or a catnip mouse. She loves attention from her foster family is bonded with her sister, Pinky. Adopt Inky and Pinky together, and you will have the perfect pair.

Shimmer is named after a dragon princess and with good reason. She is regal, majestic, confident, kind, and generous! Shimmer loves to be held and pampered like a proper princess. She will flit about, playing, romping, and making sure all her dragon siblings stay on their best behavior. Shimmer needs to be adopted with one of her siblings, Figment, Norbert, or Eustace, or into a household with another young/active cat.

These cats and kittens are available for adoption through Kitten Rescue, one of the largest cat rescue groups in Southern California. All our kitties are spayed/neutered, microchipped, tested for FeLV and FIV, dewormed and current on their vaccinations. For additional information and to see these or our other kittens and cats, please check our website www.kittenrescue.org.

Pinky

Our Adoption Center is temporarily closed. In the meantime, we are still conducting contactless adoptions using all the online tools at our disposal. To virtually browse our adoptable cats, please visit our Adoption Gallery where you can find photos and profiles of all the cats and kittens we have up for adoption from our network of foster homes and from the Sanctuary. At the end of each cat's profile is a link to the email address of the foster parent or adoption counselor, and you may reach out directly with questions or to arrange a virtual meeting.

The donations and support we receive from individuals like you, who share our love and commitment to helping cats and kittens in

Portia

Inky

Los Angeles, are the sole reason we are able to do what we do. We are grateful for your financial help. By making even a small donation today, you can touch the lives of the many deserving, wonderful animals in our care. There are many ways you can donate and help, and every dollar means so much. Kitten Rescue is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit. Your tax-deductible donations for the rescue and care of our cats and kittens can be made through our website or by sending a check payable to Kitten Rescue, 3519 Casitas Ave., Los Angeles, CA 90039.
